Packer says cooperate, moderate technology

If national trends are the equivalent of a beef industry report card, then ranchers and feeders are making the grade.

But Glen Dolezal, of Cargill Meat Solutions, warns that they need to pay attention to stay at the top of the class.

"Beef quality has been up each of the last three years, but we do have some concerns," he said during a presentation at the Feeding Quality Forum. The company's assistant vice president of business development and field sales leader outlined both the bright spots and challenges at the meetings in Omaha, Neb., and Garden City in late August.

the great taste of beef," Dolezal said. "We like to think of it as a three-legged stool made of tenderness, juiciness and flavor. If any one of them is broken, the eating experience doesn't work."

Trying to ensure that consistency, three out of every four carcasses in Cargill's plants are destined for branded programs, and the increased quality of the past few years has helped them fill those orders.

"We think a lot of that is related to changes in genetics," he said. "We're seeing a high percentage of blackhided cattle entering our facilities."

Dolezal talked about a 'Beef demand is linked to Colorado State University study that evaluated eating experience at several different marbling levels. He noted that as the researchers selected carcasses with trace amounts of marbling or Standards, only 49% were "A-stamped," denoting "Angus-type" at the plant. Compared to 92% of all moderately abundant (Prime) that received the same classification.

Cattle feeders are also using more ethanol co-products to economically extend days on feed.

"We think all of this is positive to beef quality," he said.

What's not? The increased intensity of implants along with the use of strong beta-agonist feed additives.

"At Cargill, we won't buy cattle that knowingly have been fed zilpaterol (beta-2 agonist)," Dolezal said. "Our point of view is that if we get too aggressive (with regard to growth) throughout the animal's lifetime it can have an impact on the consumer attributes of size, quality and tenderness," he said. "So we need to find a balance. The message there is that we ask you to be careful."

As cattlemen make genetic and management decisions, it's important to have good data to compare yearto-year.

"If you were trying to make genetic change or changing an implant program or feeding ration and you drew a grader that required more marbling to call it Choice, you'd think your cattle aren't very good," he said. "But on a different day you could draw a grader that required less, and you'd think you had really good cattle."

The USDA and packers worked together for many years calibrating and testing camera systems before implementing them to call marbling scores. Currently about 10 plants in the U.S. use the technology to determine quality grade.

"The cameras have been a big win, a big success story," Dolezal said. "Our customers have been very pleased with the consistency they're getting box to box, based on marbling levels and other traits."

Cattle producers should be happy, too.

"Data for grid payments and pre-harvest decisions are more accurate, consistent and repeatable," he said. Dolezal said that each part of the beef industry needs to rally together to continue pleasing the consumer.

"We're all in this together, and if we can ever get in the same spirit on the same page, working together, we're going to put out a greater product and more of it to compete with other proteins or even the vegan diet," he said. "We have to be on the same page to promote beef and grow demand for it for every segment to be profitable into the future."

Grass & Grain, November 1, 2011 Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay trade moderate. Demand very strong for dairy, stock cow and grinding alfalfa, moderate to strong for alfalfa pellets and grass hay. Most of Kansas had their first frost to a hard freeze over northern Kansas last week. Fall harvest is winding down across the state cutting corn, soybeans and milo. Alfalfa cutting is about over for the year, a lot of crop residue is being baled to supplement the demand for livestock feed. Wheat pasture prospects are slim.

If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange:www.kfb.org/ hayand pasture/default.htm

Southwest Kansas

Dairy alfalfa steady, grinding alfalfa steady to 10.00 higher. Movement moderate to active. twins. But when he and his son Terry went to check on her the next morning, they discovered she had actually had triplets, all three of which were females. In his sixtytwo years of farming, Gordon has never had a cow give birth to triplets. According to the Washington State University College of Veterinary Medicine, only 1 in 105,000 cattle births will be triplets and odds of them all being the same sex are one in 700,000. There is only a 25% chance that they will all be born alive. Gordon says the cow took all of the calves without any problem. "They just follow her around, she keeps track of them and they're doing just fine," he said.

Road and 25th Road, located 1/2 mile west and 31/2 miles south of Hollenberg, Kansas.

This farm is 360 acres, more or less, and consists of approximately 181 acres cropland, 110 acres pasture, and 68 acres timber, creek and waterways. The cropland fields on the east and south total 136.2 acres. The two fields with access from the north road (26th Road) are 16.3 and 18.2 acres. The four smaller fields add up to11.6 acres. Good conservation practices have been in place on this farm for many years. The cropland on the south and east is mostly gently sloping and moderately sloping Crete soils while the north fields are a mix of Crete, Morrill, and Longford upland and Muir and Hobbs bottom land soils. The native grass pasture has been well managed and lightly grazed. There is a well located pond in the pasture. Joy Creek runs through the timbered area of the farm with many mature oak, hackberry, ash, cottonwood and other trees, along with an abundance of other wildlife habitat.

This is a well located tract of land, with an attractive mix of productive cropland, good native warm season grass, and excellent wildlife habitat.

The estimated FSA bases and yields are 73.5 acres wheat, 34 bushels; 94.8 acres milo, 64 bushels; and 5.9 acres soybeans, 16 bushels. The 2011 taxes are $1,948.12.

TERMS: Ten (10) percent down, with the balance due in 30 days. Possession will be given at closing. The Seller will pay the 2011 taxes. There are no growing crops.

(AP) - A thundering explosion rocked a Kansas grain elevator and shot a fireball so high it could be seen in neighboring Missouri, leaving three workers dead and three other people missing, authorities said Sunday.

Trey Cocking, city manager in the northeast Kansas town of Atchison, confirmed the deaths and said three others remain unaccounted for after Saturday night's blast at the Bartlett Grain Co. elevator, which shook homes and businesses all around. Authorities also reported injuries, but were still trying to get accurate information and notify families.

The explosion could be seen and felt across Atchison, shaking homes and businesses up to four miles away. The cause was not immediately known, though grain elevator accidents can occur after grain dust becomes suspended in the air and turns explosive in the right conditions.

Bartlett Grain President Bill Fellows said in a statement that 11 workers were loading a train with corn when the explosion occurred about 7 p.m. Saturday. He said several of Atchison about two miles those 11 workers escaped injury, but that there were fatalities and some injuries.

Dennis McCulloch, spokesman for the University of Kansas Hospital in Kansas City, Kan., had said Saturday that two victims were in critical condition in the hospital's burn unit. It's not clear whether those victims are among those now said to be dead. He did not immediately return AP's messages early Sunday seeking updates.

Randy Burton, who works at a Quick Stop East convenience store in explosion "shook our whole building.'

"All I saw was a flash and then the building shook really good," Burton said. "Some things fell off our shelves." Atchison has about 11,000 residents and is known as the birthplace of aviation pioneer Amelia Earhart.

from the elevator, said the souri River, a dispatcher at the sheriff's department in Buchanan County, Mo., said the office received numerous calls from alarmed residents saying they could hear the explosion deep into the county. Residents across the area said a fireball from the explosion could be seen well away from the site.

Fellows said Bartlett Across the nearby Mis- Grain workers remained at the elevator early Sunday and aiding authorities any way they could.

"The company's concern at this point is caring for those involved and their families," Fellows said. "We, of course, are in touch with all of the families of the Bartlett employees. We will share more information as it is discovered."

City officials said in the release that rescue operations `"can be difficult because workers are often scattered throughout the facility, making them difficult to locate."

Units from several area police and firefighting agencies rushed to the site late Saturday, and fire crews pumped water onto the smoldering wreckage of the grain elevator for hours. Cocking said about 100 personnel joined in that work late Saturday night as authorities blocked access roads to the site.

The city statement also gave no preliminary indication of the cause. But it noted the risks that working with grains can pose.

"Stored grain can generate toxic gases or dangerous molds. Milled grain can be explosive under certain conditions," the statement noted.

gulfed by grain at elevators is an ongoing concern with the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

An explosion at a grain elevator in Bartley, Neb., in April 2010, caused no injuries but sent workers scrambling out of the way, while another in Gothenburg, Neb., in December 2010, scattered debris over nearby railroad tracks and a highway, also without injuries, authorities reported at the time.

Elsewhere, explosions or fires were reported at two grain elevators in Illinois in 2010 while a fire burning at a grain elevator in the Toledo, Ohio, area in September 2010 forced people to evacuate from a nearby mobile home park and businesses as a precaution. There also have been explosions or fires at elevators in South Dakota and Louisiana that year, none of them fatal.

Authorities said two workers were killed in June 2010 when they were buried under a load of wheat at an elevator in the central Kansas town of Russell though no explosion occurred there.

said. But not soon enough.

Ideas for coating the exterior of the house with insecticides, of meeting the swarms with flamethrowers, or even calling in air strikes from Ft. Riley quickly went out the window. In the end I was reduced to the most low-tech solution available: the common fly swatter.

It's admittedly a slow process and ultimately doomed to failure. But there is a certain grim satisfaction in destroying them by hand, perhaps even a psychological response harkening back to our Neolithic ancestors when we met the enemy face to face.

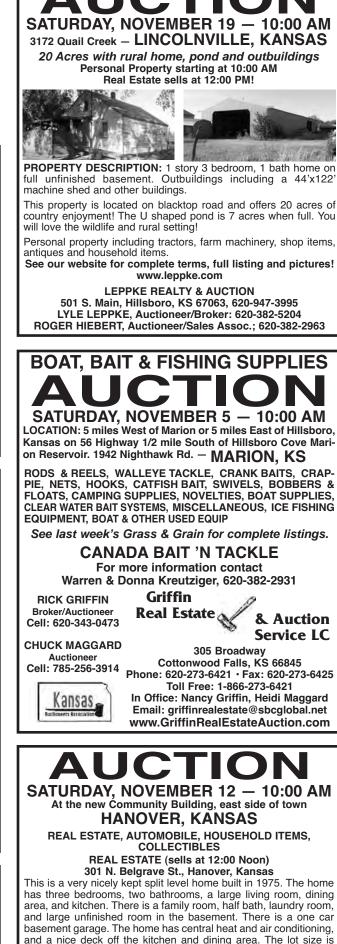

Unfortunately, our fly swatter, a cheesy plastic paddle loosely connected to a thin metal handle, fell apart after the hundredth or so beetle. A second swatter suffered a similar fate. An online search found fly swatters of various sizes and shapes, most made of plastic and none suitable for longevity. I wanted something big and beefy, something with a handle that wouldn't flex and bend like a willow switch and a head that could dish out as well as take abuse. I wanted something lethal. And then, almost by accident and not a little sleuthing, I found it. Wal-Mart, late evening, we're tired and want to get home but I've circumnavigated the store twice looking for fly swatters and still drew a blank. Finally, seconds before getting into the checkout line, Lori asks a clerk if they had any, and if so, where.

"Aisle 12, end of row, in a box," she said.

In other words, clear across the store. No problem, by that time I was determined to find them or die trying, so we wearily trudged past the produce, the frozen food, the baking and breakfast and candy and Halloween rows with their temptations and enticements, past the paper goods and cleaning supplies to an indeterminate row of various and sundry items including mouse traps, cockroach strips, wasp and hornet spray, where we found tucked into a narrow slot. unmarked and unidentifiable except for the black wire handle jutting out, the Black Flag Super Swatter.

CAB Colvin Scholarship offers $20,000

agriculture through further education—that's the top requirement for the Louis M. "Mick" Colvin Scholarship offered by the Certified Angus Beef® (CAB®) brand.

This year, $15,000 will be split among five undergraduate scholarships, in the amounts of $5,000, $4,000, $3,000, $2,000 and $1.000. College juniors and seniors who have shown commitment to the beef industry, either through coursework or activities, are encouraged to apply by the Dec. 2 deadline. Applications are evaluated on involvement and scholastic achievement, communication skills and reference letters. A new opportunity, an additional $5,000 graduate level scholarship, will also be given to a full-time masters or doctorate student conducting research related to high-quality beef production. Applications for that award are due Jan. 13, 2012. "The graduate level scholarship will build on what the Colvin Scholarship has always done," says Mick Colvin, who cofounded Certified Angus Beef LLC (CAB) in 1978 and served as president for 22 years. "We will be able to groom the next great scientist supporting premium beef." The funds given have more than doubled since 2009. "It's very, very gratifying to see the amount we've offered grow over the years," Colvin says. "Our partners have really pitched in and they've made this scholarship what it is today." supporters Those raised a record $92,000 in scholarship monies at a golf outing and auction held during the brand's annual conference this year in Sunriver, Ore. The

Pursuing a passion for dollars go into an account that generates the interest proceeds used to fund these scholarships each year. That ensures the longevity of the program and its impact on the industry.

The 2012 golf outing sponsorship was purchased by Palmer Food Services/G&C Food Distributors, Rochester, N.Y. The following companies also supported the live auction: Holten Meat Inc., East St. Louis, Ill; Cargill Meat Solutions, Wichita; Tyson Fresh Meats Inc., Dakota Dunes, S.D.; Sysco Columbia LLC, Columbia, S.C.; Cattleman's Choice Feedyard Inc., Gage, Okla.; Niman Ranch, Denver, Colo.; and from Canada, Retail Ready Food Products Inc., Mississauga, Ontario; GFS Montreal & Quebec; and Boucherville Quebec. The top two recipients also win an all-expense-paid trip to the 2012 CAB Annual Conference, September 19-21 in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. This is an opportunity to interact with leaders throughout the production, packing, retail and foodservice industries. "I can't say enough good about the past winners," Colvin says. "They're great, great students and I'm proud to be associated with them." The Colvin Scholarship Fund began in 1999 when Colvin retired as CAB executive director. The scholarships recognize his role in making dreams a reality and inspiring others to be their best. Colvin co-founded the CAB program in 1978, leading to establishing the world's leading brand of fresh beef.

New reality series documents work of veterinarians and their client farms in caring for livestock

Five livestock veterinarians and about 20 of their client farms in four states volunteered to be filmed for a new reality series, to give consumers a personal and up-close view of responsible livestock farming in the U.S. The series, "Veterinarians on Call," captures the pride and responsibility of veterinarians in their dayto-day work on U.S. farms and ranches, working with their client livestock farmers and other professionals raising pork, beef and dairy animals. Presented by Pfizer Animal Health, Veterinarians On Call premiered in September on channel

YouTube.com/Veterinaria ns OnCall or YouTube.com /VeterinariansOnCall.

"We as veterinarians and farmers have great stories to tell of the care we provide to animals on the farm," said veterinarian Dr. Paul Ruen of Fairmont, Minn., immediate past president of the American Association of Swine Veterinarians (AASV), one of five veterinarians who volunteered to host a film crew on his job. "I am proud to explain that I wear several hats as a pig veterinarian including diagnostician, animal welfare advocate. and public health officer. My hope is that the consumers of America's meat products will feel a bit more connected to the families and farms that work professionally and with care in raising food for their tables."

Another featured "Veterinarian On Call" is Dr. Peter Ostrum, recognized by millions of movie fans as "Charlie" from the classic 1971 film Willy Wonka & The Chocolate Factory. Today. Dr. Ostrum has transitioned from "candy man" to milk man and is practicing as a dairy cow veterinarian in Lowville, N.Y.

"By participating in this project, I hoped to draw the public's attention to the hard-working men and women who own and operate our country's family farms," says Dr. Ostrum. "We want consumers to know that food safety and animal welfare issues are top priorities for both veterinarians and dairy farmers alike."

Dr. Angie Supple, selfproclaimed "city girl turned pig vet" with degrees from Notre Dame and Purdue Universities, serves a variety of clients from small operations to big commercial facilities.

"My clients and other hog producers take a lot of pride in what they do. It's important to them to raise pigs with the animals' welfare in mind," she says. "At the end of the day, it's important for the consumer to know that the animals were raised humanely and safely."

The first season of Veterinarians On Call also features two other veterinarians who volunteered to allow a film crew to document their work:

• Dr. Ross Kiehne of St. Peter, Minn., alumnus of the University of Minnesota who has been working for the Swine Vet Center as a pig veterinarian for 12 years throughout Minnesota and Iowa as well as other states and countries

• Dr. Don Goodman, of Beard-Navasota Veterinary Hospital in Texas, a 30-year veterinarian with a degree from Texas A&M

The Veterinarians On Call reality series is part of Pfizer Animal Health's Commitment to Veterinarians™ platform, which offers support to the veterinary and animal health industry through training and education, research and development, investing in the future of the profession, and philanthropy.

"A key part of our mission at Pfizer Animal Health is to help our customers raise healthy animals," said Clint Lewis, president, U.S. operations, who personally helped develop the series during the past two years. "We want to help showcase to the public the valuable, critical work of veterinarians and farmers dedicated to responsible and safe care of livestock animals."

The grain markets did not have a particularly strong week due to the choppy action and fears about the European debt situation, but when it was all said and done the December corn closed at the highest level in over a month. The 5<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub> cent gain for the week wasn't all that impressive, but the 25 cent move off of Wednesday's low was certainly good. The December KW also closed at the highest level in a month and gained 15 cents for the week, while the January soybeans picked up 5½ cents despite being down 18 on Friday.

It was a little disappointing that the grains didn't benefit more from the EU getting a plan together to bail out the Greeks, but there was a sense of relief in the markets in general that they got something done. U.S. stock markets were very strong again following the previous week's very important breakout of the trading multi-month range. Crude oil was also very strong with the front months now solidly above $90 and heading for $100. The rising price of crude oil is hopefully a sign of a strengthening economy, but we will have to be very cautious as Friday's unemployment report draws near.

I think that the problem with the grain markets is still demand. There are still ideas out there that corn and soybean yields will be cut, which will tighten supplies, but right now there seems to be a lot of complacency when it comes to demand improving and drawing down stocks. The export sales report certainly didn't help matters with corn at 336,200 MT, wheat at 316,800 MT, and soybeans at 227,600 MT. None of those numbers are good enough to meet expectations. We had three good weeks of corn export sales. but then this report shows

The SE ¼ NW ¼ 28-7-6, Riley County, Kansas, except 1 acre in the southeast corner.

The farm is well located on the west side of US 77 (Tuttle Creek Blvd.), on the south edge of Randolph.

This farm, 38 acres, more or less, consists of 13 acres cropland in 3 fields, with the rest being hay meadow and timber.

This is a well located, unique place, and offers a mix of income producing cropland, some nice native grass hay meadows, and excellent wildlife habitat. About 60% of the farm is timber, creek, brush and other ideal habitat for whitetail deer, turkey, and other wildlife. The west cropland field is open land. The middle and east field are planted to wheat. This would be an ideal building site, with highway frontage and nearby electrical service.

The 2010 taxes were $71.08.

TERMS: Ten (10) percent down, the balance due in 30 days. Possession will be given at closing, subject to the tenant's rights on the land planted to wheat.

tent enough to force USDA to raise the export estimate. Ethanol production has been very strong for two weeks and many analysts expect to see a record production week very soon, but there is still fear about what will happen after the blenders credit is phased out. The current production level suggests that USDA is too low with their production estimate. but not everyone is convinced it will last that demand isn't consis-

As for the wheat and soybeans, the export market keeps proving USDA right when they suggest that we will have adequate supplies for a long time to come and the soybean just show how dependent we tremely bullish fundamental situation. The current ending stocks estimate of 866 million bushels is the lowest since 1996, but demand is 4 billion bushels greater than it was then. The current export estimate is only 1.6 billion, which is the lowest since 2002 when it was 1.588 billion. Exports could improve by 200 million bushels and still be the worst since 2002. With a one bushel to the acre cut in yield and exports at a more normal level of 1.8 billion, ending stocks would fall below 600 million. At the current rate of demand, stocks below 600 million would probably cause local shortages and demand would have to be rationed. We are very close to a situation like that, so if you do sell cash grain, you have to replace it with call options because there is still tremendous upside potential it this market. Cash cattle traded as high as $125 in Nebraska, but that didn't help the December live cattle very much, because that contract lost $3.10 for the week. The beef market was firm and the choice select is still wide, which is bullish, but I really don't like the technical outlook of the market. Friday's close below the 50day moving average look's ominous. I generally like to see two consecutive closes below the 50-day moving average before selling and that could easily happen on Monday. I look for the next support level to come in around $117.00 in the December contract. The February contract stalled out where expect at the $126 area and I look for that market to head for the $120 area this week Schwieterman Market-

The artwork Bjorndyke by Johnson refers to the "Bjorndyke Mine" which was located 3/4 mile northwest of Lindsborg. A project of Elias Bjorn was started in the late 1800s to early 1900. The mine was a horizontal hole approximately 200 feet into the southeast section of Biorn Hill. Very little gold was recovered, and the mine was stopped. Although now caved in, there are still remnants of the mine's location today.

Disease carried by insects killing deer in Kansas

(AP) - Deer in some parts of Kansas are dying this summer from a disease spread by tiny insects that proliferated because of an extended drought, state wildlife officials said.

The deer are being felled by epizootic hemorrhagic disease, or EHD, which is spread by midges, tiny insects that pass infected blood from one animal to another. Because of the drought, the deer are drinking from shallow, stagnant water, which is a perfect breeding ground for midges, the Wichita Eagle reported.

"We had a guy in who'd found 13 dead deer in two sections," said Lloyd Fox, Kansas Department of Wildlife, Parks and Tourism big game program them found from about all over the eastern one-third of the state."

It also has been documented as far west as Butler and McPherson counties in recent months.

Deer with EHD often have their tongues hanging out and have lesions on their tongues. Their hooves often fall off and they eventually head to water because of high fever. Cattle can catch EHD but it rarely kills them, and sheep can be vulnerable to the disease. The disease cannot be passed to humans or pets.

Fox estimates some areas in northern and eastern Kansas may lose 25 to 30 percent of the deer herd this year. But many places in Kansas are losing only a few animals.

"In some areas (in other states) they find more than 100 deer. Most of our employees haven't found more than two or three together," Fox said. One game warden found five dead deer together in Greenwood County.

Joshua Whitehill, of Latham, said he saw four deer, three that were trophy-sized bucks, thought to have died from the disease in southeast Butler County.

"is definitely EHD going to have an effect on those who hunt mature bucks this year," Whitehill said.

Fox said the worst EHD outbreak in Kansas was about 1990 in north-central regions of the state. A few years later, the disease apparently killed a high percentage of the pronghorn antelope population in the Flint Hills. In western Kansas, where water is usually scarce, deer have developed immunities to the disease.

Fox said temperatures cold enough to kill insects are the best way to fight the disease. And he said a good rain would help slow the disease because water is more plentiful and the deer spread out.

Agronomists assess winter canola's potential as a dual-purpose crop

Winter canola can be a valuable alternative crop for many producers in Kansas. It would be even more valuable to some producers if they could utilize winter canola as a dual-purpose forage and grain crop, said Mike Stamm, K-State Research and Extension canola breeder.

Using canola as a dualpurpose crop is a new practice and more information is needed regarding the forage potential of canola and the effects of grazing on grain yields, he said.

"Simulated grazing studies of winter canola agronomists over the past Research and Extension, few growing seasons. Preliminary results show that canola makes high-quality, nutritious, and highly digestible forage. However, ranchers who graze winter canola can expect a reduction in final grain yield," Stamm said.

In the tests, he observed varietal differences in grain yield after the forage was harvested.

"The yield of varieties with a prostrate growth habit, or those that produce rosettes that hug the ground was about the same as that of ungrazed checks," he said.

One such variety, named Griffin, was released in 2011 by K-State the first dual-purpose forage and grain variety. Seed of Griffin will be available for planting in fall 2013, Stamm said.

P.O. Box 267 Eureka, KS 67045 620-583-5008 Office 620-583-7475

The availability and duration of canola forage is more weather dependent than it is for winter cereals, he says. Canola should not be grazed if the threat of too little fall growth for overwintering exists, which could be the case this year where emergence was delayed by dry weather, he said.

The amount of forage produced by winter canola is variable, said Todd White, K-State Research and Extension forage agronomist.

"Above-ground wet biomass has ranged from two to ten tons per acre, and dry weights have averaged about 0.4 to 2 tons per acre," White said.

This fall, canola will probably produce less forage than normal, Stamm added.

Ranchers report their animals develop a taste for canola after a few days of grazing it, and noticeably devour the crop before moving to different forages, Stamm said. Others have noticed cattle are not interested in the crop until after a hard freeze.

Some ranchers have seen daily gains greater than three pounds per day when grazing winter canola, White said.

"Preliminary grain yields show that simulated grazing of canola reduces grain yield by 50 percent in the fall, while grazing canola in the spring reduces grain yield by 70 percent," Stamm said.

For this reason, grazing is not recommended if the objective is to produce high grain yields, he added.

"Do not graze canola in the spring unless you intend to graze it out," he said.

Grass & Grain, November 1, 2011 Page 36 KDWPT to auction Garden City bison

In recent years, the Kansas Department of Wildlife, Parks, and Tourism (KDWPT) Sandsage Bison Range, near Garden City, has sold excess animals at an auction in Salina. However, this year, the area has a handful of adult and 3 <sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>-year-old bulls that must be removed from the herd. Because the Salina auction does not accept bulls older than 2<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> years, area managers have decided to sell these older bulls through a sealed bid auction

KDWPT is accepting sealed bids for the purchase of five bison bulls from this herd. Three of the bulls are mature adults 12-13 years old, originating from herds in the Wind Cave National Park in South Dakota and the National Bison Range in Montana. The other two are 3 ½year-old sub-adults originally from the Ft. Robinson, Neb., herd. All animals will be tested for brucellosis: no other testing will be done.

Bids must be submitted to the Kansas Dept of Wildlife, Parks and Tourism. Attention: Purchasing. 512 SE 25th Ave., Pratt, KS 67124. Bids may also be faxed to 620-672-6020. Animals will be sold in dollars per pound live weight, so the bidder must indicate the dollars per pound for each animal bid on. Completed bid sheets must be received no later than noon on Friday, Nov. 4. Purchasers may bid on more than days, at which time arrangements to pick up the animals will be made with the area manager. The purchaser is responsible for transporting the animals off the bison range. Animals may be picked up from Nov. 18 through Nov. 23. Payment must be cash or personal check if accompanied by a notarized authorization letter from the issuing bank. Payment is due at the time of pick-up once the animals have been weighed.

For more information. write Tom Norman, Herd Manager, Sandsage Bison Range and Wildlife Area, 785 S. Hwy 83, Garden City, KS 67846, or phone 620-276-8609 or 620-474-3645.
