

Huge strides seen for U.S. beef in Russia

Russia was one of the hottest markets for U.S. beef during the first half of 2012, a trend upon which the beef checkoff has capitalized through trainings and promotions. Coming off a record performance in 2011, beef and beef variety meat exports to Russia were up 17 percent in volume (84.2 million pounds) and 57 percent in value ($162.2 million) year-on-year through the first half of 2012.

Looking ahead, prospects for continued export growth are bolstered by Russia's entry into the World Trade Organization (WTO). Though Russia's invitation to join the WTO became official in December 2011, the Russian Parliament just recently (in late July) passed legislation to complete its accession to the WTO. This means that many of the trade commitments Russia agreed to as part of its WTO accession took effect Aug. 23, 2012.

"The duty on frozen beef muscle cuts will remain unchanged at 15 percent," explains Thad Lively, senior vice president for trade access for the U.S. Meat Export Federation (USMEF), contractor to the beef checkoff. "However, the U.S. beef industry is already benefiting from the WTO accession because of Russia's commitment to increase the quota on U.S. beef imports. That quota was only 47 million pounds in 2010 and 92 million pounds last year, but for 2012 it has been increased to 132 million pounds."

While most U.S. beef exports to Russia are frozen, the U.S. industry may also be able to capitalize on a new opportunity for chilled beef, Lively added. Russia has established a new, 24-million-pound quota for chilled beef from suppliers outside of the European Union.

To say that the Beef Checkoff Program is promoting U.S. beef far and wide in Russia would be an understatement. Two promotional events this summer were separated by nearly 7,000 miles and eight time zones.

In cooperation with the Association of Restaurateurs and Hoteliers of Kaliningrad, Russia, the national checkoff and the Texas Beef Council recently helped fund a first-of-its-kind U.S. beef master class in this uniquely positioned and strategically important region. With about 500,000 residents in its main metropolitan area, Kaliningrad has a growing restaurant and hotel sector with a wide variety of culinary styles and menu concepts. The objective of the master class was to demonstrate the many ways that U.S. beef can add quality and versatility to any menu.

"We are very excited to see so much enthusiasm for U.S. beef in new retail and food-service outlets," says Kevin Kester, a cattleman from Parkfield, California and chair of the checkoff's Joint International Markets Committee. "It only opens the door for more U.S. product, which beef producers should be excited about as well."

The checkoff also joined forces with a number of U.S. agricultural segments and the Agricultural Trade Office in the far eastern port city of Vladivostok for a "Taste of America" event to demonstrate the quality and diversity of U.S. farm products. The event attracted more than 60 representatives of eastern Russia's restaurants, cafes, hotels and taverns, as well as local food importers. Chef Erwin Peters of the El Gaucho Paveletskaya steakhouse in Moscow shared his positive experiences with U.S. beef in his restaurant and demonstrated creative cooking methods for U.S. beef chuck roll, flank steak, top blade and short ribs.

Other checkoff-funded promotional events in Russia this summer included Independence Day celebrations in Moscow and St. Petersburg, where guests comprised leading restaurateurs and other food industry professionals from both cities' growing hospitality sectors. Beef master classes also were sponsored in Velikiy Novgorod, a historic city located between Moscow and St. Petersburg that has a rapidly growing tourist sector. The checkoff also has been actively promoting U.S. beef in Sochi – the host city for the 2014 Winter Olympics – and other popular tourist destinations on Russia's Black Sea coast.

U.S. agricultural machinery exports gain 29 percent at midyear 2012, total $7.2 billion Exports of American-made agricultural machinery increased 29 percent to total $7.2 billion for the first half of 2012 compared to January-June 2011, according to the Association of Equipment Manufacturers (AEM). The off-road equipment manufacturing trade group consolidates U.S. Commerce Dept. data with other sources into member global trend reports.

"Despite some volatility in world markets, global trade remains positive for agricultural equipment manufacturers, as producers in both emerging and industrialized regions seek to boost productivity. And exports are vital for U.S. manufacturers to stay in business and provide jobs for U.S. workers," stated Charlie O'Brien, AEM vice president and agriculture sector leader.

O'Brien noted that AEM has historically supported sound export policies to assist manufacturers and farmers to sell to international markets, and its I Make America national grassroots campaign has underscored the "exports equal jobs" message.

AEM and the campaign also advocate a balanced and long-term Farm Bill with an adequate safety net that allows American agriculture to continue to provide safe and affordable food for the U.S. and growing world populations.

U.S. exports by world regions & top 10 countries
South America bought 40 percent more American-made agricultural machinery than the same time period last year, for a total $810 million, and exports to Central America grew 17 percent during January-June 2012 to total $592 million.

Exports to Asia increased 27 percent for the first half of 2012 compared to midyear 2011, with purchases totaling $614 million. Exports to Europe rose 34 percent for a total $2.2 billion worth of agricultural machinery.

Exports to Africa gained 82 percent and totaled $238 million; exports to Australia/Oceania totaled $612 million for a 35-percent increase; and agricultural machinery export volume to Canada increased 19 percent to total $2.2 billion.

The top 10 buyers of U.S.-made agricultural equipment at midyear 2012 were: (1) Canada - $2.2 billion, up 19 percent; (2) Australia - $574 million, up 36 percent; (3) Mexico - $509 million, up 29 percent; (4) Brazil - $422 million, up 75 percent; (5) Germany - $327 million, up 26 percent; (6) China - $291 million, up 63 percent; (7) Ukraine - $266 million, up 67 percent; (8) France - $253 million, up 37 percent; (9) Russia - $233 million, up 88 percent; (10) United Kingdom - $192 million, up 33 percent.

Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay trade slow to moderate. Demand moderate for dairy alfalfa and alfalfa pellets, moderate to strong for stock cow, grinding alfalfa and grass hay. The best general rain in months covered all but the southwest and northwest corners of the state with most receiving over an inch, many two-three inches and some up to eight inches. This will help pastures and benefit the fall wheat planting. It was too late for most row crops. Gov. Brownback has temporarily suspended certain trucking rules and regulations to aid in the delivery of hay to drought-stricken areas. If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange: www.kfb.org/hayandpasture/default.htm

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

It ended up being another directionless week in the corn and wheat markets while the soybeans were able to make new all time highs. Soybean fundamentals are clearly the most bullish of the bunch right now, which is primarily due to the strong demand we are still seeing for soybeans. It seems that every time we have weakness in the soybean market the Chinese are there to take advantage of it. Production is still a big issue as well and we don't know for sure how much USDA will end up cutting the yield estimate in the September supply and demand report, but I am certain that we cannot maintain the current demand pace without running out of soybeans, which means the market still has a lot of work to do to slow down demand, regardless of the crop size.

The grain market charts really don't tell us much other than the obvious, which is that the corn and wheat are range-bound and the soybeans are heading higher. I think now that this three-day weekend is past us the wheat and corn will at least be testing the upper end of the trading range and perhaps be making new highs in anticipation of a bullish September supply and demand report. The beans are still in bull market mode and I expect to see the November contract reach the $18.00 level soon.

The big news of the week was the Federal Reserve meeting in Jackson Hole this week. It didn't really amount to anything, which isn't a surprise, but it looks like traders were willing to push the dollar lower and gold higher on hopes that we may see QE3 in September. Some people call this "hopeium." The Fed has been teasing traders with this for months without anything happening and it looks like this Jackson Hole meeting amounted to more of the same, but traders seem to be addicted to the hope of QE3, and I guess as long as it keeps the stock market supported then the hope of QE3 is probably accomplishing just as much as actual stimulus would. However, we must all take note that the US Dollar Index did make a new multi-month low on Friday and the gold and silver markets made multi-month highs. On the charts this is significant because the support failure in the dollar suggests a move to 78, which would be supportive to all commodities. The metal markets began working higher a couple of weeks ago and this week's action suggests more strength ahead. The December silver nearly reached the 50% retracement of the move down from the March high on Friday and a move up to the 62% retracement at $33.25 looks likely in the near term. This break in the dollar has to be paid attention to.

Cash cattle traded at $123 last week, so there is life once again in the cattle market. The October live cattle contract tested the 50-day moving average support early in the week then took off like a rocket on Wednesday. This market has plenty of upside potential and I look for the October live cattle to reach the $127.50 area soon and the $129 area in a very likely upside target in the next couple of week.

As for the feeder cattle, I still worry about that market and what will happen if the corn market moves higher, but the corn hasn't been moving higher and that is allowing the feeder cattle to post solid gains. The October feeder cattle closed above the 50-day moving average for the first time since June. From a chart and technical standpoint that is bullish. I'm not quite ready to shift to being bullish feeder cattle, but the action early next week may get me there.

Kansas Corn celebrates farmers, educates crowd during State Fair

Interactive features and the state's farmers and ranchers will greet thousands of fair-goers as they visit Agriland at this year's Kansas State Fair. The hands-on agriculture display is one of the most popular stops during the annual statewide event, held September 7-16 in Hutchinson.

Located in the Pride of Kansas building, a young person can milk a cow, climb into a combine cab, sit on a saddle and walk through a soil tunnel. The interactions are designed to give youth and adults a hands-on, true-to-life farm and ranch experience. Agriland is the perfect stop for teachers and school groups because of the interactive exhibits and take-home information.

This year, Agriland guests will receive baseball cards featuring Kansas farmers. Kansas Corn Commissioner Ken McCauley's family is pictured on one of the cards with details about their farm operation in White Cloud. The 13 co-operating agricultural organizations are listed on the back of the card.

In addition, the Peterson Brothers, a family who produced the viral video "I'm Farming and I Grow It Video" will be at Agriland from 2 to 6 p.m., Sunday, Sept. 9. The Peterson brothers farm and ranch near Assaria. Those who visit the Peterson brothers at the State Fair will receive photo card that can be autographed by the boys.

The Kansas Corn Commission (KCC) and Kansas Corn Growers Association have been a partner in Agriland since its creation in 1994. Jere White, Kansas Corn executive director, says Agriland is a source of pride among agriculture groups, showcasing the work of farmers and ranchers across the state. It is also a tradition for the many families who attend the State Fair. Agriland remains a popular and must-see feature for numerous school groups and families.

"It is more important than ever for kids to understand something about agriculture," White said. "Agriland reaches a lot of adults as well. If we can engage folks for a few minutes with tangible activities and interaction with producers, we just might plant a seed with our consumers. And that benefits all of us."

Agriland is staffed by organization and commodity volunteers who give their time to speak with and teach the more than 300,000 people who attend the fair each year. The 2012 Kansas State Fair runs through September 16 in Hutchinson. For more information on fair events visit: www.kansasstate-fair.com.

KSU football coach Bill Snyder spokesperson for ethanol radio campaign

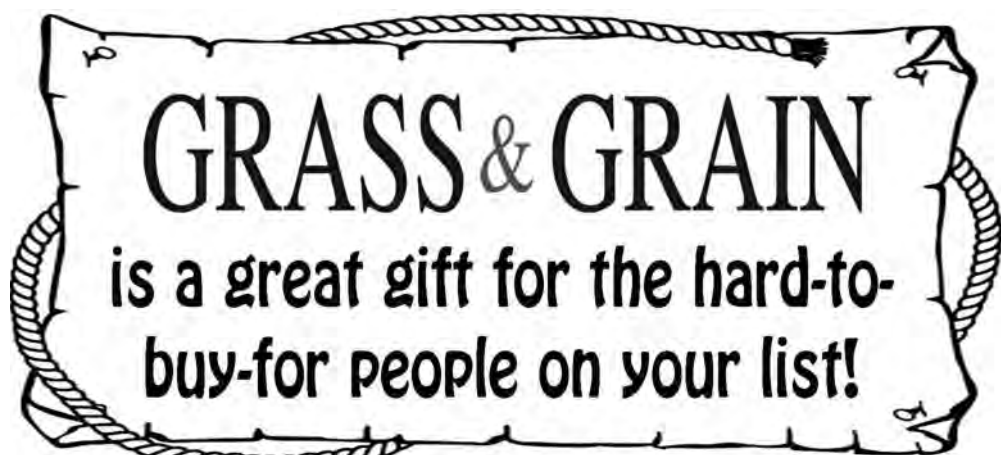

The Kansas Association of Ethanol Processors (KAEP) is proud to be a participating sponsor of a season-long ethanol promotion with K-State Sports Properties, the multimedia and sponsorship rights holder for Kansas State University athletics.

KSU Football head coach Bill Snyder will serve as the spokesperson for a radio campaign to promote the benefits of ethanol to fans across the state. The commercials will be aired on KSU's 33-station network during all regular-season football broadcasts and the Bill Snyder radio call-in shows.

The ethanol industry will also serve as the official game sponsor of the K-State versus North Texas football game on September 15, hosting a tailgate party for their fuel retailer customers and providing the game's halftime interview.

"KAEP is thrilled to be partnering with Kansas State Football and our agricultural friends on this exciting opportunity to share the message of ethanol's benefits to the economy and environment," Mike Chisam, general manager of Kansas Ethanol, LLC and KAEP Board Chairman, said. "We hope that all football fans will learn more about how they can join us in advancing Kansas' home grown fuel."

Other participating partners in the promotion include Growth Energy, Kansas Corn Commission and Kansas Sorghum Commission. Partners will also sponsor a seat upgrade for two fans during the seven home football games.

Fall Classic Catalog Horse Sale Saturday October 13th at 10 am
15th Annual Colt and Yearling Sale Sunday October 14th 10 am

Due to the passing of long time AQHA breeder Larry Crum we are offering Larry's entire herd to public auction. These horses are the progeny of the great horse High Brow Husker. An outstanding performance horse himself earning 286.5 points in calf roping, heeling, and working cow horse while being ridden by the likes of PRCA cowboys Trevor Brazile, Troy Pruitt, and Darnel Johnson. This is a great opportunity to purchase horses from a proven breeding program offered to you as a complete herd dispersal. Selling will be everything from colts, brood mares, to riding horses. We will also be selling 48 straws of semen of High Brow Husker. These horses will start selling at lot 114 to 153. This is your chance of a lifetime so plan on being here October the 13th.

We are proud to have been chosen to host:

Profitability for commercial ranch is top priority

Just as crossbreeding adds growth, fertility and longevity to hybrid cattle, the joint collaboration of two beef cattle breed associations yielded information, ideas and networking opportunities surpassing what either could have accomplished alone.

Profitability was the common theme at the first-ever, dual-breed Beef Profit Alliance seminar, and more specifically, profitability for the commercial rancher. The seminar — held at Kansas State University (KSU) in Manhattan July 22-24 — was a joint effort of the Red Angus Association of America (RAAA) and American Simmental Association (ASA).

Heterosis = Efficiency, Fertility and Profitability
Patsy Houghton, Heartland Cattle Co., of McCook, Neb., has expansive research and experience rooted in developing over 80,000 beef heifers in the past two decades.

“Crossbred cows’ first-service conception rates and pregnancy retention rates are 7 percent higher than straight-bred cows,” said Houghton, “and they will remain productive an average of one year longer.”

She continued by saying, however, there is a compromise. “Heterosis will increase birth weight by 4 percent, but the upside is that weaning weight also increases by a considerable average of 15 percent.”

Dr. Bob Weaber, KSU cow-calf Extension specialist, simplified the cow-calf production objective — grow grass for the cows to harvest, converting that grass into pounds of weaned calf. The result is not only profitability for the producer, but a desirable lifestyle and an improved environment.

He stressed that for maximum profitability each operation must adapt its cow type and size to best fit the range and forage conditions. “The key is to optimize the cow’s size and her lactation ability to fit the environment, producing the most pounds — and number of calves — delivered, at the lowest possible production cost,” said Weaber. “Low-cost producers are generally more profitable.”

Profit Drivers in Feeding

It’s important for both seedstock and cow-calf producers to have a solid understanding of the feeding industry. Tom Brink, JBS Five Rivers Cattle Feeding, LLC, the nation’s largest feeder with a 960,000-head capacity at 12 yards in seven states, markets 1.7 million cattle a year, most on a pricing grid. “You are in the beef business,” said Brink. “Feedyards buy your customers’ cattle making us your customers’ customer.”

He challenged seedstock producers to be diligent in selecting genetics that will leave a good fingerprint on the industry. “Genetically speaking, we need cattle that will grow and grade. Your genetics are going out there in the industry and having an impact in my world. Make sure it’s a good one.”

Brink also stressed the importance of receiving healthy cattle that grow and grade. “Health is an old problem but we still identify it as the No. 1 production problem. Many cattle still need stronger immunity when they leave home. If not, they de-value their pen-mates.”

Branded Beef Programs Add Value

Branded beef programs are designed to add value to cattle that fill a specific niche in the market. Top genetics enable producers to garner those extra dollars, according to Blake Angell of Meyer Natural Angus, Brian Bertelson of U.S. Premium Beef and John Butler of Beef Marketing Group. The panel of speakers also stressed better communication from their producers. “If we have previous feedlot and grid data, we have a better idea of how these cattle will perform and how we can maximize added value,” said Butler.

Gabryelle Gilliam exhibited the champion meat goat from the heavyweight class and was also tapped as the senior goat showman.

Gov. Brownback signs order to expedite hay delivery in drought-stricken Kansas

Kansas Gov. Sam Brownback has issued an executive order to temporarily suspend certain motor carrier rules and regulations in order to expedite the delivery of hay to livestock in drought-stricken areas. Executive Order 12-11, which supersedes Executive Order 12-06, only applies to individuals who are hauling hay to livestock in drought stricken areas.

“Our entire state is in an emergency situation with the historic drought of 2012. Livestock producers need the ability to efficiently and safely deliver hay for their animals,” Gov. Brownback said. “With the amount and quality of forage available in pastures declining at rapid rates, this executive order will provide relief to Kansas livestock farmers and ranchers and deliver necessary feed to livestock across the state.”

The order temporarily suspends requirements for registration and fuel tax permits from the Kansas Department of Revenue and licensing, certification and permitting rules and regulations as required by the Kansas Corporation Commission. Participating motor carriers are only allowed to operate during daylight hours and must comply with flag, sign and lighting requirements for over-width vehicles. Additionally, participating motor carriers are not allowed to drive during inclement weather conditions.

Participating motor carriers are limited to a load that does not exceed 12 feet in width and does not exceed a height of 14 feet, six inches. Under normal circumstances, haulers are required to obtain a permit for loads exceeding 8.5 feet in width and 14 feet in height. All other applicable state and federal regulations continue to apply, including the requirement to have a valid driver’s license. Executive Order 12-11 is in effect until it is rescinded or until drought emergency disaster declarations are lifted.

“I appreciate the ongoing cooperative efforts among Governor Brownback, other state agencies, the federal government and local communities to respond to and recover from this drought,” Kansas Secretary of Agriculture Dale Rodman said. “While we cannot predict when this drought will end, we can do everything possible today to assure Kansans have access to the recourses they need. We are committed to doing all we can to help farmers and ranchers adapt and recover today but also to plan for the future.”

In other drought-related action, the U.S. Department of Agriculture designated Marshall County as a primary federal natural disaster area. The move puts all 105 counties on the USDA’s natural disaster list.

Specialist gives tips for applying anhydrous ammonia to wheat fields in dry conditions

As producers start thinking about anhydrous application for wheat this fall, extremely dry soils can be a concern, said Dave Mengel, K-State Research and Extension soil fertility specialist. The question often is, when the soil is dry, will it hold anhydrous ammonia or will some or most of the ammonia be lost shortly after application?

Three factors help determine whether ammonia might be lost after application under dry conditions, Mengel said.

The first is how quickly the ammonia gas is converted within the soil to a non-gaseous form that will stay in the soil.

"Ammonia gas needs to react with water shortly after application in order to convert into ammonium, which is the molecule that can attach to clay and organic matter in the soil," Mengel said.

Converting from gaseous ammonia to the less-volatile ammonium ion takes a little time – it does not occur immediately upon contact with the soil, he explained.

"The higher the soil temperature and the wetter the soil, the more rapid the conversion occurs. If the ammonia does not react with water, it will remain as a gas that could escape from the soil. Also, a higher percentage of the ammonia will remain unconverted in the soil longer at higher application rates and at higher soil pH levels," he said.

The second factor to consider is how rough and open the dry soil is, Mengel said.

"Dry soils may be cloddy, with large air spaces where the soil has cracked. This can allow the gas to physically escape into the air before it has a chance to be converted into ammonium," the agronomist said. "Getting the soil sealed properly above the injection slot can also be a problem in dry soils."

The third factor is the amount of ammonia that might be lost, which depends on application depth, he said. The deeper the ammonia is applied, the more likely the ammonia will have moisture to react with, and the easier the sealing.

So, can anhydrous ammonia be applied to dry soils?

"Yes," the soil fertility specialist said, "as long as the ammonia is applied deep enough to get it in some moisture and the soil is well sealed above the injection slot. If the soil is dry and cloddy, there may be considerable losses of ammonia within just a few days of application if the soil is not well sealed above the injection slot or the injection point is too shallow."

Producers should be able to tell if anhydrous is escaping from the soil during application or if the ammonia isn't being applied deeply enough. If ammonia can be smelled, the producer should either change the equipment setup to get better sealing or deeper injection, or wait until the soil has better moisture conditions, he said.

Mengel said producers can minimize loss of ammonia when applied to dry soils by:

* Applying the anhydrous ammonia at the proper depth (at least six to eight inches in 30- to 40-inch spacings);

* Using covering disks behind the knives or sealing wings ("beaver tails") on the knives; and

* Applying the anhydrous ammonia at least one to two weeks before planting. This waiting period should be even longer if soils are very dry.

Nathan Featherstone, Wildcat 4-H, exhibited the champion Jersey female at the Riley County Fair and also won intermediate champion showman.

Ty Ruckert led the reserve champion lamb at the Riley County Fair as selected by judge Kalen Poe. He was also tapped as senior reserve sheep showman.

Judge Kalen Poe selected Georgia Hatesohl's entry as grand champion lamb at the Riley County Fair. She was also named the intermediate champion sheep showman.

Cattle Sale Every Thursday 11:00 AM

American Angus Association® members and supporters have a chance to “Come Home to Kansas” during the 2012 National Angus Conference & Tour (NAC&T). Held Oct. 3-5 in Wichita, the event includes trips to both the Flint Hills and the western region of the state. “This year’s NAC&T is full of informative speakers, inventive cattle operations, and most of all, beautiful Kansas scenery,” says Bryce Schumann, the Association’s chief executive officer. The event is hosted by both the American Angus Association and the Kansas Angus Association, along with sponsorship support by Land O’ Lakes Purina Feed LLC. Rodney Nulik, Purina director of production livestock marketing, is a Kansas native and is proud to be a part of the NAC&T again this year: “Experience tells me that, no matter where it is held, the NAC&T will be another ‘can’t miss’ event.”

The 2012 agenda consists of a one-day conference, including industry-leading speakers and educational seminars, and two days of tours, which will feature the state's historic Angus genetics. The conference portion kicks off Wednesday, Oct. 3, and the first tour stop – McCurry Bros. Angus of Sedgwick – takes place that evening. “Angus enthusiasts from across the nation will learn something new, view elite Angus genetics and create friendships during the conference and tour,” says Shelia Stannard, Association director of activities and events. “We have a wide variety of items lined up; there is something for everyone at this highly-anticipated event.” The Flint Hills tour on Thursday will be Sankeys 6 N Ranch, Council Grove; Fink Beef Genetics, Randolph; Lyons Ranch, Alta Vista; and historic Cottonwood Falls. Friday's tour of western Kansas will feature Pratt Feeders.
