

Consider growth regulator herbicides for burndown applications

Weeds can be controlled prior to planting corn or soybean by using preplant tillage, herbicides, or both, according to Aaron Hager, associate professor of weed science at the University of Illinois.

Weed control may be improved when more than one active herbicide ingredient is included in the burndown application. Burndown applications often include growth-regulator herbicides, such as 2,4-D. Both amine and ester formulations of 2,4-D are labeled for preplanting burndown applications, but the ester formulation is usually preferred over the amine formulation.

Hager explains, "The low water solubility of an ester makes it less likely to be moved into the soil by precipitation, where it could injure germinating crop seeds." Also, esters are better able to penetrate the waxy surfaces of weed leaves, so they provide better control of large weeds, especially when air temperatures are cool.

Some 2,4-D ester formulations can be applied without a waiting period before planting corn, while a seven-day wait is recommended for others. "When applied prior to planting soybean, wait at least seven days between application of one pint per acre and planting, or 15 to 30 days between application of up to two pints per acre and planting," said Hager. "Pay careful attention to label statements of any 2,4-D formulation used prior to crop planting."

Some retail applicators might be experiencing difficulty acquiring sufficient quantities of 2,4-D to meet the need for burndown applications. "Substituting an amine formulation of 2,4-D for an ester formulation is possible," Hager said, "but remember, there are significant differences between these formulations." Specifically:

- Higher application rates might be necessary because an amine formulation does not penetrate the weed's leaf cuticle as easily as an ester formulation does.

- Amine formulations are less volatile but more water soluble than ester formulations, meaning that they are more likely to move into the soil after precipitation, increasing the likelihood of crop injury.

- The interval between application of 2,4-D amine and soybean planting is longer (15 days for one pint or less, 30 days for greater than one pint) than the interval with ester formulations.

Dicamba is another growth-regulator herbicide used to control existing vegetation before planting. Several commercially available products contain dicamba, but not all of them are labeled for application prior to crop (especially soybean) planting.

"In comparison with 2,4-D, dicamba provides greater control of chickweed, henbit and prickly lettuce, comparable control of dandelion, and less control of horseweed and mustard species," said Hager.

Application rates used in burndown applications can impact the interval between application and planting. For example, Clarity can be applied at up to 16 fluid ounces per acre before planting corn (up to eight fluid ounces on coarse soils or medium- and fine-textured soils with less than 2.5 percent organic matter) with no interval between application and planting. However, the 16-ounce use rate requires a minimum accumulation of one inch of precipitation and a 28-day waiting interval between application and soybean planting. An eight-ounce application rate still requires a minimum accumulation of one inch of precipitation, but the waiting interval is only 14 days. These intervals must be observed prior to planting soybean or crop injury might occur.

THE AUCTIONEERS FOR COMPLETE AUCTION SERVICE!

Knitter and Minge honored for 40 years of service to KSRE

Little did they know in 1971 when Frieda Knitter and Ruthann Minge stood as classmates and merely acquaintances among the graduating class of Brown Mackie College that over 40 years later they would be standing together being honored for 40 years of service as office professionals for K-State Research and Extension.

After graduating Minge spent the next three years working as an office professional on the campus of Kansas State University and began employment with the Washington County Extension Council on November 11, 1974. She continues in that position today for the KSRE River Valley Extension District #4. The office has seen other employees and agents come and go but Ruthann's outgoing, friendly and caring greeting and service to all clientele has remained constant over the years. "Just call our Washington office any day of the week but especially during any holiday season. You might forget what you called for by the time Ruthann's greeting is done but you sure feel good about yourself and the day," commented John Forshee, District Director.

Knitter returned to the Clay Center area after graduating and began work as the office professional for the Clay County Extension Council on April 15, 1971. Although some duties have changed, as well as change in title from secretary to office professional, Knitter has served faithfully in that same position for now over 40 years. With the formation of the River Valley Extension District in July of 2005 Knitter found those duties changing once again as she took over the responsibility of the financial secretary for the district. "Frieda is a wonderful coworker. She has such a working knowledge of the history of our program and she knows everyone, from grandparents, to parents, to kids, even great-grandkids and that has been a tremendous help to me in my role as director," says Forshee.

Co-workers for the pair shared memories and thoughts of working together over the years as the two were presented recognition for their service during the Annual KSRE River Valley District Appreciation Dinner held recently in Washington. "We are so thankful to have such wonderful employees and we just couldn't let this milestone pass without giving them the recognition they deserve. We all look forward to working with them for many, many more years," says Forshee.

Kansas farmers invest in planting estimated4.7 million acres of corn

Kansas corn farmers are expected to plant 4.7 million acres of corn this year, the third largest planted corn acreage since 1936, according to the USDA Prospective Planting report released last week. The report estimates that planted acreage for Kansas corn at 4.7 million acres, down four percent from the 2011 acreage. Nationally, farmers are expected to plant 95.9 million acres, up four percent from 2011.

Kansas farmers continue to invest in planting crops to meet the needs of their customers. Most Kansas corn is fed to livestock, or used as a feedstock for ethanol production, where a third of the grain used returns as distillers grains, a high nutrient livestock feed, according to the Kansas Corn Commission.

“One thing people don’t think about is the investment farmers make to put their crop in the ground and get it off to a good start. Even with the most conservative figures, Kansas corn farmers are spending well over a billion dollars just for seed, fertilizer and crop protection and that’s just part of the picture,” Kansas Corn Commission communications director Sue Schulte said.

Kansas is a diverse state for agriculture, and an irrigated producer in southwest Kansas will have higher planting costs than a dryland producer in northeast Kansas.

“K-State has some excellent tools to help growers calculate their cost-return for crops. Depending on location and growing practices, a farmer can spend somewhere between $250 and $395 per acre for seed, fertilizer and crop protection, we didn’t even factor in other costs like land, equipment, fuel, labor and crop insurance. If every corn farmer in the state used only the more conservative figure of $250 an acre to get his corn crop going, the investment statewide would be $1.175 billion.”

Farmers have a significant impact on the Kansas economy not only by what they produce, but also the money they invest to grow their crops.

“Most of the time, we simply look at how many bushels of grain are produced. But we should be more aware of economic activity that is created by agriculture in Kansas,” Schulte said. “In addition to 4.7 million acres of corn being planted this spring, we will also see 2.5 million acres of sorghum and 3.9 million acres of soybeans being planted. Our Kansas growers will be putting seed into 11 million acres of land this spring. Those crops will then be sold to people who will convert the grain into meats, fuels and other products.”

A strong increase in wheat acres offset some of the planted acreage for the spring planted crops. Kansas farmers planted 9.5 million acres of wheat, up 700,000 acres from last year, and eight percent increase.

Kansas growers are expected to plant 20.6 million acres to the four major crops (wheat, sorghum, corn, and soybeans), up 1.5 percent from 2011.

“Most of our farmers grow more than one crop, and we are hoping for good growing conditions for all our Kansas crops,” Schulte said.

Producer general sign-up and re-enrollment deadline extended for CRP

U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Farm Service Agency (FSA) administrator Bruce Nelson has announced that the sign-up deadline for the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) has been extended to April 13, 2012. “Due to strong interest in CRP, the decision was made to extend CRP sign-up 43 for an additional week. I encourage all eligible farmers and ranchers to take advantage of this opportunity to participate in CRP,” said Nelson. “Whether new enrollees or re-enrolling existing CRP contracts, producers who sign up for CRP help to conserve land and improve our soil, water, air and wildlife habitat resources.”

After the CRP general sign-up ends on April 13, FSA will evaluate offers based on cost and the Environmental Benefits Index (EBI). The EBI takes into consideration variables such as wildlife habitat, water quality protection, soil erosion reduction, air quality protection and other enduring benefits. Accepted offers will become effective Oct. 1, 2012.

CRP is a voluntary program available to agricultural producers to help them use environmentally sensitive land for conservation benefits. Producers enrolled in CRP plant long-term, resource-conserving covers to improve the quality of water, control soil erosion and develop wildlife habitat. In return, USDA provides participants with rental payments and cost-share assistance. Contract duration is between 10 and 15 years. Producers with expiring contracts and producers with environmentally sensitive land are encouraged to evaluate their options under CRP. CRP has a 25-year legacy of successfully protecting the nation’s natural resources through voluntary participation, while providing significant economic and environmental benefits to rural communities across the United States. Currently, about 30 million acres are enrolled in CRP.

Producers are encouraged to contact their local FSA service center or visit FSA’s website at www.fsa.usda.gov/crp for additional information regarding CRP.

USDA offers specialty crop block grant

Since 2004, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has made available grants to state departments of agriculture solely to enhance the competitiveness of specialty crops. The current funding for the program was established in the Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 (Farm Bill) which authorized the USDA to provide grants to states for each of the fiscal years 2008 through 2012 to enhance the competitiveness of specialty crops.

Each state that submits an application that is reviewed and approved by the Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) is to receive at least an amount that is equal to the higher of $100,000, or 1/3 of 1 percent of the total amount of funding made available for that fiscal year. In addition, AMS will allocate the remainder of the grant funds based on the value of specialty crop production in each state in relation to the national value of specialty crop production using the latest available cash receipt data.

Kansas received $102,000 for fiscal year 2007 and 2008, and received $104,504.80, for fiscal year 2009. Because a provision in the Food, Conservation and Energy Act of 2008 appropriated an additional $10 million for the grant program, Kansas received an additional $106,240, to help fund specialty crop programs in fiscal year 2009. For fiscal year 2010, Kansas received $214,055.68. In state fiscal year 2011, Kansas received $282,828; and in state fiscal year 2012, Kansas received $273,616.54.

Later 2012, or state fiscal year 2013, Kansas expects to receive $258,363.

Applications for grant funds should show how the project potentially impacts and produces measurable outcomes for the specialty crop industry and/or the public rather than a single organization, institution, or individual.

Grant funds will not be awarded for projects that solely benefit a particular commercial product or provide a profit to a single organization, institution, or individual. Single organizations, institutions, and individuals are encouraged to participate as project partners.

Applicants must be a legal entity and have the legal capacity to contract. Applicants also are strongly encouraged to provide a cash match for their projects.

Specialty crops are defined as fruits and vegetables, tree nuts, dried fruits and nursery crops, including floriculture. Some examples of enhancing the competitiveness of specialty crops are research, promotion, marketing, nutrition, food safety and security, plant health, education, "buy local" programs, addressing environmental concerns and developing co-operatives. For more information about the specialty crop block grant program, including a current list of eligible crops, visit USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. For additional information on this program, contact Sarah Green at (785) 296-4172.

Discover the Flint Hills

The doors open on April 14. It has been a long journey for the Flint Hills Discovery Center, but this brand new facility will open in downtown Manhattan on April 14, 2012. Governor Brownback and hundreds of guests are expected for the grand opening.

For years, Kansans have wanted to honor and promote the Flint Hills region. The creation of a Flint Hills center in Manhattan finally came about when the stars were aligned just right. By that I mean two things: One, the timing was right for the city of Manhattan to proceed with the redevelopment ment of its downtown district, and two, there were STAR bonds (Sales Tax And Revenue bonds) provided through the state of Kansas to help fund it. The city of Manhattan partnered with the state to bring this museum to life. Bob Workman, a fifth-generation Kansan, was hired as the director. Bob says the museum's mission is to celebrate the natural and cultural history of the region, to inspire people to explore the Flint Hills, and to encourage us all to become better stewards of the land. The $24.5 million Discovery Center is a project of the City of Manhattan, but the facility will benefit the entire region. This museum will be a focal point for local citizens as well as a home base for Flint Hills exploration, educating visitors about the value of this unique ecosystem and sending tourists both into the hills and into regional communities. The building is awesome. It features a four-story tall glass atrium, outside terraces, and 35,000 square feet of space. The exterior walls are made of layers of - what else? - limestone quarried from here in Kansas. Inside are beautiful murals, interactive displays, a children's area, and temporary and permanent exhibits which tell the story of the Flint Hills, past and present. You will not want to miss what they call the immersive experience: A 15-minute high-definition film shot in the Flint Hills which is shown on a screen 67 feet wide and 12 feet high. One of the things I appreciate most about Bob Workman is that he recognizes that the Discovery Center serves an entire 22-county region, not just the city limits of Manhattan. He has reached out to involve citizens, leaders, schools, and youth throughout the region. The Discovery Center is now offering a membership plan which allows unlimited access to all exhibits and the immersive experience. For more information, see www.flinthillsdiscovery.org. After years of work, the Flint Hills Discovery Center will have its grand opening on April 14. Thanks to the sponsorship of a regional bank, admission will be free on that day. Along with many other festivities that day, the Kansas Chapter of the Western Music Association will be offering free musical entertainment and cowboy poetry in the plaza adjacent to the new center. Here's the poem I wrote for the center's groundbreaking. Hope to see you at the grand opening.

Interested growers sought for sorghum inputs study

The Sorghum Checkoff is funding an in-depth study that involves tracking all inputs used by sorghum growers to raise, harvest and market their sorghum crop. Starting in June 2012, sorghum growers will be participating in the research to provide an in-depth study of all inputs and outputs relating to the crop. The data will be used to assess the carbon footprint of growing sorghum versus other crops, and a model will be developed to demonstrate these interactions. As a survey participant, sorghum producers will be asked to keep specific information for their inputs and outputs as they go through this year's growing season. If you are a sorghum producer interested in participating in this series of four five to ten minute surveys online, please contact Dusti Fritz at dusti@sorghumcheckoff.com. The study will be conducted by SGS and Strategic Marketing Research and is strictly a scientific research project that does not involve sales of any kind.

Discovery

by Ron Wilson, Poet Lariat

A traveler drives through Kansas, expecting there's not much to see.
But when his eyes behold the Flint Hills,
there is discovery.

Some parents look for something fun to do as a family,
And when they come to this new center,
there is discovery.

When a teacher makes a field trip here to teach prairie ecology,

The look in that student's eyes is the light of discovery.
Discovering the Flint Hills is what this is all about,
And celebrating the region's attractions which are found throughout.

These hills underlain by rock are a wondrous part of God's creation,

A special part of Kansas and a treasure for our nation.
The Flint Hills of Kansas are the world's best for grass.
When it comes to raisin' beef, this region's world class.

It's the last remaining tallgrass,
a key site of prairie ecology,
The home of grazing bison and Native American history.

It is vital to have a center which can share this information, To honor the Flint Hills with experiences and education.

This center is not just for the traveler who might be passing through.

It will be a focal point for our local people too.
The Flint Hills Discovery Center will be a way to celebrate

The history, culture, and heritage of the Flint Hills in our state.

So when that traveler stops, he'll discover much, much more:

The culture and the people which this region has in store.

Now we celebrate this facility and the need that it fulfills

For this new center to help more people
discover the Flint Hills.

Happy Trails!

Governor announces Kansas Bioscience Authority appointee

Kansas Gov. Sam Brownback has announced the appointment of Dale Rodman as a member of the Kansas Bioscience Authority (KBA). Rodman currently serves as the Kansas Secretary of Agriculture.

“Few people in the country have the unique qualifications for this position that Dale has,” Brownback said. “His expertise and his willingness to take on further responsibilities speak volumes about his dedication to serving the people of Kansas. He will be an asset to the Bioscience Authority and to the state of Kansas.”

Rodman has nearly fifty years of agribusiness experience that includes national and international agriculture business development and management experience. After graduating from Kansas State University in 1963 with an agricultural degree in feed milling, Rodman worked for Cargill, Inc. a total of 37 years in various management positions in Kansas, across the country and around the world. He also served as president of Tramco, Inc, a family-owned manufacturer of heavy duty, dry bulk conveying systems in Wichita. In the 1990s, Rodman worked with then-Kansas Agriculture Commissioner Brownback to develop the value-added program and served as a board member of the Kansas Agricultural Value-Added Center. Rodman left retirement in 2011 at the request of Brownback to serve the Kansas agricultural industry.

Rodman’s appointment must be confirmed by the Senate. He succeeds KBA board member Sandra Lawrence.

Brownback also appointed Andrew D. Wimmer of Overland Park to the Board of Indigent Defense Services to succeed Roy Holliday; and re-appointed Robert Chestnut of Lawrence to the Pooled Money Investment Board. Both appointments require Senate confirmation.

Nominate your Angus partners for Commitment to Excellence Awards

Each year, Certified Angus Beef LLC (CAB) looks for a seedstock and a commercial cattle operation to honor for their exemplary role in using superior Angus genetics to build better beef.

“These Commitment to Excellence Award winners do it right, and show the way for others,” says Larry Corah, CAB vice president. Everyone learns from good examples, and that’s why the company recognizes those who leave no stone unturned as they move toward the ideal, from genetics to coordinated management and marketing.

Eligible candidates must have a record of measuring genetic and management criteria, and then acting to better drive the supply of Certified Angus Beef® (CAB®) brand product. There are extra points for being directly involved with CAB in its various programs and licensed feedlots over the years.

“We’re encouraging cattlemen to nominate those they work with, their genetic suppliers or bull-buying customers,” Corah says. Nominations, due

May 1, should include details that make the farm or ranch a good award candidate, including the ability of their cattle to hit the CAB and CAB Prime targets. Please include name and contact information, type and size of operation, number of years feeding or working with customers on postweaning data, and any linkage to other CAB projects.

Winners will be contacted by June 1. CAB will produce features stories about the individuals, who will receive an expense-paid trip to the company’s Annual Conference in White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., Sept. 19 to 21. Email Marilyn Conley at mconley@certifiedangusbeef.com for a nomination form or call to discuss at 800-225-2333.

K-State students help researchers study cardiac rehabilitation programs for producers

Recovering from a heart attack is never easy, but it can be especially difficult for those in physically demanding occupations, such as farming and ranching. For three days in March, about 30 K-State agronomy students participated in a study that may help make this process easier and safer.

The study was conducted by Jenny Adams from the Baylor Research Institute of Baylor Heart and Vascular Hospital and Shannon Jordan from Texas Woman's University Department of Kinesiology. They came to K-State March 12-14 to measure oxygen consumption, heart rates and other physical factors of student volunteers as they did some routine farm chores.

The purpose of the study was to gather data on the physical demands of specific tasks so that medical professionals can have better information to guide the recovery of agricultural producers who are recovering from a cardiac problem event.

The question for both cardiac patients and their medical care providers is: What kind of strenuous activities around the farm are appropriate for producers recovering from a cardiac problem, and at what point in the recovery process are they appropriate?

"The main goal of this research is to publish recommended guidelines regarding heart rates and workloads reached while performing typical farming tasks. These guidelines will be used by professionals in cardiac rehabilitation," Adams said.

This information could help a producer appropriately train at higher intensities in cardiac rehab to find out if he or she can safely return to work.

In this study, which was conducted at K-State's Agronomy North Farm, students were asked to perform the following tasks:

- Shovel 100 pounds of seed/feed into a wheelbarrow

- Load 10 square bales of hay weighing 65 pounds each into the bed of a truck

- Load two 50-pound bags of seed into each of eight hopper boxes

- Dig holes with a post hole digger for three minutes

While performing these tasks, the students were asked to wear a portable oxygen consumption mask strapped to their bodies. This allowed the research team to discover the physiological difficulty of standard farming work tasks. The heart rate of the students was also measured as they performed the tasks.

Students involved in the study were not compensated. Their hope is that the information collected will benefit future farmers who have heart-related illness return to work and be physically able to perform the tasks required of a farmer, Adams said.

Kansas Limousin Breeders hold 20th annual spring sale

It might have been April Fool's Day, but the consignors to the 20th Annual Limousin Breeders spring sale were not fooling anyone on the great consignments they offered to the buyers. Dean Summerbell, HLA executive secretary, and Bruce Brooks, auctioneer, both commented about the great set of bulls and heifers that the consignors were offering in this year's sale. The twelve consignors came from three states in the Midwest.

To start this year's sale the Kansas Limousin Breeders recognized both the Kansas 2012 Commercial Producer and the 2012 Hall of Fame recipients. Bernie Johnson and family of Asaria were this year's commercial producer. Summerbell told how Bernie has been using Limousin bulls for many years, buying many of them from this sale; he then will sell his calves right there at the Farmers and Ranchers Livestock Commission in Salina. KLBA would like to congratulate Bernie and his family on receiving this award and KLBA does appreciate his many years of supporting the sale in Salina.

The second award was presented to long-time Limousin breeders Gerald and Carol Ricketts of Flying R Farms from Clay Center. Randy Corns, newly elected KLBA president, presented this award to them. Gerald has been a member of the board of directors and participated many years at the sales in Salina, Russell and the Kansas Beef Expo.

The sale started off by bringing in the fall yearling bulls. The top seller in this age group was Lot #7 NAUH Xace 67X, a 10-5-10 son of Hunts Unlimited U1 consigned by Dustin Limousin Ranch, Harrisonville, Mo for $4000 to Bernie Johnson. NCGA: Anti-HFCS marketing 'scam' needs to end

In recent letters to food marketers, the National Corn Growers Association called on them to stop marketing products as not containing high fructose corn syrup, implying there is something especially unhealthy or unnatural about corn sugar.

"Such innuendos are not scientifically supportable and they are offensive to the hundreds of thousands of U.S. consumers that grow corn as well as the many others in rural communities," NCGA CEO Rick Tolman wrote in letters to the chief marketing officers at Welch Foods and Dean Foods, producers respectively of Welch's Natural Spreads and TruMoo Chocolate Milk, just two examples of anti-HFCS marketing. "Your focus on health and nutrition are commendable and supportable. Those points can all be well made without the reference to HFCS."

While the March 21 letters did lead to a dialog with Dean Foods, their response to-date has been unsatisfactory, Tolman noted in a follow-up letter.

"As you pointed out, you are a significant user of HFCS in other products and are familiar with the science supporting the manufacturing, safety, and functional properties of HFCS. Therefore, you know there is no scientific basis for the preference you see from consumers. It is a misperception. A big part of that problem is that the type of advertising you are doing with respect to HFCS perpetuates this misperception. That is our concern. You are using a misperception to differentiate your product and therefore helping to perpetuate that misperception."

Tolman also points out these facts about HFCS: The American Medical Association stated in June 2008 that high fructose corn syrup does not appear to contribute to obesity more than other caloric sweeteners, and the American Dietetic Association concluded in December 2008 that "No persuasive evidence supports the claim that high fructose corn syrup is a unique contributor to obesity." Further, the ADA also noted, "High fructose corn syrup... is nutritionally equivalent to sucrose. Both sweeteners contain the same number of calories (4 per gram) and consist of about equal parts of fructose and glucose. Once absorbed into the blood stream, the two sweeteners are indistinguishable." High fructose corn syrup is made from corn, a natural grain product. High fructose corn syrup contains no artificial or synthetic ingredients or color additives and meets the FDA requirements for use of the term "natural." When it comes to marketing products as HFCS-free, some popular food writers also consider it problematic.

The journalist Michael Pollan, an opponent of modern agriculture, recognizes a scam when he sees one. In his book Food Rules, he writes: "Don't fall for the food industry's latest scam: products reformulated to contain 'no HFCS' or 'real cane sugar.' These claims imply these foods are somehow healthier, but they're not. Sugar is sugar."

Food retailers themselves express frustration over rampant misinformation about food safety and nutrition, Tolman said. Companies like Dean Foods are very strong when it comes to fighting myths about milk and other dairy products, for example. It's time for them to put their advertising where their mouth is.

"Instead of exploiting myths about corn sugar, they should join us in exploding the myths by exploring the facts," Tolman said. "We urge our growers and others to take action and help inform companies like Dean about the truth behind natural corn products like HFCS."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has announced that no marketing quota will be in effect for the 2013 wheat crop.

2008 authorizes a commodity program for only the 2008 through 2012 crops of wheat. Unless new farm legislation is enacted (or the current farm bill extended), any actions taken pertaining to the 2013

wheat crop must be done in accordance with "permanent law" provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (the 1938 Act), and the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended, which

These permanent law provisions would authorize the imposition of marketing quotas, acreage allotments, marketing certificates and parity price support programs for wheat. Since the 2008 farm bill only covers through the 2012 crop, the ag secretary is required by the 1938 Act to announce whether or not a marketing quota will be in effect for the 2013 wheat crop prior to April 15, 2012. The 1938 Act would require a marketing quota for the 2013 wheat crop if the total supply of the crop would likely be excessive without the quota, and would require the secretary to decide not later than April 15, 2012, whether a quota is needed. Based on projected supply and demand, no quota is required.

Sorghum Foundation seeking scholarship applicants

The National Sorghum Foundation was established in an effort to aid and promote higher education in agriculture, and more specifically, to promote the study of sorghum and its impact on agriculture. Producers, researchers and private industry collectively funded the Foundation endowment to enhance the awareness of sorghum as the fifth most important cereal crop in the world today.

The foundation now offers two scholarships. The Darrell Rosenow Memorial Scholarship is given in honor of Dr. Darrell Rosenow, a pioneer in hybrid sorghum breeding. The winner of this scholarship will receive $1,000 to be applied toward one semester of education expenses. The other scholarship goes to the Sorghum Challenge award winner who will receive $1,000 to be applied toward one semester of tuition expenses as well as a trip to Washington, D.C. with the National Sorghum Producers. Both scholarship applications are due May, 31, 2012. Students are asked to submit a completed copy of the application, signed by applicant's department head, an official copy of current transcripts and at least two letters of recommendation. To receive an application or more information about the scholarship awards, contact Dr. Maunder, chair of the Foundation at texasgreenbug@aol.com or call 806-749-3478.
