

Kansas farm income more than doubled in 2007

WICHITA (AP) — Bolstered by good fall crops and soaring commodity prices, Kansas farm families saw their income more than double in 2007, a new report shows.

The average net farm income in Kansas last year was $115,035, according to the Kansas Farm Management Association at Kansas State University. That compared with a statewide average of $46,593 the previous year.

The report was compiled from 1,453 Kansas farms that participate in the KFMA program, one of the nation's largest with 20 economists working with farming operations.

The average value of farm production among its members statewide last year was pegged at $407,787, with average farm expenses of $292,752. The average government payment per farm was $24,000.

"I knew western Kansas was going to be pretty high, but I was surprised by how high it was. Things clicked — particularly in northwest Kansas," said Michael Lange-meier, a Kansas State University professor involved with the project.

Farmers in northwest Kansas made the most money as they harvested a bountiful winter wheat crop followed by good fall crops at a time of high commodity prices. Their average net farm income was $233,000 in northwest Kansas — nearly four times the previous year's income for the area. Among the top 25 percent of farms in that region, net income averaged as high as $589,408.

Farm families in north-central and south-central Kansas had the lowest net incomes in the state. But even in these regions net incomes were far higher than usual as crop insurance coupled with good fall harvests of corn and sorghum helped offset losses from a late spring freeze and harvest rains that plagued the 2007 winter wheat crop.

"South-central and southeast Kansas had a very large percent of producers who had crop insurance," Lange-meier said. "It doesn't make up for all the losses, but it did help."

North-central Kansas, where the wheat crop was especially hard hit by the late spring frost, saw net average farm income of $81,288. Incomes ranged from averages of $213,291 for the region's top 25 percent of farms to losses of $14,442 for farms at its bottom 25 percent. The five-year average for the region is $53,655.

Among other areas:

South-central Kansas net farm income averaged $88,849.

In southwest Kansas, average net farm income was $108,397.

Northeast Kansas posted average net farm income of $114,118.

It was very evident that farmers last year were taking advantage of the good income year to buy machinery and land, Langemeier said.

The good times did not affect family living expenses much, however. Kansas farm families in 2007 used $50,261 for living expenses, up from $45,752 the previous year. The added farm income went mostly to replace machinery, make principle payments and buy assets, he said.

Farm income also varied widely depending on whether producers were growing crops or raising livestock. The best incomes were posted by irrigated crop operations where the average was $280,585. But Kansas ranching operations with cow herds had average net income of $23,633.

Wheat tour gives optimistic prediction for 2008 crop

The final estimate for the 2008 hard red winter wheat tour sponsored by the Wheat Quality Council was announced at the Kansas City Board of Trade last Thursday. The final participant estimate for the three-day tour average was a yield of 43.3 bushels per acre, 2.3 bushels higher than the 2007 estimate of 41.0 bushels per acre.

Participants in the tour made individual estimates on the total size of the crop, with the weighted average at 379.11 million bushels. Last year's final estimate for the tour was 392.74 million bushels. Crop scouts on the tour spent Tuesday, Wednesday and today surveying Kansas, usually the top U.S. wheat producing state, trying to assess the production potential of hard red winter wheat for this year.

On the first day of the tour, groups left Manhattan and traveled different routes to Colby. The results were: Crop quality looked good, with most participants commenting on a lack of disease pressure this year. There were some instances of powdery mildew, tan spotting, mustard and wheat streak mosaic. One of the most common comments was the disparity in size between the fields that were planted the first of October and the ones that were planted toward the end of October. Jim Shroyer, an Agronomist with Kansas State University, told the group that historically, yields are high with a later crop but it will run the risk of the weather getting hot and dry and half of the tillers will be gone.

On the second day of the tour, groups left Colby and traveled different routes to Wichita. The results were: Overall the wheat was good in observation, with few diseases.

It was observed by crop participants that the wheat seen on the third day (Western to Central Kansas) looked good overall with only very minor disease or weed pressure. There were some fields with thin stands. It was very wet in south central Kansas. Estimates for day three were at 43.3 bushels per acre, up from 32.4 bushels per acre last year for the third day.

Emphasis was placed on the fact that this is what the current crop looks like at this given point in time. Weather is a major factor in the outcome of this year's crop.

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crofts

I was very curious to see how the USDA was going to handle new crop corn supply and demand numbers in the May report and I certainly wasn't disappointed in their creativity. First, old crop ethanol usage was cut by 100 million bushels in spite of record high energy prices and ethanol futures reaching $2.60. That increased old crop ending stocks by 100 million. For the new crop estimates we are starting with a yield of 153.9, which is aggressive considering the planting progress. Feed usage was cut by 850 million bushels from the previous year and exports were cut by 400 million. In the end, new crop ending stocks came in at 763 million, the tightest since the 95-96 crop year and the second tightest since the 75-76 crop year.

The December corn reached my objective of $6.50, but the supply and demand numbers are so supportive that I don't think we are going to see a major pull back now. There is a lot of uncertainty right now due to the slow planting progress and I think you have to look to buy weakness until we are more sure of what final crop size will be.

The wheat numbers weren't particularly surprising. Production was up a little more than expected with all winter wheat at 1.778 billion and HRW at 1.011 billion. New crop ending stocks came in at 483 million, which is up from the old crop, but we are far from being out of the woods as far as tight supplies goes. The Wheat Quality Council tour estimated Kansas wheat production at 379 million and USDA was at 357.2. Those estimates suggest we will have a good, but certainly not great, wheat crop this year.

The wheat market is still range bound. It is hard for the wheat to have much strength heading into harvest and it is unlikely that we see it this year. However, it is beginning to look like we can have a significant post harvest rally. I like using put options for protection and maintaining control of the cash grain.

New crop soybean ending stocks came in lower than expected at 185 million. That is up from the old crop estimate of 145 million and gives us absolutely no room for a weather problem this summer. Losing just one bushel per acre puts us dangerously close to 100 million bushels of ending stocks. The USDA raised the old crop export estimate by 15 million and may have to again, which will further cut stocks.

We had a very strong week in the cattle market. We had cash cattle trading at $94.50 and choice beef above $156.00. Every live cattle contract except the June made a new contract high and the June gained nearly $2.50. The charts look bullish, beef and pork demand looks bullish, and the packers want cattle. Things look good right now.

Looking ahead I think we will at least see a test of the contract highs in the June

LC. The deferred LC futures should see a test of the $110 level, which may provide some technical resistance. The strength in the live cattle should move the feeder cattle higher regardless of what happens in the corn market.

Preparations help to aid in storm survival

Weather forecasting and warning systems have improved significantly since a tornado roared through Udall, May 25, 1955, killing 80, including many who were unaware that a deadly storm approached, said Kansas State University professor Mike Bradshaw.

Bradshaw, who is retiring this year after more than 30 years as the K-State Research and Extension health and safety specialist, urges preparation prior to storm season.

"Safety steps need not be time-consuming or expensive," said Bradshaw, who suggests covering the basics:

Look around your home or apartment and decide where you can — or should — go in case of a severe storm, fire, flood, power outage or other emergency.

Discuss — and decide — where to meet, if storm sirens should sound. Include in the discussion what to do if children are on their way home from school or at a friend's house or if parents are on the way home from work. While such family discussions are important, singles and others who live alone also should work out a system with friends and neighbors to account for each other, if a storm should strike.

Invest in a battery-operated radio and flashlight, and an extra set of batteries.

Put together a three-day emergency kit with enough supplies for each person in your household: allow 1 gallon of water per person per day; nonperishable food such as canned, cooked meats or fish, canned vegetables, canned or dried fruits, nonfat dried milk, and canned or bottled fruit and vegetable juices, crackers and cereal bars. Rotate emergency supplies to prevent foods from becoming outdated, and remember to include a manual can opener, utensils, tableware, paper plates, napkins, towels and toilet paper.

First-aid kit.

Prescription medications for 72 hours.

Extra set of eye glasses, perhaps the pair most recently replaced.

Blankets, sleeping bags and a tent (if the family happens to have one).

Change of clothes for each person, including shoes or boots, socks, coat, jacket or rain poncho.

Coffee can or other resealable metal container with candles and matches.

Deck of cards and board games, and a few children's toys. Such items as coloring books can reduce stress and anxiety.

A cell phone, if available, address book and phone book.

List of emergency contacts, cash, copies of insurance policies, household inventory and immunization records.

Taking pictures of each room in your home can be helpful in identifying how the home looked before a disaster. Store photos in a safe place, with other essential documents.

Stashing a camera — or making sure that you take it with you during an emergency — also can be helpful in documenting emergencies, Bradshaw said.

More information on personal safety and preparing for and recovering from disasters is available at local and district K-State Research and Extension offices; on its Extension website: www.oznet.ksu.edu; on the Extension Disaster Education Network site: <http://eden.lsu.edu/>; and U.S. Department of Homeland Security: www.dhs.gov/.

Consumers to pay for several more months of corn, ethanol bashing

Despite several research studies showing that ethanol production and higher corn prices have only a small effect on consumer prices, anti-ethanol forces have teamed up to sway public opinion against farmers and the fuel they produce. The Kansas Corn Growers Association believes facts, not well-funded public relations campaigns, should prevail.

"We are hearing that the Grocery Manufacturers Association (GMA) has embarked on a multimillion dollar campaign through a Washington, DC public relations firm to turn public opinion against corn-based ethanol," according to Kansas Corn Growers Association Executive Director Jere White. "Several credible studies released this year show high fuel prices have a much greater impact on food prices than higher corn prices."

White said consumers are wondering why there has been little connection made between fuel prices and grocery prices.

"That's where the story gets interesting. In addition to GMA, we are told the oil industry has chipped in millions to the campaign as well," White said. "Consumers are paying higher prices at the pump and at the checkout. Then the oil companies and food companies are using that money to blame ethanol for higher food and fuel prices."

While corn and ethanol producers have the facts on their side, it will be difficult to beat a multi-million campaign aimed at rolling back the advances made by the ethanol industry, much of which is owned by growers. Corn growers have been working to make sure the public is receiving both sides of the story.

"Corn and ethanol producers simply don't have millions of dollars to spend on glossy PR campaigns," White said. "What we do have are facts: several studies showing that ethanol production and higher corn prices account for just a fraction of the increase consumers are paying at the grocery store. Commodity prices account for less than 20 percent of the cost of groceries, the rest is transportation, packaging, marketing and other factors. Plus, ethanol actually reduces the cost of gas for consumers at the pump."

While food prices are higher, White points out prices for non-food items are also higher, including things farmers purchase to grow their crops like fuel and fertilizer.

"It doesn't take much common sense to understand that the big driver in increased grocery prices is fuel prices," White said. "Sure, you're paying more for food, but you're also paying more for laundry soap and toilet paper. Production and transportation costs are up primarily because of increased fuel prices — especially diesel prices. The real story is $120 crude oil and the foreign regimes it supports. It is time we say enough and support America first."

Kansas Animal Health Department launches 'Locate in 48'

The Kansas Animal Health Department has announced a coordinated promotional campaign to encourage the state's livestock owners to participate in a premises identification program. Entitled Locate In 48, the program focuses on educating Kansas landowners and those who handle or manage livestock on the importance of registering locations where animals are held.

Locate In 48 refers to a system that will allow 48-hour traceback if an animal disease outbreak were to occur. This system will help protect animals, increase consumer confidence in the nation's food supply, better connect producers to the global marketplace and protect the Kansas way of life.

The campaign is supported by a brochure, posters, radio and print advertisements, a billboard and an enhanced Web site that outlines the program. The site — Kansas.LocateIn48.com — includes campaign materials, frequently asked questions and online registration capabilities.

"We are very excited to introduce the Locate In 48 campaign to Kansas. We believe this program will help Kansas ranchers understand the animal health and safety benefits of registering their livestock premises and preserve the future of farming and ranching for generations to come," said George Teagarden, livestock commissioner for the Kansas Animal Health Department.

"As a long-time rancher and member of the Kansas legislature, I want to do everything I can to help protect our way of life here in Kansas," said Dan Johnson, Kansas Legislator and working rancher. "And because I am a fourth-generation rancher I know how important it is that we are able to protect our animals from widespread disease."

Through the program, livestock owners are asked to voluntarily register their premises.

Premises are any location where animals are managed or held — this includes farms, ranches, hobby farms, veterinary clinics, stables, livestock markets and any other location where livestock is kept. Registration will allow animal health officials to quickly contact livestock owners or caretakers in the event of an animal disease outbreak or animal health emergency.

"As the owner of a large feedyard my livelihood depends on the health of my cattle," said Allan Sents, McPherson County Feeders co-owner and manager. "I registered my premises because it's the right thing to do to protect my business and the livestock of all Kansans who are involved in the animal industry."

"Premises registration is simple, and there is no cost to register," said Bryan Rickard, Locate In 48 coordinator. "By registering, you are taking an important step toward prevention and animal disease control in Kansas."

For more information about premises registration or to register online, visit Kansas.LocateIn48.com. Livestock owners can also print a copy of the registration form off the Web site and fax it to 785-296-1765 or mail it to the Kansas Animal Health Department, 708 SW Jackson St., Topeka, KS 66603-3714. In addition, registrations are accepted at local Farm Service Agency offices or over the phone at (785) 296-2326.

K-State researchers measure cattle feedlot ammonia emissions

Cattle feedlots are a significant source of atmospheric ammonia in the United States, but a team of Kansas State University researchers is working on ways to help producers reduce those emissions.

Ammonia reacts with acid in the air, forming particles that can result in regional haze and more importantly, the deposition of nitrogen both locally and in distant areas, said Jay Ham, an agronomist with K-State Research and Extension. Nitrogen deposition can affect rivers and lakes, and alter vegetation in native ecosystems.

To measure the extent of ammonia emissions from feedlots, Ham and his research team in environmental physics have designed a new system specifically for this purpose.

"Over the past three years, we've designed and tested a Relaxed Eddy Accumulation (REA) System to measure nitrogen-compound emissions from cattle feedlots and other strong nitrogen sources," Ham said.

The system consists of numerous sensors on a tower built near a feedlot.

"The objective," said Ham, "is to learn about where the nitrogen is located within a feedlot system, and where it is transported. Statistics show that about 30 to 40 percent of all feed nitrogen delivered to a pen is ultimately lost to the air as ammonia. We want to know exactly how much ends up in the air, and if those levels have any impact on the environment."

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency does not have Kansas-based data on ammonia emissions from feedlots, he said.

"Through our research, we hope to deliver solid scientific information to producers and regulators. The data collected over the past few years is currently being analyzed and documented. The ultimate goal is to develop management systems that keep ammonia emissions to a minimum," Ham said.

Live webcast available May 16 on market based conservation: manure management

Farmers, ranchers and others interested in adding to the bottom line by implementing certain manure management practices are invited to be part of a live presentation May 16 on the World Wide Web.

The program, viewable on the Web at <http://connect.extension.iastate.edu/1pelc/> will begin at 1:30 p.m. Central Daylight Time. The Web meeting room opens 15 minutes before the start time.

Three presenters will give an overview of market-based conservation and experiences from two programs. One program generates carbon credit revenue with methane capture covers on manure lagoons and storage facilities. The other is the New York City watershed program; upstate farmers are paid to implement best management practices to protect the New York City water supply. The webcast will end with a discussion of what is needed to promote market-based conservation in the United States.

The webcast is produced by eXtension, an educational partnership of cooperative Extension services throughout the United States. K-State Research and Extension is a partner in eXtension.

The presenters for the May one-hour seminar are Suzy Friedman, Environmental Defense Fund; Dale Dewing, Cornell University; and Jim Jensen, Environmental Credit Corporation.

The seminar is hosted by the Livestock and Poultry Environmental (LPE) Learning Center, part of eXtension. The center advocates that individuals involved in public policy issues, animal production and delivery of technical services for confined animal systems should have on-demand access to the nation's best science-based resources.

The center has a monthly online newsletter, to which anyone can subscribe. All information, including archived monthly Webcasts from the past year, is on www.eXtension.org under the resource area animal manure management.

Another Webcast will be available June 20 on nutrient management for small-scale farms.

The Webcasts are approved for one continuing education unit (each) as part of the American Registry of Professional Animal Scientists (ARPAS) program. To receive CEUs, view a live or archived Webcast, complete an evaluation (if available) and contact ARPAS, (217) 356-5390, to have the credit applied to your CEU balance.

Yard & Garden Tips

By Gregg Eyestone

Shrub of the Year

Wow, what a spring show of blossoms. I was hoping for a good show to make up for last year's Easter weekend freeze. A slow warm-up to summer is ideal for a long bloom period. On the flip side, my roses are growing so slow I wonder if they will bloom by the June 1 garden tour. There is nothing like gardening that builds patience.

There are many wonderful spring blooming shrubs and trees. Our Abeliophyllum or white forsythia was the first to bloom in March.

The lilacs and white spirea will be blooming shortly. Right now it is our Viburnum show. In our landscape, there are eight different kinds in flower, producing a strong pleasing aroma.

Blooming shrubs are great during their flowering time. What do they do the rest of the year for the landscape? This is for the owner to decide. The shrub of the year has qualities one has to weigh.

The Leatherleaf Viburnum (Viburnum rhytid- phyllum) has been selected as the shrub of the year for 2008. This means that it is well adapted to our Kansas climate. Full sun is best but is able to grow in quite a bit of shade. Like 90 percent of plants, it likes moist and well-drained soil, which many of us don't have but we grow plants anyway.

This is a big shrub. Size ranges from eight to 12-feet tall and wide. It is an upright multi-stemmed shrub that is considered a broadleaf evergreen. Being an evergreen, protection from strong winds will reduce browning edges. The common name derives from the long oval leaves that have deep veins that with the dark green give a coarse leathery appearance.

Flowers are cream colored that range from four to eight-inches in diameter. While the Viburnums in our landscape are considered strongly fragrant, the Leatherleaf is slight. They make quite a show when you get a large shrub covered with large creamy blossoms. Blossoms may convert into a red fruit turning black before falling or being eaten by birds.

A shrub of this size is often used in the border in screening or defining space. Emerald Triumph Viburnum was the shrub of the year in 2002. The plants are similar with the Emerald Triumph being smaller with a size of six to eight-foot height and spread.

"A garden without a Viburnum is akin to life without music and art." — Professor Dr. Michael Dirr.

Schools installing wind turbines for education, outreach

The five rural Kansas high schools selected by the Kansas Wind for Schools program to receive a small wind turbine for educational and outreach purposes have either already installed the turbines, or are about to do so.

The sites were selected in 2007 to receive Skystream 1.9 kilowatt wind turbines. Review of 2008 applications is underway presently, said Ruth Douglas Miller of the Wind Applications Center and associate professor of electrical and computer engineering at Kansas State University. "Fairfield High School, USD 310, was one of five rural schools selected to receive a Skystream 3.7 wind turbine as part of the National Renewable Energy Laboratory's Wind for Schools Initiative," Miller said. Fairfield plans to erect its turbine May 20.

"The turbine to be installed during the week of June 1 at Sterling High School in USD 376 will become part of the school's Environmental Science curriculum," Miller said. "We are working to schedule foundation work at Walton Elementary in the Newton school district May 9, and possibly Ell-Saline High School in Brookville as soon as May 17. Concordia will be the last installation."

The three-year Kansas Wind for Schools program aims to train young engineers for jobs in the rapidly growing wind industry and to increase public awareness and understanding of wind power.

Schools that receive the turbines are expected to incorporate education about wind energy into their science curricula.

The Kansas Wind for Schools program provides assistance in financing, siting and installation for elementary and secondary schools in Kansas interested in having a small wind turbine for educational and outreach purposes.

Introducing

Tiffany Cattle Company, Inc.

Formerly Black Diamond Feeders

After 22 years of being owner/manager at Black Diamond Feeders Doug Laue is in the process of turning over the reins to Shawn and Shane Tiffany. Shawn and Shane are the sons of Steve Tiffany who for many years was assistant manager at Black Diamond.

Shawn and Shane are graduates of Kansas State University, both earning degrees in Animal Science & Industry. Both bring extensive beef industry experience to the business.

For the past six years Shawn has served as ranch manager for Chair Rock Angus of Greeley, KS. Chair Rock is a 500 cow seedstock operation exclusively utilizing artificial insemination and embryo transfer.

During that same time Shane has worked for Bartlett Cattle in the panhandle of Texas and in western Kansas. He has filled roles in both risk management and feeder cattle procurement.

With a 15,000 head capacity, Tiffany Cattle Company is large enough to have economics of scale but small enough to provide personal attention. Animal health crews check your pens daily for sick or injured animals. Pen sizes range from 50 to 200 head. Accurate record keeping and readily available information are important at Tiffany Cattle Company. A computerized summary of feed, cattle processing, veterinary services and other costs are easily accessible on each pen of cattle.

Cattle marketing is a strength at Tiffany Cattle Company. A close partnership with US Premium Beef has proven to be a valuable asset to our customers. Tiffany Cattle Co. is a certified U.S. Premium Beef feedlot and has delivery rights available for lease and can provide various marketing avenues in order to realize the full value of your cattle.

The feeding, care, and marketing of your cattle are our #1 priority. Experience, a prime location, and attention to detail make Tiffany Cattle Company an excellent option in today's fast paced cattle feeding industry. We look forward to serving you. If you would like to discuss how we might be able to meet your needs please contact us.

TIFFANY

K-State to host wheat tour at Parsons canola presentation to be included

The K-State Research and Extension Southeast Agricultural Research Center will host a wheat tour and canola information session on Thursday, May 29 at the center's Parsons field. The field is located on Ness Road (also called North 32nd St.) immediately south of U.S. Highway 400.

The tour begins with registration and a complimentary breakfast at 7:30 a.m., followed by presentations beginning at 8:30 a.m. Several of the presentations will include information pertinent to growing wheat in southeast Kansas and northeast Oklahoma, said K-State's Lyle Lomas, who is head of the research center. The presentation topics and presenters will include:

Tour of Wheat Variety Plots (33 varieties) — Doug Shoup, K-State Extension agronomist, Kelly Kusel, K-State Research Technologist, and seed company representatives; Wheat Foliar Fungicide Update — Kenneth Kelley, K-State agronomist and Doug Jardine, K-State plant pathologist; Canola Production in Southeastern Kansas — Jim Long, K-State crop development agronomist; and Sensor-Based Nitrogen Management Strategies for Winter Wheat — Brian Arnall, Oklahoma State University plant and soil scientist.

Advance registration is not required. The tour will be held indoors in the event of rain, Lomas said. Further information is available by contacting the K-State Research and Extension Southeast Agricultural Research Center at (620) 421-4826.

Kansas Hay Market Report

Ground alfalfa movement: Southwest/South Central Tonnage: 13,163/4,388 Last week: 13,593/4,073 Last year: 11,243/3,094 Hay trade slow. Demand moderate to strong for grinding alfalfa, alfalfa pellets and dairy alfalfa, moderate for prairie hay and stock cow quality hay. Thunderstorms this week have brought beneficial rain to much of Western Kansas missing the Northwest area, some areas also received high wind and damaging hail. Alfalfa that has been hailed earlier is extremely slow recovering. Swathing of alfalfa has started, yields are light quality is good, much of it has been rained on in the windrow. Many producers hope to start cutting between May 15 and 20. If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the service of the Hay and Pasture Exchange website: www.kfb.org/hayandpasture/default.htm

In northeast Kansas, volunteers develop recreational area

Without proposing a tax increase or increasing the mill levy, residents of many communities might dismiss the idea of developing a new recreational area.

But not in Melvern pop. 435, where volunteers working on behalf of the community have planted 65 trees, built a 20-foot-long walking bridge across a ravine, cleaned up 40 acres of abandoned land, and developed seven miles of hiking, biking and walking trails.

Residents of Melvern have a strong commitment to protecting natural resources and building a healthy, sustainable community, said Sherry Davis, who has been working with community volunteers on an ambitious water-quality and natural resource management project on the Marais des Cygnes River as part of the Healthy Ecosystems-Healthy Communities (HEHC) Program.

Davis is a Kansas State University Research and Extension program coordinator for the HEHC program within Kansas PRIDE, a volunteer-based community development program administered by K-State and the Kansas Department of Commerce.

The HEHC program helps communities protect their local water resources through a combination of civic engagement and natural resource planning. It is funded by the Kansas Department of Health and Environment with Environmental Protection Agency 319 Water Quality Program funds and managed by Kansas' PRIDE Program.

Work on the water-quality project helped the community to build new partnerships with other community and service organizations, such as the Kansas Corps, a student-volunteer group developed at Fort Hays State University, and Kansas Trails Council (KTC) and Westar Energy's Green Team, which have helped the city design and build its new trails system.

This spring, more than 115 volunteers from such groups joined the community's Friends of the Trail team to develop Melvern's River Trails — seven miles of walking, rustic hiking and biking trails that also can serve as an outdoor classroom to teach residents of all ages about water quality and its importance to healthy communities and ecosystems, Davis said.

The site has it all — a healthy stand of trees and shrubs along a beautiful river, an abandoned quarry with high rock walls surrounding a natural wetlands area, and a natural amphitheatre and open meadow for public gatherings, she said.

More than 20 trailer loads of brush and limbs were cut and removed.

Before the trail development could begin, 100 hundred large bags of trash and more than 30 tires also were removed from the site, which had previously served as a site for trash, tree limbs and brush disposal.

An educational brochure with tips to protect water quality and ecosystems will be available at the trail when the project is completed. For more information about opportunities for commu-

tems-Healthy Communities program, call Sherry Davis with the Kansas PRIDE Program at (785) 313-5283 or e-mail her at sbd@ksu.edu.
