

Bridget Baker, Washington, won the top honor in the Ag Sales proficiency award division. She was recognized last week during the national FFA convention.

Student tapped for ag sales work

While preparing for the national floriculture career development event, Bridget L. Baker of Washington began working at Owen's Original Floral shop.

The Washington County FFA chapter member then became more motivated to learn about the business and was soon assisting with all facets of the business by consulting and advising clients, quoting and determining prices, taking customer orders, creating and designing merchandise and more. For this work she is a national award winner.

She is supported in her endeavors by her parents, Philip and Jeanette Baker, as well as by her FFA advisor John Kern.

Recovery system can assist farms and feedlots

The bioprocessing team at Kansas State University's Advanced Manufacturing Institute, in collaboration with the Kansas Environmental Management Associates, has developed a new patented process for recovering excess phosphorus from feedlot waste streams to create a slow release granule fertilizer.

A patent application has been published for "Fluidized Bed Precipitator With Optimized Solids Settling And Solids Handling Features For Use In Recovering Phosphorus From Wastewater."

"Over the past few years, the Environmental Protection Agency has been working on legislation to limit the level of phosphorus being added to soil," said Gina Becker, AMI bioprocessing team leader. "One of their main concerns is the use of wastewater from concentrated feeding operations. As a result of legislation, people in the industry across the nation are looking for economical ways to reduce phosphorus levels prior to applying it to fields."

Protecting the environment while assisting feedlot operators and farmers became a goal for K-State's Advanced Manufacturing Institute when DT Search and Designs, a technology development company in Saint Joseph, Mo., came for assistance in developing a multi-pronged water treatment process for concentrated animal feeding operations, Becker said.

Becker said the Advanced Manufacturing Institute facilitated a meeting between DT Search and Designs and KLA Environmental Services, who formed a joint venture called Kansas Environmental Management Associates. This company sponsored the development and is working to commercialize the technology, Becker said.

After testing was complete, we moved to a fully automated farm-scale process at Supreme Cattle Feeders in Liberal.

"For each phase, the system design was refined to account not only for engineering scale-up issues, such as changes in mixing, settling and heat and material transfer dynamics, but also for practical matters associated with moving from a controlled laboratory to an outdoor operating feedlot," Becker said. "The system is designed to reduce phosphorous levels between 40 and 60 percent, depending on the initial ion concentrations and nutrient management requirements of any particular feeding operation."

Prescribed burning workshops to be held in central and eastern Kansas

Fire safety is a priority topic of the upcoming prescribed burning workshops scheduled to be held in central and eastern Kansas this fall. Carol Blocksme, Grassland Water Quality Extension Staff at Kansas State University (KSU), Manhattan, said that these workshops are a continuation of workshops conducted in western Kansas last fall. It was evident from these workshops that producers needed and wanted more information and education on how to conduct a safe and successful prescribed burn. "Safe burning requires proper planning, education, and training," she said.

"Producers may want to burn native and Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) grassland to improve vegetative quality, control weeds, manage for wildlife, or fulfill CRP contractual obligations," said Blocksme. "I would encourage any producer who is thinking of burning grassland in central and eastern Kansas to attend one of these workshops," Blocksme said. Prescribed Burning workshops are being held at several locations in central and eastern Kansas. The content of all the workshops is very similar, so producers can attend the most convenient location. There is a registration charge to attend the workshops, which covers the cost of handouts and a notebook. Lunch will be served. RSVP deadline is a week prior to the workshop date. For more information, please contact your local conservation district or KSU Extension office.

Presenters vary by workshop, but all will be presenting essentially the same information. Workshops are sponsored by local conservation districts, Watershed Restoration and Protection Strategy (WRAPS), Kansas Department of Health and Environment, Environmental Protection Agency, Kansas Water Plan funds, Kansas Grazing Lands Coalition, Kansas Fire Council, local fire departments and emergency management personnel, KFS, KDWP National Weather Service, KSU Extension, and U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) agencies in Kansas-FSA and NRCS. Sponsors vary for meal and burn workbook by workshop. Workshop dates, locations, and phone numbers are as follows:

LYON COUNTY, KANSAS 312 ACRES IN 2 TRACTS

AUCTION

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 24 — 7:00 PM

AUCTION LOCATION: Olpe Chicken House, Hwy. 99, OLPE, KANSAS.

PROPERTY LOCATION: From Olpe, KS, follow Hwy. 99 South 3 miles to Rd. 40, then East 4.5 miles to SW corner of Tract 1. Tract 2 joins Tract 1 on the North.

TRACT 1: Approximately 156.04 taxable acres.

LEGAL DESCRIPTION: SE/4 of Sec. 15, Twp. 21, Rge 12, East of the 6th PM Lyon Co., Ks.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION: If you are a cattle or grass person this quarter will definitely appeal to you. Slightly rolling native grass pasture shows as it has not been grazed this summer although it has had cattle on it all season. County road is on two sides with rural water and electricity close by. Improvements can be realized if that is your dream. Average 4 and 5 wire fences. Fence on the North will need to be built an approximate short quarter. The property is watered by a good pond and draw for the wet seasons of the year. This is a very clean native grass pasture, one of the cleanest we have had the opportunity to auction in the area.

TRACT 2: Approximately 156.04 Acres.

LEGAL DESCRIPTION: NE/4 of Section 15, Twp. 21, Rge. 12 East of the 6th PM Lyon Co., Ks.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION: Approximately 93.21 acres of cropland. Crop soils are Kenoma soils which are deep moderately well drained, slow permeable soils in upland with 1-7% slopes. Bases for Wheat: 33.02A. Corn: 30.8A. Soybeans: 29.6A.

Total farm payment for 2009 is $1,052.00.

The 2009 soybean crop has been harvested. Cropland is fenced with below average 3 and 4 wire fence. The balance of acreage is approximately 62.83 acres of native grass. Slightly rolling pasture watered by 3 ponds and a wet weather draw. Pasture is fenced with average 4 and 5 wire fence. South fence line will need fence built of approximately a short quarter. Very clean native pasture. County road on 2 sides, rural water and electricity close by offers building opportunities. Very nice mixed quarter for grain and grass production.

TAXES AND MINERAL RIGHTS: Total tax for both tracts is $1,106.64. Mineral rights owned by seller will pass with the deed.

TERMS: $16,000.00 down as earnest money deposit per tract upon signing of the contracts evening of the auction. Earnest money deposit is to be made to Griffin Real Estate Trust. Balance and possession on or before December 29, 2009 at which time proper deeds will be given. Title insurance shall be shared equally between the buyer and the seller for the owners policy. Tracts will be offered individually and not put together as one tract. Fence between the tracts will be built and split 50/50 by the 2 buyers. This fence is to be a 5 barb wire steel post and steel corner fence. 2009 income is retained by the seller. Seller pays all 2009 taxes. Property will be sold with no lease. Auction is not contingent upon buyer receiving financing. All statements evening of the auction take precedence over advertisements.

INSPECTION: Anytime with appointment with Griffin Real Estate. All numbers listed below.

AUCTIONEER'S NOTE: Affordable size acreage can be bought as you want it - 1 or 2 tracts. It is an attractive location with utilities and good road access. Some of the cleanest property we have offered. I'll look forward to seeing you at the auction. Rick.

Ground alfalfa movement: Southwest/South Central Tonnage: 13,778/3,512 Last week: 13,596/3,712 Last year: 11,811/4,665 Hay trade slow. Demand moderate for dairy and stock cow alfalfa, alfalfa pellets, grinding alfalfa and grass hay. Fall harvest has been difficult between storms. The wet weather has prevented much of the cane, sudan and millet from be baled and very little baling of crop residue has occurred. This may shrink the overall supply and lower the quality of available roughages this winter. Just like last week the forecast is for rain moving in Wednesday night and some areas possibly mixed with snow on Thursday. Producers need at least another week to harvest and bale. If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange www.kfb.org/hayandpasture/default.htm

Wet fall increases grain sprouting before harvest, causing storage problems

Prolonged wet weather increases chances that grain crops will start sprouting before harvest this fall, said a University of Missouri Extension agronomist.

Plentiful moisture and temperatures above 50 degrees are what farmers want after planting in the spring, not before harvest in the fall, said crops specialist Bill Wiebold. "Sprouting could ruin the grain quality."

Most years, the corn and soybean crop are harvested and in the bin by mid-October. However, the wettest October in 70 years has stopped most attempts to harvest grain across the state.

Statewide average rainfall for October approaches 9 inches, three times normal, said Pat Guinan, MU Extension Commercial Agriculture climatologist.

If moisture enters the corn husks or soybean pods, the conditions for sprouting increase as temperatures remain mild.

"The minimum temperature for corn seed germination is about 50 degrees or a little cooler," Wiebold said. "Unfortunately, water for germination has been abundant this fall. I'm seeing more of the corn ears remaining upright, leaving an opening for moisture to reach the kernels." Normally, corn ears droop over and hang down at maturity. The husks around the corn ear shed water, protecting mature kernels from moisture that may cause germination.

Soybean seed is protected by a pod, but alternating wet and dry periods cause swelling and shrinking that can break the pod, admitting moisture. Soybean seed remaining in the pod can sprout.

The greater danger is that the soybean seed in shattered pods will fall to the ground and be lost before harvest, Wiebold said.

"Both corn and soybean seeds possess mechanisms that prevent sprouting before maturity," he said. "The primary defense is a growth hormone, abscisic acid (ABA), which peaks during the middle of seed filling but decreases as seeds mature."

For most corn and soybean plants, only small amounts of ABA remain in the seed by harvest time. The loss of ABA allows the seed to be used to plant the next crop. ABA is water-soluble and will leach out of wet kernels.

"Unfortunately, this means that with the right moisture and temperature conditions, seeds from normal corn or soybean plants can germinate on the ear or in the pod," he said. "Premature sprouting is quite damaging to grain quality," Wiebold said. "During germination, seeds release enzymes that break down carbohydrates, proteins and fats. This breakdown releases free sugars and other nutrients from the kernel."

Those sugars, especially in moist conditions, provide food for fungus and mold growth. Some of those pathogens produce toxins harmful to livestock, making sprouted seeds worth less as livestock feed. Sprouted kernels increase storage problems, inviting further fungal growth and insect feeding.

As long as weather conditions remain unchanged, there is not much that farmers can do about sprouting losses, Wiebold said.

Peanuts tried in the area; neighbors curious, farmer hopeful

By Amy Bickel
HUTCHINSON (AP) — If he's been called any nicknames, they haven't been to his face, Rice County farmer Clark Schmidt says with a grin.
Yet he figures he's been the talk at the local elevator and morning coffee shops for his 65-acre peanut field not far from Sterling.
Peanuts in a state known for wheat production, after all, aren't typical. And for a farmer to plant them, well, it means a bit of gossip, which Schmidt brushes off as mere curiosity.
"Everyone's watching to see if this works," Schmidt said as he drove toward his field of freshly dug peanuts in mid-October. "They're all interested."

In his years of farming, the young farmer hasn't really veered away from traditional Kansas crops.
Schmidt's father, Geral, was a custom cutter, traveling from Texas north following the ripened wheat. Schmidt, himself, farms wheat, milo, soybeans and corn, as well as raises cattle in Rice County.
Yet on this fall day, Schmidt stood in his field of peanuts, a Caprock Peanut Co. hat on his head. He said he is hopeful — wondering if, in the next decade, his little experiment might blossom into another alternative for Kansas farmers.
It happened with cotton. The crop was nearly nonexistent in the state 15 years ago, and those who first planted it got a few chuckles from neighbors.

Now the state has four gins and farmers are expected to harvest 36,000 acres.
But can peanuts take off in a state known for its acres of wheat and corn? Maybe, said Ron Henning, a peanut production specialist with EMD Crop Bio-Science.
"Where you can grow cotton, you can usually grow peanuts," he said.
Henning, an agronomist, said peanuts are a subtropical plant usually grown in states such as Georgia, Alabama, Florida and southern Texas. However, over the past several years, peanut production has moved northward into Oklahoma, with farmers harvesting the crop around the Enid area — 65 miles south of the Harper County seat of Anthony.

A new short-season variety of Spanish peanuts might help elevate the crop in Kansas, he said, but added Schmidt has all the right tools to make it work — sandy soil that is right above a plentiful groundwater source.
Not that Schmidt used much irrigation, Henning said, noting the crop has flourished largely because of abnormally high precipitation this year.
A trip to Kansas early this month, a day after a crew dug the crop, showed good-yielding potential, Henning said, adding Megan Fink keeps tracks of the sales in her catalog during the Fink Beef Genetics sale held last week at Randolph. A large crowd from around the country were in attendance to purchase Angus and Charolais seedstock.

even he was a bit surprised at what he found.

"I wasn't expecting to see that many peanuts on the plant," he said. "Everything looks favorable, assuming he has enough frost-free days to get the crop to maturity without getting frost on them."

Besides the shorter growing season, another concern is freight, he said.

"They are eventually going to have to address this — the infrastructure to handle the crop," Henning said. "He is probably 600 miles from where he is going to have to deliver them. That's not free."

Schmidt said he gets a little bit of a break in transport costs this year through Caprock Peanut Co., a holding facility for peanuts, since the crop is experimental.

Schmidt said he isn't the first in the state to try peanuts, noting a few acres were planted several years ago in southwest Kansas.

Still, he thought the crop might be more profitable than soybeans and might fit nicely in his crop rotation.

After doing some research, he contacted Caprock. Doug Isaacs jumped at the idea of expanding to Kansas.

"We had been looking at Kansas for several years," Isaacs said. "We think Kansas might have peanut potential."

As states such as Texas continue to see declines in water resources, Kansas becomes even more ideal. South-central Kansas has good groundwater, and the area typically gets plenty of rainfall.

This year wasn't the most ideal, Isaacs said, noting the cooler, rainy summer made for a shorter growing season. Still, he estimated Schmidt's crop at 2 tons an acre — an average-to-above-average yield.

Schmidt said input costs run similar to those for soybeans. And Isaacs said the good yields could mean about $850 an acre.

"The boy who is going up there to thrash them, he believes they might be the best peanuts he's ever thrashed," Isaacs said. "And he's thrashed a lot of peanuts in our area."

If the weather holds, harvest will begin today. A good-rated crop will go to products like fresh-roasted peanuts.

And if all goes well, Schmidt hopes to expand his peanut acres in 2010.

So how does he eat his peanuts? Schmidt said he didn't consume a ton of them before becoming a peanut farmer. Yet on this day, he shelled and ate a few of those awaiting harvest.

"I do now," he laughed.

Jeri Sigle, a member of the Council Grove FFA, was presented a National FFA Proficiency award recently during the national convention.

Sigle became interested in hunting and trapping when she was five years old. That's when she realized she absolutely loved being outdoors and protecting and managing the health of various wildlife. Following in the footsteps of her parents, who are avid wildlife trappers, she began her own trapping and fur harvesting enterprise in Morris County.

Now she can construct her own trap, saving hundreds of dollars. Her trapping expeditions take place on 3,000 family- and neighbor-owned acres of grass-land next to the Neosho River in the rolling Flint Hills of Kansas. She is supported by her parents, Chris and Sharmon Sigle, and her FFA advisor, Brandon Barr.

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crofts

The U.S. Dollar Index didn't fall to a new low for a change and made a sizeable corrective bounce. There has been a tendency over the past several months for the Dollar to have strength right at the end of the month and sometimes for a day or so in the new month. Any strength that lasts beyond Tuesday would be a sign that a larger correction is about to unfold. Last week's strength in the Dollar certainly didn't help the ag markets or the stock market and further strength this week could have the same consequences. We will have to seek price protection in the grains or make sales if we see the Dollar Index make new highs.

Last week I mentioned the likelihood of a correction in the corn market and that is certainly what we got. Last Friday's poor close led to a sharp break on Monday. Part of the reason for the weakness was, of course, the strong Dollar and weak stock market. There was also the belief that the weather pattern was drying out and that there would be a better opportunity for harvest next week. Slow harvest progress is still a concern and Monday's numbers will show that little was accomplished this week, but a late, slow harvest isn't as big of a concern to traders as is the direction of the outside markets.

I am concerned about the outside day lower on the charts that we had Friday. We typically see follow through selling at some point when we have moves like that on the charts. If the Dollar is firm this week, and the forecasts for the Corn Belt look clear, we will likely see the December corn move down to the $3.58 level and possibly $3.45. The wheat had been the upside leader for two weeks in a row, but that ended last week and the wheat was the down side leader for the week. The December KW fell back to the support at the $4.98 level, which is the 50-day moving average. A move down to the $4.85 level is looking more and more likely.

The wheat still has the poorest fundamental outlook of the bunch. The threat of losing SRW production due to planting delays is certainly supportive, but the fact that we haven't seen consistently good exports and we have huge ending stocks is more important. That is especially true when the Dollar is strong and the stock market is weak. If we see the Dollar drop this week we will go back to talking about planting delays.

The trading action in the soybeans wasn't much different than in the wheat or the corn, but the beans do have a bit more of a sideways pattern on the charts. Demand is still tremendous; there is no doubt about that. Harvest delays are a concern and that is supportive as well. The Dollar and stock market action were the main forces in the market, but there is also still some concern that there is going to be a large crop and that it will eventually give us abundant supplies. What you end up with is a sideways market. The rallies and the pull backs are both more muted than they are in the corn and wheat and the market ends up being flatter. In the short run I look for the sideways/lower pattern to continue. If the corn and wheat are lower due to Dollar strength, the soybeans won't be able to rally very much independently no matter how good demand is. A move down to the $9.58 area is likely for the January soybeans and $9.40 is a possibility if the forecasts stay clear.

NOTE: Dr. Coldsmith started gunsmithing in the 40's and 50's, and continued after he became a doctor and author. He truly loved life and the things he did. He was a great Western author. You will appreciate the guns and gun parts. Some of the parts have been "boxed" since the 40's and 50's. HOWEVER, some items show effects of long term storage. Some guns have light surface rust. The dentist's items came from his father in law. All items are in secured vault storage until auction day.

We had a very interesting week in the cattle market. There were cash cattle that traded as high as $88 in Texas, but the October LC went off the board Friday at $81.65. The government is worried about a lack of convergence in the wheat market, but I wonder what they would think about last week's failure of the cattle market to converge. Anyway, we had higher cash cattle prices, but lower futures last week. The December LC lost about $1.70, which took the market below the support at the 40 and 50-day moving averages. The December LC did find support on Friday at the $88.25 area, which will be watched closely next week. For the moment I would look to sell a bounce early next week and add to the position on a close below $88.25.

Fall color can add to landscape 'wish list'

Plant lover Jamie Hancock is advising Kansans to pay special attention to fall's color show this year. The tree and shrub leaves are spectacular.

"Besides, this can be a great time to choose some ornamentals you'd like to have in your yard," said Hancock, who is a Kansas State University Research and Extension horticulturist. She suggested the following as useful approaches: Visit a local nursery to see what's in color now.

"That's an especially good way to select plants for fall display," Hancock said.

"Not all varieties produce good autumn color — even if you've heard they're supposed to. Maples, for example, are a good choice in general, but some varieties simply don't color up well."

Pay special attention to the plants that catch your eye as you drive up and down neighborhood streets.

"If you don't know what kind of tree or shrub a particular eye-catcher is; collect a few of its fallen leaves that are still in good shape and take them to your local Extension office for help with identification," she said. "Collecting a branch with leaves would be preferable, of course, but first you'd need to get permission from the owner."

"In that case, the owner may already know what the plant is, remember its source and be willing to tell you about the plant's good and bad points."

We use the dumping feature for just about anything.

"I purchased my first CannonBall flatbed about six years ago. I then bought our second unit just a year ago. I had a brand X before either unit but the arms did not operate separately. I'm impressed that I can haul 4 bales at a time with the wide reach and lift capacity—but the dumping feature is more than impressive. You can dump to clean it off, haul anything with easy to load and unload features, and raise the front of my gooseneck stock trailer in order to easily wash out the trailer. We use the dumping feature for just about anything needing lifted or moved".—Brent Butler, Siloam Springs, AR

Autumn home invaders are looking for shelter

This fall's frosty nip in the air has insects looking for warm places to hide — places such as Midwesterners' homes. These insects include crickets, boxelder bugs, millipedes, and especially the multicolored Asian lady beetle, said Kansas State University Research and Extension entomologist Jeff Whitworth. They try to invade homes at this time of year to find shelter to survive the winter. They pose no threat to human health or property, but when significant numbers build up, they can be a serious nuisance.

Despite their nuisance factor as they aggregate for overwintering, multicolored Asian lady beetles are considered "beneficial" insects during the growing season, Whitworth said. The USDA first imported the beetles into the United States during the late '70s and early '80s to help with aphid control. They are efficient aphid predators, the entomologist said, but since they have biting and chewing mouthparts, they can deliver an irritating bite to people. If enough beetles congregate inside a home, they also can cause a small odor problem, may stain certain surfaces when smashed, and can occasionally cause an allergic reaction in some people.

If there are significant numbers of beetles in an area this fall, that probably means aphids were plentiful in nearby crops and other plants in past summer, he said. The beetles are primarily attracted to the south- and west-facing sides of structures because those walls radiate and reflect the most heat.

"The best way to protect your dwelling from these pests is to limit access by eliminating or at least reducing the points of entry," Whitworth said. "Ensure that all screens are tight-fitting and intact. Make sure the caulk around window and door frames is in good condition. Remove excess foliage and mulch from around the foundation."

Insecticides can be effective if homeowners treat the exterior foundation and some of the area around the outside of the building, he said.

Once the pests are inside, sometimes hand-picking or vacuuming is enough to eliminate the problem. Glue boards can be helpful in trapping the insects. With significant numbers, however, an insecticide application inside the home may be required. Aerosol sprays may give a quick knock down but have short lasting effects. Insecticides with longer lasting effects often work quite well and can be sprayed along baseboards and in cracks, crevices, and other hiding places. "Always check the pesticide label to make sure the product you select is effective against the target pest and has no unwanted side effects, such as stains or unsightly residues," the entomologist said.

er, an insecticide application inside the home may be required. Aerosol sprays may give a quick knock down but have short lasting effects. Insecticides with longer lasting effects often work quite well and can be sprayed along baseboards and in cracks, crevices, and other hiding places. "Always check the pesticide label to make sure the product you select is effective against the target pest and has no unwanted side effects, such as stains or unsightly residues," the entomologist said.

Yard & Garden Tips By Greg Eyestone

Storing gardening tools for the winter

The garden hoe can be sharpened and the handle cleaned for winter storage. Another tool used for managing weeds is herbicide. These tools need to be stored properly until needed again. Herbicides, insecticides and fungicides are all grouped under the heading of pesticides. Information on the product label gives instructions on storage and disposal along with how to use it. Follow the instructions and the product will be safe now and useable next time it is needed.

Glyphosate is a widely used herbicide sold in many products. The product labels vary a little but it is important to follow your products instructions. For example, store the product only in its original container and in a secured storage area. Do not put concentrate or dilute into food or drink containers. Store the product in an area away from sources of heat or open flame. Protect the container from freezing.

There are instructions for disposal of unused product. A partially filled bottle could be disposed of by securely wrapping the original container in several layers of newspaper and discarded in the trash. Never place unused product down any indoor or outdoor drain. A good option is to take any leftover product to a household waste collection site. Riley County's site is at 6245 Tuttle Creek Boulevard.

The empty container needs to be rinsed thoroughly before discarding in the trash. Use the rinse water on the intended pest.

Do not reuse the container. Punching holes in the container makes it unusable. Buyer assumes all responsibility for safety and use not in accordance with directions. Pesticides are one of several tools available to gardeners. Use and store them responsibly along with fertilizer, hand tools and other equipment.

You can find out more information on this and other horticulture topics by going to the K-State Research and Extension website at www.ksre.ksu.edu.

Unruh wins national award

Duane K. Unruh of the Peabody-Burns FFA Chapter in Kansas was named the national winner of the Poultry Production-Entrepreneurship/Placement Proficiency award program at the 82nd National FFA Convention, Oct.21-24, 2009, in Indianapolis, Ind.

Proficiency awards recognize FFA members who excelled as agricultural entrepreneurs, employees, or volunteers while they gained hands-on experience. Poultry Production-Entrepreneurship/Placement is one of the 47 FFA proficiency award categories offered at local, state and national levels. This award program is sponsored by Tractor Supply Company and National FFA Foundation, as a special project of the National FFA Foundation.

For Duane, the motto, "If opportunity doesn't knock, build a door" sums up this Peabody-Burns FFA Chapter member's drive to succeed.

He began raising broilers in third grade for a 4-H project and years later, is now the owner of Unruh Pasture Fresh Poultry, where he raises, butchers and markets Cornish cross broilers and produces eggs from Black Sexlink hens as his SAE. His business also serves a niche market that welcomes fresh poultry without hormones or antibiotics and fresh eggs from hens kept on pasture.

Unruh is supported in his endeavors by his parents, Harlin and Doris Unruh, and his past advisors, Sonya Roberts, Steve Thorburn and Glen Bechtel.
