Farmers' last chance to win $2,500 for their communities – deadline for America's Farmers Grow Communities program is November 30

During the season of giving, Kansas farmers can get into the holiday spirit by signing up to win $2.500 for their favorite local nonprofit organizations through America's Farmers Grow Communities, sponsored by the Monsanto Fund. One farmer in each of Kansas's 88 participating counties will win. Those farmers can share their holiday cheer with food pantries, fire departments, students at local schools and others by signing up and designating an organization in their communi-

Firefighters offer their time and put their lives on the line to give communities the gift of safety even during this family-focused time of

"I think the money from the Monsanto Fund was a gift from heaven," said David Shell, Shannon Volunteer Fire Department chief. "We are going to use the donation to buy scene lights."

This year, the program has expanded to include a total of 1,245 counties.

The addition of 41 new counties will result in an additional $102,500 in donations. In Kansas, the Monsanto Fund will invest a total of $220,000 toward nonprofit organizations in rural communities. Now through Nov. 30, 2011, farmers can apply online at www.growcom munities.com, or call 1-877-267-3332 to apply by phone. A $1 donation will be made to local United Way chapters for each farmer who signs up, to further enhance the investment in rural communities. Farmers who meet program eligibility requirements may enter regardless of involvement with previous Grow Communities programs. One winner will be selected at random from each of the 1,245 eligible counties, and the Monsanto Fund will announce winning farmers and recipient nonprofits in January

Eligible counties in Kansas include Allen, Anderson, Atchison, Barton, Bourbon, Brown, Butler, Chase, Cherokee, Cheyenne, Clay, Cloud, Coffey, Cowley, Crawford, Decatur. Dickinson. Doniphan, Douglas, Edwards, Finney, Ford, Franklin, Gove, Graham, Grant, Gray, Greeley, Greenwood, Harvey, Haskell, Jackson, Jefferson, Jewell, Johnson, Kearny, Kingman, Kiowa, Labette, Leavenworth, Lincoln, Linn, Logan, Lyon, Marion, Marshall, McPherson, Meade, Miami, Mitchell, Montgomery, Morris, Morton, Nemaha, Neosho, Norton, Osage, Osborne, Ottawa, Pawnee, Phillips, Pottawatomie, Pratt, Rawlins, Reno, Republic, Rice, Riley, Rooks, Saline,

Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay trade moderate. Demand very strong for dairy, stock cow and grinding alfalfa, moderate to strong for alfalfa pellets and grass hay. As fall harvest and baling activities wind down hay producers and dealers are taking inventory, trying to stretch the supply to cover the demand. The low milk price makes it even more challenging for dairies to cope with the high feed

Transporting hay continues to be expensive and it is hard to find enough trucks. Wheat pasture prospects are slim. If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange: www.kfb.org/hayandpasture /default.htm

Vandalism spree causes thousands in damage at five Kansas farms

(AP) - Some farmers in a central Kansas county where vandals damaged expensive equipment on five farms last week say the days of trusting people enough to leave keys in their tractors, trucks and combines are over.

Law enforcement officials have arrested one suspect and are searching for a second in the vandalism spree that occurred overnight on Thursday, October 27 night into early Friday the 28th on five farms near Clyde in northeast Cloud County. The damage occurred in a four-mile area roughly two miles south of the Cloud-Republic county line.

One of the farmers who reported damage, Rick Moore, said he suspects many farmers will begin pulling keys from their equipment when they aren't working.

"I guess we're a rural community that trusts everybody. Not any more. Not after this experience," Moore said.

Damage estimates ranged from $500,000 into the millions of dollars but no official figure has been determined, The Salina Journal reported.

Moore speculated that keys were still in the two combines, two trucks and two tractors that were damaged. The combines were run into trees and a tractor hooked to a 40foot disc smashed part of a field of standing corn and was run into a center pivot irrigation system.

Moore's tractor was found high-centered on hay bales, still running, after being detached from a grain cart. A semi and trailer were high-centered and still running on a terrace in a field and a grain truck was found in a ditch.

Jim Reedy said whoever took his tractor, which was hooked to a disc. damaged Adam and Sara Polansky's corn field and Ed and Jan Olson's center pivot. He estimated it would cost at least $100,000 to $140,000 to fix. The Polanskys own the other combine and tractor-trailer rig that were moved and damaged.

"Everybody's still kind of getting insurance companies called," said Mark Gram, whose combine went on a threequarter-mile journey and whose grain truck was found in a ditch.

County Attorney Rob Walsh said tread on tire tracks led officers to a pickup truck, and then the owner, who was ar-

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

We just can't get the Greeks out of the news. Uncertainty as to whether the Greeks would accept the austerity measures required by the bailout caused a lot of market jitters and a lot of volatility. It didn't help that we were dealing with the MF Global meltdown at the same time, which only added to the uncertainty. The problem now is that it looks like the Italians are next in line for a bailout and they will quickly replace the Greeks in the headlines. The Italian debt problem is much larger than the Greeks and will therefore cause much more volatility and fear in the markets as traders wonder which U.S. banks and trading firms will be impacted.

Wednesday is the November supply and demand report. Expectations are for slightly lower corn production and ending stocks and for steady soybean production, but higher ending stocks. For the wheat the average trade guess calls for slightly lower ending stocks. The numbers to keep an eye on will obviously be the corn and sovbean vield estimates, but also the acreage estimates for all fall crops, and there could be numerous demand estimate changes. Sovbean exports are a good candidate for a cut, but the corn export estimate is so low already, that USDA may start back tracking on that already. Ethanol production has been at a very strong pace so there is a possibility of a change to that estimate at some

The December corn has traded at $6.50 for 13 consecutive sessions, which would seem to indicate that everyone is pretty happy with the current price of corn. That may be true, but it is interesting to note that basis levels keep improving across the country, and in places like SW Kansas where elevators are paying as much as 40 over December and end users are paying as much as 80 over to get corn, that would be an indication that futures need to keep up with the "real" market.

It seems, however, that in order to break out of the trading range we have been stuck in, something will have to change. The market has proven that with corn at $6.50 or lower, rise, exports will get even worse. The one hope for wheat demand is rising corn prices and higher feed usage, but even that isn't much of a concern since USDA has only 160 million bushels of feed usage penciled in, which demand is stronger than USDA has estimated, but isn't a historically high figfutures traders are conure and isn't much considtent to let the cash market ering wheat is cheaper due the work of rationing than corn in most of the demand, because they are country. too scared of the world financial markets to place new, large, bets on the long side of the corn market. For several years the Chinese were relentless buyers of U.S. soybeans, but that seems to have changed. Now we get little bounces in the market when there are rumors of Chinese purchases, but confirmation of those rumors have been lacking. Unfortunately this is showing just how dependent we are on the Chinese to keep support under our sovbean market. If sales don't improve soon it won't be any problem at all to expand corn acreage and there won't be much "battle for acreage" at all.

On the charts, the January beans ran into trend line resistance and stalled out. There was little reason to push through the resistance after the poor export sales report this week and with no strength in the corn. If we get some fresh news, the $12.30 area will be key and a move through trend line resistance would be a signal to get long

There was cash cattle trade as high as $125 and the December live cattle gained about $5.50, so it was an impressive week. There were a few new contract highs in the deferred contracts of both the live cattle and feeder cattle futures, and as they say, bear markets don't make new contract highs.

However, the February live cattle stalled out at the $126 area proving once again that is a good place to put on hedges. I do, however, recommend selling a put or buying a call against the hedge since this market could get explosive. I don't think there is a lot of reason to be bearish the cattle market, but I do think caution is warranted.

K-State scientist discusses grain dust explosions

In the aftermath of an Oct. 29 grain elevator explosion in Atchison that claimed six lives and injured two others, Kansas State University grain scientist. Leland McKinnev said that while grain and other kinds of dust can be dangerous, steps can be taken to reduce risk.

"It's a real tragedy. Our thoughts and prayers go out to the people who are affected by this," he said.

McKinney answered questions relating to grain dust explosions.

Why do explosions happen sometimes in grain storage facilities?

McKinney: Several factors must be present for a grain dust explosion to occur. They all have to be present at the same time. These conditions are: 1) an ignition source, such as a hot bearing, welding or cutting; 2) an adequate concentration of low moisture grain dust; 3) the grain dust is in suspension: 4) the presence of oxygen; and 5) the ignition of the grain dust in an enclosure, such as an elevator.

Removing any of those factors reduces the likelihood of a grain dust explosion.

• What can grain storage facilities do to minimize the risk of explosions?

McKinney: Grain storage facilities can reduce their risk of a grain dust explosion with good housekeeping practices to reduce grain dust levels and by installing monitoring devices on equipment to detect overheating of bearings. Most primary explosions occur in a bucket elevator (leg). For that reason, modern facilities are designed with the leg on the outside of the facility in order to reduce risk. Older facilities were built with the leg in-

The cleanliness of the facility is also a factor. Most of the destruction in a grain dust explosion is caused by secondary explosions, or a series of explosions, that occur through the facility. It's important that grain elevators have a good housekeeping program so that they keep the concentration of dust down and be very aware of any points where ignition may occur.

OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration) has recognized that this (grain dust) is a potential workplace hazard, and has grain handling standards in the regulations that address precautions that need to be taken. They address cleanliness of the facility and other hazards that occur in grain handling facilities.

· Do these kinds of explosions happen often?

McKinney: During the 10vear period 1995-2005, there was an average of 10.5 explosions per year, according to statistics compiled by Robert Schoeff, professor emeritus here at K-State. He is now retired, but he devoted a major portion of his career toward collecting statistics and finding out why grain dust explosions occur. He was an internationally-recognized expert on the subject and his work resulted in a sharp decline in the number of explosions annually. That work included annual reports from 1980 to 2005 (K-State Research and Extension website:

ksre.ksu.edu/historicpublic ations/Dust_Exp.htm).

• Are we seeing more grain storage facility explosions than we used to?

McKinney: The highest frequency of grain dust explosions occurred in the late 1970s and early 1980s. A lot of fact finding went on at that time.

• Does it make a difference what kind of grain is stored?

McKinney: All grain dust can be explosive given the conditions described earlier are met. Other kinds of dust can be explosive. I believe it was in 2009, there was a sugar mill that exploded in Georgia. Other kinds of dust, when suspended and there's a source of ignition, can cause a fire or an explosion.

• Does low atmospheric humidity cause dust explo-

McKinney: There's no data that indicates that low atmospheric humidity causes dust explosions.

• Can high atmospheric humidity prevent dust explo-

McKinney: There's also no data that indicates that high atmospheric humidity prevents dust explosions.

· Is there more danger of an explosion in one type of construction - wood, steel or concrete - compared to others?

McKinney: No, there is no evidence to support that the type of construction makes a difference in grain dust explosions.

· Could this kind of accident happen in smaller, onfarm grain handling facili-

McKinney: I would say any time you have a situation where you have an ignition source and grain dust. there's the potential for a flash fire or an explosion.

"You have to stay on top of your maintenance and housekeeping and always have safety on your mind in whatever industry you're in." the grain scientist said.

Information about grain processing, including how to obtain a video, "Deadly Dust." is available on the K-State Department of Grain Science and Industry website: www.grains.ksu.edu.

USDA announces disaster assistance sign-up for 2010 crop losses

Adrian J. Polansky, state executive director of USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) in Kansas, today announced that the Supplemental Revenue Assistance Payments (SURE) program enrollment for 2010 crop year losses begins November 14, 2011.

"Producers across the state experienced several natural disasters during the 2010 crop year that caused hardship and financial losses to many agricultural operations," said Polansky. "The SURE program provides assistance to producers when disaster strikes, so I strongly encourage producers with 2010 crop losses to contact their local county FSA office to learn more about the program," he said.

To qualify for a SURE payment, the producer's operation must be located in a primary or contiguous county that was declared a disaster for 2010 and have at least a 10 percent production loss that affects one crop of economic significance. Producers with agricultural operations located outside a disaster county are eligible for SURE benefits if they had a production loss greater or equal to 50 percent of the normal production on the farm.

The following counties received a primary or contiguous disaster designation during 2010: Allen, Anderson, Atchison, Barber, Bourbon, Butler, Chase, Chautaugua, Cherokee, Chey-enne, Clark, Clay, Cloud, Coffey, Comanche, Cowley, Crawford, Decatur, Doniphan, Douglas, Elk, Ellis, Franklin, Geary, Gove, Graham, Greeley, Greenwood. Hamilton, Harper, Jackson, Jefferson, Jewell, Johnson, Labette, Lane, Leavenworth, Lincoln, Linn, Logan, Lyon, Marion, Marshall, Miami, Mitchell, Montgomery, Morris, Morton, Nemaha, Neosho, Ness, Osage, Osborne, Ottawa, Phillips, cy or plan of insurance for ning farmer or rancher do Pottawatomie, Rawlins, Republic, Riley, Rooks, Russell, Scott, Shawnee, Sheridan, Sherman, Smith, Thomas, Trego, Wabaunsee, Wallace, Washington, Wichita, Wilson, Woodson, and Wyandotte.

For crops of economic significance, producers all insurable crops through the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and obtained Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) coverage on non-insurable crops, if available. Eligible farmers and ranchers who meet the definition of a not have to meet this requirement. Forage crops intended for grazing are not eligible for SURE benefits.

For more information on SURE program eligibility requirements contact the FSA at the local USDA Service Center, or visit the website at Kansas.

"Beef Management — Piece of Cake" meeting planned in Sabetha

Winter management of the beef herd can be the most costly time of year for farmers and ranchers. To discuss the "wintering" of herds, Kansas State University Research Extension of Brown County and the Meadowlark District are partnering with the Delaware Watershed project. This Piece of Cake beef meeting will be held November 21st at 6:30 p.m. at the Community National Bank in

Dr Larry Hollis, KSU beef veterinarian, will be on hand to discuss vital health programs for beef herds. Dr. Hollis has years of experience as a practicing veterinarian and in the animal pharmaceutical field and now at the University level. He will be joined by the newest member of the KSU Animal Science department, Dr. Robert Weaber. Weaber will present a program on winter herd management.

Alternative winter water sites will be discussed by Will Boyer, KSU Water Quality Specialist, Marlene Bosworth, WRAPS coordinator and comments by Josh Roe, watershed economist from KSU.

All interested persons are invited to attend. There is no charge for this

Here she is: Miss America 2011 to discuss agriculture background, importance of food security in K-State presentation

America 2011, Teresa Scanlan, at Kansas State University will look at the importance of agriculture and food security to the nation.

Scanlan will speak at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 15, in K-State's McCain Auditorium as part of the Upson Lecture Series, which is sponsored by the K-State student and young alumni group, Food For Thought. The lecture is free and open to the public, but donations of nonperishable food items for the Flint couraged.

Wakeman competes as national finalist

Stuart Vincent Wakeman of Lawrence Free State FFA Chapter was named a national finalist in the Agricultural Mechanics Repair and Maintenance-Entrepreneurship Proficiency award program in July, 2011. Four finalists competed to be named the national winner during the 84th National FFA Convention, October 19-22, in Indianapolis.

The Agricultural Mechanics Repair and Maintenance-Entrepreneurship proficiency award program is sponsored by Briggs and Stratton Corporation Foundation Inc., as a special project of the National FFA Foundation. Each of the four finalists received a plaque and $500. The national winner of the Agricultural Mechanics Repair and Maintenance-Entrepreneurship received an additional $500 during a special ceremony at the national FFA convention.

Wakeman grew up in a family that collects and restores antique tractors. It was only a matter a time until he too became interested. He initially set the goal of being able to fix, replace, restore and reassemble a tractor. Once this was mastered, he began restoring on his own. His first antique tractor was a 1964 Farmall 806 Diesel which won him reserve overall champion at the Kansas State Fair. During his senior year, he restored a 1954 Case SC. Wakeman's parents are Rich and Mary and his FFA advisor is Laura Priest.

Stuart Wakeman is congratulated by Ms. Maggie Turek, marketing manager, Mr. Darrell Sickels, engineering manager, Hobart Welding Products, and Ms. Anita Schneider, national FFA alumni representing Briggs and Stratton Corporation Foundation, Inc.

Wilson FFA wins national

son FFA was recognized as a national champion during the 84th National FFA

Community, and Student to be the winner in that Convention. There are development. There are three areas to the National ten finalists in each area Chapter Program: Chapter, and those chapters compete members, Justine Dlabal and Ashley Zelenka, presented a ten-minute presentation about the Wilson FFA community development activities. Judges then asked the members ten minutes of questions about the activities. The Triple Crown in Kansas.

presentation, questions, member participation in activities, and innovation of the activities are evaluated. Wilson highlighted three community development activities including: Ag Day on the Farm, Roll Out the Rain Barrels, and Shoes for Souls. Wilson FFA members, Emily Beneda and Andrea Mattas, represented Wilson in the chapter development competition.

"Our new goal is to be a finalist for the Model of Excellence award next year which will be a new award," said advisor Lindsey Huseman. "This is an overall award similar to the

2011 Honda Big Red

Garber's Price: $10,500 (*MSRP $11,699)

Garber's 56885 Hwy. 136, Fairbury, NE 68352

We are very confident that we would have been a finalist this year if the award was in place. The national chapter awards start over March 1 – everyone gets a clean slate.

"The students also want to continue to leave a legacy in our school and community," Huseman continued. "They have bigger and better service projects planned for this year. They want to recruit more members. They want to encourage more students to be leaders in the organization. I don't expect a slowdown anytime soon. FFA doesn't have an off-season."

Cowboy Up by Ron Wilson Poet Lariat

Llama Love

The tailgate of the trailer slammed shut as the last of the livestock were loaded. The final supplies were put in the truck, and as the previous owners watched, the trailer pulled away for the last time.

That can be an emotional moment, when a family sells the last of the livestock they have raised through the years. In this case, it was especially bittersweet, for these weren't just any livestock. These were some special llamas.

Jim and Golda Houchins have raised llamas in rural Shawnee County for more than 20 years. They did well, exhibiting them at such places as the Kansas State Fair and the American Royal. Most of their current llamas were raised as babies by the Houchins themselves, so they developed a close human-animal bond. When the time came for the Houchins to retire, they wanted to find just the right home for their llamas. My wife and I were fortunate enough to be the recipients of these llamas, but it is bittersweet.

"This is hard for us," Jim said on the day we loaded them up. "These are like pets." It was obvious that they had taken very good care of the llamas.

I know there are people who have had good experiences with llamas and there are people who have had bad experiences with llamas. Our experience, like that of the Houchins, has been very good. I have found our llamas to be smart, clean, good 4-H animals for our kids. Llamas connect with people in a way atypical of a cow or pig. It reminds me of the very first llama we bought, when I was skeptical but came to really appreciate them. It inspired the following poem.

Now our truck and trailer is carrying the Houchins' llamas down their lane for the last time. Jim and Golda slowly walk toward the house, and give a final wave farewell.

Llanding a Llama

by Ron Wilson, Poet Lariat

Part 1

We were down at the State Fair on an innocent day out.

Just walkin' through the barns and lookin' all about. And over in one barn, by a set of good hay feeders, They had a nice display, set up by llama breeders. And they had some live llamas that caught my daughter's eye. They were kind of unusual so we figured we'd stop by. We met these llama folks and learned about their stock. I walked on down the aisle figurin' it was harmless talk. But when I saw my daughter later, she said "Hey Dad, good news.

Mom and I decided we'll buy a llama that we choose." So I quickly went to Ma and with a sense of dread, Said, "We need one of those critters like a hole in the head.' But she gave me all the reasons, for which she has great ability,

As to why this would help our daughter learn responsibility. She said llamas were smart and a gentle critter too. They would make a good project for our daughter to do. She could have one for 4-H, and do the daily care, Learn grooming and feeding, and training to prepare. I could tell you the whole story but you know just how it went. 'Cause I know from years' experience there's a time to fold your tent. When they get their mind made up, there's no stoppin' that girl and momma. That's the truth of how we became proud owners of a llama.

Part 2

So Octavia the llama joined the family that day, And what she's come to mean is more than I can say. The kids like to halter her, and walk her down the road. Now our neighbor wants a pack llama. to help carry a load. When a llama bonds with a family, it is a powerful force. Our kids can lead Octavia through our makeshift obstacle course. Octavia shares a pen with the family dog. They get along great in more ways than I can catalog. So I guess that my wife and our daughter were right, When they picked out Octavia the llama that night. She's an animal that just tends to fascinate, And having her join our family's been great. Now she's home at our place, and that's not the best part: She's not just at our farm, she's at home in our heart.

Harold Amstutz, D.V.M., and Dan Upson, D.V.M., M.S. Ph.D., were honored as the inaugural inductees to the Cattle Production Veterinarian Hall of Fame (CPVHOF) Sept. 24. A special banquet was held in their honor during the American Association of Bovine Practitioners (AABP) annual conference in St. Louis.

"During the course of our industry's history, the art and science of veterinary medicine have been intertwined, and there always has been a symbiosis as a result," said Keith Sterner, D.V.M., keynote speaker for the event "Veterinary medicine has been instrumental in improving the health of cattle, as well as in helping to ensure that foods derived from them are healthy and wholesome for consumers."

The CPVHOF was established to celebrate the rich traditions of American cattle production veterinary medicine by honoring the exceptional men and women who have made lasting contributions to their profession. Inductees are true pioneers whose achievements span their entire careers. The inductees were selected from among their peers, and all AABP and Academy of Veterinary Consultants (AVC) members had the opportunity to vote for one beef and one dairy veterinari-

Dr. Dan Upson, Manhattan 2011 Beef Inductee

Dr. Upson is best known for his commitment to helping cattle producers provide safe, wholesome beef through residue

Hundreds of cattle avoidance and providing practitioners with knowledge and guidance for the prudent use of animalhealth products in beef cattle production medicine. He helped lay the groundwork for regulations in drug compounding and for veterinary prescription drug distributors. His Handbook of Clinical Veterinary Pharmacology is in its fourth edition and is widely used throughout the field of veterinary medicine.

"Dr. Upson is best presented as an emotion, an attitude and a passion for doing what is right as we produce the food that feeds this nation and this world. He was the pioneer in applying the science of pharmacology to clinical applications for food-animal practitioners. And in his work, he wanted nothing else but to help all of us get it right," said Mike Apley, D.V.M., Ph.D., a past student of Dr. Upson's who presented the award. "We always knew that Dr. Upson was investing in us. It was more than his job; we were his life's work. I am among a lucky few able to learn both academic and life lessons under the tutelage of Dr. Upson."

A native of Hutchinson, Dr. Upson received his bachelor's, master's, doctorate and veterinary medical degrees from Kansas State University. He established a private practice in Pretty Prairie for seven years and then held a 35year tenure at K-State, teaching pharmacology and serving as a section leader in veterinary Extension. He also enjoyed working as a referee for college football games. He now is professor emeritus in pharmacology at K-

"Folks, I am blessed," said Dr. Upson, 82, as he received the award. "I accept this recognition on behalf of my friends and my colleagues, who I hope are one in the same. I am grateful, honored, pleased and humbled."

Dr. Upson is a past president of the Kansas Veterinary Medical Association and the K-State Alumni Association board of directors. He also served on the AVC board of directors for three terms. Dr. Upson and his wife, Stephanie, live in Manhattan, and have three children: Connie. Ron and Elizabeth.

Dr. Harold Amstutz. West Lafavette. Ind. 2011 Dairy Inductee

Dr. Amstutz is well known for pioneering and supporting both national and international organizations for bovine veterinarians. He held several leadership positions throughout his career, including roles as president of the World Association for Buiatrics and the American Association of Veterinary Clinicians. He also served as chairman of the organizing committee and president of the American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine. He also served AABP in various capacities, including 23 years as the organization's first executive vice president.

"Mentoring is about how we expect ourselves to take on challenges, and challenge ourselves in our endeavors. Those are the real legacies of mentorship," said Dr. Apley. "Few people have the combination of knowledge, passion and sheer force of personality to be one of the drivers of the face of an industry."

Both of the inaugural inductees were outstanding mentors to countless veterinarians during their combined 77 years in aca-

Conserving our future: K-State researcher to present information on CRP decision-making and changing agricultural landscape

The Conservation Reserve Program will be the topic of a presentation by a Kansas State University agricultural economics researcher for the department of geography colloquium series.

Russell Graves, research associate in agricultural economics, will present "The Conservation Reserve Program and the Changing Kansas Agricultural Landscape" at 3:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 11, in 132 Seaton

Charles Martin, interim head of the geography department, said the research Graves will present is funded by the National Science Foundation, and is part of a joint project between K-State and the University of Kansas, "Biofuels and Climate Change: Farmers' Land-Use Decisions."

Since the Conservation Reserve Program came to be in 1985, Graves said the program has been utilized by approximately onethird of all Kansas landowners. The state will have more than 2.3 million acres of Conservation Reserve Program land expiring from 10-year set-aside contracts between 2009-2013, the third highest total in the country.

"As part of a large National Science Foundation grant program involving researchers from K-State and KU, I have been involved in a major land-use survey of 10,000 Kansas farmers regarding their land-use decision-making practices," Graves said. "One aspect of the survey addressed considerations

for conservation practices. and in particular, decision-making practices related to expiring CRP contracts.

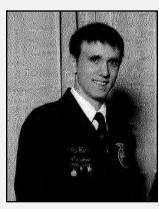

As the program presents a steady source of income, especially as farmers become more elderly or as production costs continue to increase, Graves said that a number of landowners will choose to renew their expired contracts. Emerging markets for cellulosic feedstocks. such as corn stover, sweet sorghum and switch grass, may provide an alternative land-use option for those Kansas farmers faced with an expiring Conservation Reserve Program contract.

"Agriculture has long been viewed as an important part of the Kansas economy, so anything that affects the agricultural landscape is of interest to many Kansans," Martin tradition of education and research in agriculture, such as the work Russell is doing."

Graves' research interests include Conservation Reserve Program decision-making practices, especially related to potential biofuel productions, as well as changing irrigation practices in southwest Kansas. Graves, who earned his doctorate in geography from the University of Wisconsin-Madison,

Harris named FFA national winner

Greg Owen Harris of the Chapman FFA chapter was named a national winner of the Diversified Crop Production- Entrepreneurship Proficiency award during the 84th National FFA Convention, October 19-22 in Indianapolis.

Proficiency awards recognize FFA members who excelled as agricultural entrepreneurs, employees or volunteers while they gained hands-on career experience. Diversified Crop Production-Entrepreneurship is one of 47 FFA proficiency award categories offered at local, state and national levels. The Diversified Crop Production - Entrepreneurship proficiency award program is sponsored by CHS as a special project of the National FFA Foundation. In recognition of being a finalist, each of the four finalists received a plaque and $500. The national winner of the Diversified Crop Production-Entrepreneurship received an additional $500 during a special ceremony at the convention.

Planning ahead and doing

By Miranda Reiman

"If momma ain't happy, ain't nobody happy."

Surely you've heard that phrase and get what it means: If the household caregiver isn't in a good mood, it trickles down to the rest of the family.

At a recent seminar, a management consultant applied that same concept to animal caretakers. When they're not happy, the herds aren't happy. When ranchers or feedlot employees are unhappy or feeling stress, how much pride can they take in the job they're doing?

Call it mammalian empathy or stress-related errors of management, but those bad feelings are contagious across species. And a growing body of research says cattle that never have a bad day do better all the way through to the packinghouse.

From an animal's perspective, what exactly does that mean, never having a bad day?

There are variables that no caregiver can completely control, like weather or sickness. But that doesn't mean a herdsman is helpless; there is much you can do. Approaches like strategic windbreaks or bedding cattle can make them more comfortable in the winter months. Sprinklers and shade can ease the sweltering summer heat.

much as is humanly possible), avoiding "hot shots" and hollering, and focusing on the natural tendencies of the animal can make even the most stressful days seem like good times to those cat-

You care. Those animals are your lifeblood. You're entrusted with their wellbeing and they're your profit center. But if you have employees, either family or outside hired help, do they feel the same way? Is that passion coursing through their veins?

This management consultant suggested those folks keep their purpose top of mind. They're not just feeding cows and processing calves. They're helping to feed the world. Ask them for suggestions and input —an outside perspective never hurts and they might be happier if you show that you value their opinions.

Make sure they know that how well they do their job matters - not only for today, but in the long-run bigger picture. Do they realize that the way calves are handled affects performance, both in the feedlot and on the rail?

Many hurdles to happiness for man and beast can be overcome with more communication, more planning. That may not come naturally to every "get your hands dirty" type of manager, but it'll be worth it in the

Especially if, by keeping those calves happily gaining and grading, you make life better for them, for your family and for millions of consumers. That's sure to put a smile on momma's face, along with all those

EPA, DOE to study potential for renewable energy possibilities on Farmland Industries Nitrogen Plant Site in Lawrence

ment of Energy's (DOE) National Renewable Energy Laboratory are collaborating on a project to evaluate the feasibility of siting renewable energy production at the Farmland Industries Nitrogen Plant Site in Lawrence. The study, valued up to $35,000, will explore the potential for a biopower facility or a biorefinery on the site, and will evaluate the technical and economic opportunities and challenges at the fertilizer products from 1954 until it closed in 2001. The City of Lawrence plans to redevelop the property as a business park for tenants engaged in industry, business and research.

The 467-acre former Farmland Industries Nitrogen Plant produced an array of nitrogen-based

The city intends to provide the infrastructure and support necessary to attract tenants that incorporate principles of sustainability into their construction plans and operations. Renewable energy generation onsite is critical to Lawrence's redevelopment vision for the site.

"Renewable energy is a vital part of America's energy future. By using wind, solar, geothermal, and other renewable energy sources, we reduce our dependence on fossil fuels while at the same time reducing greenhouse gas emissions from other sources of energy production," said EPA Region 7 Administrator Karl Brooks.

EPA's RE-powering America's Land Initiative encourages renewable energy development on current and formerly contaminated land and mine sites when it is aligned with the community's vision for the site. The collaboration pairs EPA's expertise on contaminated sites with DOE's expertise in renewable energy.

As part of the RE-Powering America's Land Initiative, EPA is investing approximately $1 million for projects across the United States aiming to decrease the amount of green space used for development while continuing to ensure the protection of people's health, the environment and provide economic benefits to local communities. including job creation. EPA Region 7, which is comprised of Iowa, Kansas Missouri, Nebraska, and nine tribal nations, is one of only three regions to have four sites selected, with one in each state of the region.

David began his Hereford career in 1972 when he helped start Mill Creek Ranch, Alma, after graduating from Kansas State University.

"It is a humbling feeling to be elected president of the American Hereford Association," David says. "It is also an exciting experience for me to be a part of the Hereford breed's successes, our breed's increase in demand, and to help our membership reap the rewards that our breed has to offer the cattle industry. I look forward to working with the Board of Directors, the AHA staff and our membership to promote the Hereford breed."

Kansas equipment dealer expanding to Missouri

(AP) - A Wichita-based farm equipment company whose roots date to the early 1940s has announced it is expanding to Missouri with the purchase of a Kansas City dealership.

The Wichita Eagle reports that Foley Equipment Co. plans to purchase Dean Machinery of Kansas City, Mo., in a deal that is expected to close in January.

The acquisition will give Foley an additional five counties in Kansas, meaning the company will have outlets in 104 of the state's 105 counties. It will also expand its presence to 40 counties in Missouri.

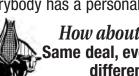

It is not clear how the acquisition will affect employees. Foley Equipment has 531 employees, Dean Machinery has 315.

Record high hay prices straining Kansas dairies

(AP) - A summer of drought that wilted pastures and alfalfa fields has led to record high hay prices this fall and looming shortages to feed cattle this winter.

Experts say those feeling the misery most keenly are the nation's dairies, where milk cows need top quality hay at a time when milk prices are slipping. By contrast, producers of stock cattle typically don't require the most expensive hay to fatten their livestock for slaughter and can also more easily absorb higher feed costs because beef prices are high

Cattle producers also have more flexibility in reducing their herd sizes during drought years than do dairymen, whose operations require extensive milking facilities.

Prices for most dairy and feed quality hay have about doubled compared with a year ago, setting an all-time- high record.

Top quality alfalfa usually the last cutting of alfalfa during the ideal cooler weather of fall - is fetching as high as $310 a ton in Kansas. The same hay hauled down to dairies in drought-plagued Texas or New Mexico can cost as much as $350 a ton or more. Even stock cow hay in Kansas is fetching between $230 and $250 a ton.

Alfalfa is preferred by dairymen to other hay for milk cows because of its high protein content.

At the Agriculture Department's market news office in Dodge City, hay market reporter Steve Hessman said this is the worst year he has seen in the 20 years he has been

"Everything has been to increase the demand or shorten the supply," Hessman said. "That is what has made it worse than normal from any other year where we have been through shortages,'

Service reported hay and be purchased. forage supplies were short to very short in 56 percent of Kansas. Just 40 percent had adequate supplies, and 4 percent had a sur-

Many Kansas producers shipped their hay to drought-plagued Texas and Oklahoma where they could find the highest prices. That has left many Kansas dairy and stock cattle producers scrambling to finding enough hay to feed their livestock this winter.

Hessman estimated half of the hay that will be fed to livestock this winter in Kansas is coming in from Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and even as far away as Canada.

Kansas already started out with fewer hay acres this spring because when hay prices were down, many farmers plowed up their alfalfa fields and planted corn instead. The 650,000 acres of alfalfa in Kansas this year was the lowest acreage number since at least 1980, Hessman said.

"We started out short on acres and then we had the drought on top of it and high demand on top of that - and that is why this has created the perfect storm for shortage and high demand and high prices," Hessman said.

Kansas is baling the very last of its hay fields now. Making matters worse here is that southwest Kansas - where the state's best irrigated hay is grown was so dry producers came up against their water allotments on more than half of the irrigated circles and didn't have that last cutting of "real good hay" Hessman said.

Many dairymen in Kansas have their own land where they can grow hay or other roughage for themselves and can weather hay shortages better than their counterparts in the Texas Panhandle or New Mexico, where every mouthful cattle eat must

At least some Texas dairymen are trying to survive the drought by leasing their milking cows to dairies in places such as Nebraska that have gotten more rain and have better feed supplies, said Mike Bodenhausen, executive director of the Kansas Dairy Association.

Jon and Jan Dreith, Randolph, are repeat buyers at the Downey Ranch and Kniebel Cattle Company sale, which was held at Downey Ranch southeast of Manhattan on November 4.

Duane Erickson, Ryan Theel and Barbara Theel, all of Alma attended the Downey Ranch and Kniebel Cattle Company sale on November 4, looking to purchase a good herd bull.

Poor wheat tillering, root development may be due to aluminum toxicity

If wheat growth and vigor is poor this fall, one possible cause is aluminum toxicity associated with low-pH soils, said Dorivar Ruiz Diaz, K-State Research and Extension nutrient management specialist.

Aluminum toxicity begins to occur where soil pH levels are less than 5.0 and potassium chloride-extractable free aluminum levels are greater than 25 parts per million, Ruiz Diaz said. Some varieties of wheat, such as Everest and Overley, have better tolerance to low-pH soils and high aluminum levels than other varieties, such as Fuller.

The symptoms of aluminum toxicity include poor tillering and sometimes, but not always, a purplish color, he said.

"In addition, older leaves may appear drought stressed and withered. Plants will either be stunted throughout the season even with adequate moisture and nitrogen, or may even die," he said.

High concentrations of aluminum will reduce development of the roots, giving them a short stubby appearance

"The roots will often have a brownish color, and the root tips may have a burned appearance. This effect on roots will limit nutrient uptake, and plants may show some deficiency symptoms even with good nutrient levels," Ruiz Diaz

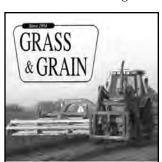

In addition, low soil pH

(below 5.0) can reduce the availability of plant nutrients such as calcium, magnesium, phosphorus, and potassium.

There's not much a producer can do to correct aluminum toxicity problems once the wheat has emerged, he said.

"However, the producer should make a note of this condition and take action before planting another crop on that field. Lime application on low-pH soil should be considered a high priority. Even halfrates of lime will do some good," he said. "In addition to liming, it helps to use P starter fertilizer when planting wheat on low-pH soils, which would help to reduce free aluminum in the soil solution."

cases of this problem this fall, wheat may grow out of the condition later in the season, Ruiz Diaz added.

"This is assuming that soil pH deeper in the profile is higher and growing roots can reach these areas with better pH levels as plants develop later in the season. However, even for a crop that may grow out of this, the effect on yield potential can be significant," he said.

The reserve champion Balancer heifer at the American royal was AHL Forever Lady 114X, owned by LeDoux Ranch and JW LeDoux, Agenda.

Jan Harris, Grainola, Okla., and Larry Olsen, Maple City, discuss the merits of several bulls at the Downey Ranch and Kniebel Cattle Company November 4 sale.

By STARTING TIME

We sold 1612 cattle November 1. Steer and heifer calves were in good demand at steady prices. Feeder steers and heifers were steady to $4.00 higher. Cows and bulls sold $1.00-3.00 higher.
