Leaf rust poses a serious threat

The risk of significant yield losses from leaf rust and other foliar diseases has increased dramatically this past week. This alert comes from K-State Extension Wheat Plant Pathologist Erick DeWolf. Leaf rust was discovered in commercial fields and variety demonstration plots in Sumner County on April 24th. The leaf rust was present on the F-1 and F-2 leaves (the two leaves just below the flag leaf), with an incidence of less than 10 percent and severity less than 2 percent, in both Jagger and Jagalene.

Leaf rust has also been observed on Jagalene and Jagger in commercial fields and variety evaluations in northern Oklahoma. The disease was slightly more advanced in Oklahoma. Leaf rust was observed at trace levels on Overley near Stillwater, but the disease has not vet been detected on Overley in Kansas. Do not be fooled by this slight delay in the arrival leaf rust races that can overcome the type of resistance in Overley. Overley is very susceptible to certain races of leaf rust, and this variety will likely become diseased soon. Resistance in Fuller, Santa Fe, and Postrock appears to be holding.

Powdery mildew has also increased significantly during this past week. Jagalene, Overley. Jagger, and Postrock are all susceptible to powdery mildew. The severity of powdery mildew was greater than 25 percent. on the F-1 leaves in commercial fields of Jagalene and Overley in Sumner County. These levels of mildew can also result in significant yield losses.

The growth stages of wheat in the southern tier of counties ranges from jointing to early stages of heading, depending on the planting date last fall. The current presence of even low levels of leaf rust and severe powdery mildew suggests that potential for yield loss is significant. Yield losses of greater than 35 percent can be expected if the leaf rust and powdery mildew move onto the flag leaves of susceptible varieties prior to flowering.

Wheat fields in Southcentral and Southeast Kansas should be checked for symptoms of disease and to verify growth stage as soon as possible. Wheat in the central and northcentral districts of Kansas will be at critical growth stages within two weeks. The most effective timing for fungicide applications is between flag leaf emergence and heading. It is important not to apply the fungicide too

The yield response for foliar fungicides in Kansas will typically fall between 4 and 13 percent with the yield average response of 10 percent. Yield responses can be greater than 20 percent in fields where leaf rust arrives prior to flowerawmakers struggle to write veto-proof farm bill

Struggling to complete a farm bill that can survive a presidential veto, U.S. lawmakers have sent the White House a sixth extension of farm and nutrition programs.

Lawmakers had hoped to finish the legislation this week so a final version could be debated on the House and Senate floor next week. But following a meeting that lasted until early Friday morning, some key issues, including the size of payments to wealthy solved.

Bush, who's threatening to veto the legislation, has indicated he is not happy with the bill's progress, saying earlier this week that it's "bloated" with farmer subsi-

The law originally expired in September. The extension gives Congress two more weeks, until May 16, to finish the legislation.

Negotiators reached a tentative agreement last week on how to pay for the most $300 billion over five years, but are still resolving the policy, including how much would be paid to farmers in a time of record crop

The bill's negotiators have tried to appease Bush in the last few days, agreeing on stricter limits for those government payments. That agreement would still allow growers who earn up to $950,000 annually in farm far from the $200,000 annual income cap the Bush administration originally suggested.

Department of Agricul-Deputy Secretary Charles Conner said late Thursday night that the president wants to sign a farm bill that meets his criteria.

"If sent to him without meeting his criteria, he would be forced to veto the bill," Conner said. "We enduce a bill which will gain his signature by reducing the cost and implementing real reform."

Also frustrated with the bill is Republican presidential candidate Senator John McCain who says it's loaded with "pork-barrel projects."

"I do not support it. I would veto it," he told voters in Iowa, the heart of farm country where the government subsidies are widely

Farm-state lawmakers have said they don't have the votes for more drastic cutbacks, mostly due to opposition from Southerners who represent cotton and rice farms, which are more expensive to run.

culture Committee's top Republican, met Thursday with Bush to urge him to support the legislation. A spokeswoman said the meeting gave Chambliss "the opportunity to outline significant reforms" in the negotiators' current proposal.

White House spokesman Scott Stanzel said the meeting was private and would not detail Bush's reaction. He said the president is expected to sign the two-week extension.

Despite the earlier agreement, North Dakota Senator Kent Conrad said the issue of the size of government subsidies was not yet settled. He said the cuts already made would constitute considerable cutbacks from current law, which allows all farmers who make up to $2.5 million (euro1.61 million) to collect payments.

"We are trying to be responsive to the president's concerns," Conrad said.

Farm groups are not the only interests lobbying for the bill. Anti-hunger organizations are also pushing Congress to finish the legislation, as around two-thirds of the bill's cost would pay for food stamps and other nutrition programs. The legislation includes a more than $10 billion boost for nutri-

Rising food costs have added to that urgency.

Paragon Perspectives

A commodity analysis by Ryan Broxterman

Wet fields continue to cause alarm in the Corn Belt, as planting progress is well behind where it should be. The current trade estimate shows that 30 percent of US corn crop is planted. This is in comparison to 10%last week and a 10 year average of 65%. On May 9th USDA will release their estimate for 2008/09 US corn supply and demand. They could show a below trend yield due to late planting, which could drop the 08/09 carryout dangerously low.

Thoughts: Last Tuesday, the corn market made new all time contract highs when the new crop December contract pushed as high as $6.41 and then quickly retreated below the old contract high. The reason I point this out is that the corn market has had multiple fundamental reasons to push into new contracts highs and to the $6.50-$7.00 area, yet it has failed to do so. I feel one of the main causes of us not pushing into new contract highs is the recent food vs. fuel debate. This debate continues to be plastered all over the news. With riots in Africa going on because of a lack of food many Americans are beginning to criticize some government Agriculture policy. This press coverage is putting pressure on Washington to look at current policy of subsidizing ethanol and leaving 35 mil acres idle in the CRP program. I fear government policy may be our biggest concern for downside in corn in the upcoming year.

Wheat Friday, Informa estimated 2008 US winter wheat production near 1747 million bushels vs. 1516 last vear. This is in line with what most estimates show. On May 9, USDA will issue its first estimate of 2008/09 US wheat supply and demand. Most analysts estimate production around 2300-2400 million bushels vs 2067 this past year. This suggests the carryout increasing to near 450-500 million bushels; around double the 242 million bushel carryout we will have this year. This week kicks off the annual Kansas Crop Tour which will scout the wheat across Kansas and Oklahoma and give an estimate of how large they feel the crop is. Most years their estimate is very close to USDA May estimate.

> Thoughts: The wheat market has fallen hard over the past few weeks. Last week the market seemed to find a near term bottom and stabilized in the $8.50 area basis July Kansas City. Technically, the market look due for a bounce; however, fundamentally one could argue against much of a bounce going into harvest. If the market makes a rebound back to the $9.00 area we will likely look to increase new crop sales.

Soybeans

The strike in Argentina continues to gain a lot of press. The current talk is that famers will likely resume the strike but not create blockades as they did during the first strike. This potential recommencement of the strike has traders wary. A key meeting is scheduled to take place Tuesday when farmers and the government are set to talk about the tax of soybeans. The President of Argentina wants farmers to plant more crops to be used domestically and help drive down food prices, versus growing soybeans for export. Traders also continue to eye weather across the Corn Belt as farmers behind on their field work for corn will tend to drift toward soybeans on their acreage.

Thoughts: Soybeans seem to be having a hard time finding direction over the past couple of weeks. We have had a lot of sideways choppy trading. The market seems to be sitting back waiting for the situation in Argentina and the corn crop to get in the ground before it is going to make a clear move on one way or the

EARLEY TRACTOR CASE III

Cameron, MO

S&S Distributors is marketing the Limbhog, a new tree trimming attachment that attaches directly to the front end loader of your tractor, skid loader or backhoe. This commercial grade chainsaw attaches easily to a receiver on the side of your front end loader and works off the tractor's auxiliary hydraulics. This unit comes with an 8 foot mast that can reach limbs 18 to 20 ft. when attached to an average loader bucket. It reduces the risk of injury by eliminating the use of ladders, ropes and standing in the bucket of your tractor with chainsaw in hand. Limbs fall in front of the loader while you sit in the safety and comfort of your tractor seat. The Limbhog runs at 5,000 RPM and cuts 5 inch diameter limbs in just over one second. The Limbhog is equipment with a self-oiling system that oils directly off your hydraulic lines. It weights only 68 lbs. making it easily attached and operated by one person.

other. With the recent upturn in the dollar we feel all commodities could suffer setbacks. With this in mind we feel selling new crop beans on a rally back to the $13.00 level as a good decision.

Cattle

Traders continue to be optimistic about live cattle futures, as differed live cattle continue to hold a large premium to cash. Every live cattle futures contract beyond October is holding over a 10 dollar premium to the cash. This may offer some future resistance. As the price of cash cattle rises, the futures won't necessarily rise with it because it is already holding such a premium to cash. So far this hasn't stopped new buying; however it is probably limiting it. One of the bearish concerns has been the heavy slaughter weights. Many felt that as the price of corn went higher, cattle feeders would send cattle to the packer at lighter and lighter weights. However, this hasn't seemed to be the case. This illustrates that the packer has more control over slaughter weights than we give them credit for. If beef doesn't move with the large amount of supply currently hitting the shelf, beef and cattle prices could fall significantly.
