New Feed Technology Center at KSU named for visionary in the industry

By Donna Sullivan, Editor

Otto Henry Kruse, the son of German immigrants who came to the United States around the turn of the century, was a visionary in the feed and grain industry. His parents lived briefly in Emporia before joining relatives in California. After a few years they had saved enough money to buy a little farm and later began a small dairy operation. Otto was born in 1907 on that farm.

When people see his name on the recently dedicated O.H. Kruse Feed Technology Innovation Center at Kansas State University, his son Ron would like for them to know a little bit about the man behind the nameplate. The Kruse family provided the lead gift of $2 million to jumpstart the $12.3 million dollar project.

"My father worked hard on that farm," Ron Kruse told the audience gathered for the dedication ceremony on October 11. But when he was in high school, hard times hit and the family was about to lose the farm. Otto left school and went back to the farm to work full time. A few years later, he went to work for the El Monte Grain Company in El Monte, California. The business had a small grinder for milling local grain and also brought in hay from the high desert. Otto became a trucker and hay hauler for the company. After a few years the Depression hit and forced the company out of business and Otto went to work for F.F. Booker Wholesale Hay and Grain. He met and married his wife in 1932.

Two or three years after going to work for F.F. Booker, the owner was killed in a car accident. There were no children to take over the business, so Otto was given the opportunity to buy it for a couple of hundred dollars down and a note for $5000.

"I suppose that was a lot of money back then, but he signed a note and promised he would work his best to pay it off," Ron said. "He and my mother hired some people and the employees went to work in what he said was a feed mill. I can't remember a mixer being there, but I can remember a big floor and they dumped the sacks of feed, mixed them up with shovels, then put them back in the sacks and sold them. The point is, you can have a feed mill without a mixer."

As Otto built his business, he went back to studying at night and developed a plan. "I think today we call it core values," Ron described. "I think he called them common sense."

Otto's simple rules were: 1. Make and sell products that best help your customers to achieve success.

2. Hire good people who are committed to work together for the best interest of the company. 3. Stay financially sound and keep adequate reserves for a rainy day. 4. Strive for efficiency and always look for new ways to be efficient. 5. Be responsible, enthusiastic and have fun what you're doing.

"That's the way Otto lived his life and instilled in us and the people around him, how to get through life in a good way," said Ron.

In the early 1950s Otto was asked by the American Feed Manufacturers Association about donating some money to a feed mill and feed technology program in Kansas. "I don't know if it was the fact that his mother and father had spent some time there or what, but he made that donation," Ron said. "A couple of years later he was thinking about his donation and had bought a couple of trucks in Detroit, Michigan and flew me back there with him to pick them up." On the way back, the father and son stopped at Kansas State University and looked around the campus. "I was in high school at the time and I was really impressed," Ron recalled. "It was certainly a different life than in California."

A couple of years later he visited the campus again, and described the feed mill on campus as a Taj Mahal. "The feed mills at home were of a lot more practical basis of getting things done quickly, and with this everything was new and I thought it was great. So that's how I ended up at K-State. That's what I would hope, that there's lots of students around the country that will look at this new plant and feel the same way as I did back then."

The $12.3 million O.H. Kruse Feed Technology Center was dedicated on October 11. Built by McCown-Gordon Construction, the Center is a joint project of the Department of Grain Science and Industry and the Department of Animal Science and Industry. In addition to the $2 million donation from the Kruse family, the project received funding from the State of Kansas, The Kansas Bioscience Authority, Kansas State University and K-State's College of Agriculture Experiment Station. Courtesy photo

Ron joined his father's company in 1962 and took over as president in 1967. In the mid-'90s a British firm, Tate and Lyle, Ltd. expressed an interest in the company. "They wanted to get into the feed business on the West Coast in the worst way," Ron said. "They wanted it so bad that we couldn't turn them down and we sold out to them. The Kruse management team stayed in place, which included Ron's sons Doug, a 1988 graduate in feed science from Kansas State, and Kevin, who attended Cal Poly. "But we won't hold that against him," Ron joked. Five years later Tate and Lyle, Ltd sold all their North American interests in the feed business. In 2000

Kevin decided he wanted to get back into the feed business and started Western Milling, whose output Ron says now exceeds what Kruse Milling ever did. In the early 2000s they were able to buy back the Kruse Grain and Milling name.

In spite of a life lived on the West Coast, his time in Kansas at KSU holds many good memories for Ron. "I had a wonderful education here," he commented. "I thought the way of life here was good and it taught me things I might not have learned going to a school in southern California."

He also thinks highly of fellow KSU grads. "We've had a lot of Kansas State grads work in our organization and they've been very helpful and innovative in making our company a success. I think K-State has done a better job than anyone in the country of educating people for our industry. Because of that, it was simple for me to make a decision to make a significant donation to this project."

"There was a time in there in 2003, 04, 05, 06, 07, 08, 09, and 10 that I thought, 'Is this really going to happen?'" he joked. "I never lost faith, I was just hoping it was going to get done in my lifetime. But it did and we're awfully happy to say that we have been part of that and wish you all the success in the world to continue with the job you've been doing for some time."

Fix obstructions to world trade

By John Schlageck,
Kansas Farm Bureau
U.S. agriculture depends on world trade for its continued viability. More than $141 billion in agricultural goods were exported last year.

Still, U.S. port facilities and waterway infrastructures are decades behind international competitors due to lack of funding.

"Three things continue to obstruct U.S. agricultural exports that could be delivered to all regions of the world, especially the rapidly growing Asian markets," says Steve Baccus, an Ottawa County grain farmer who serves as Kansas Farm Bureau president. "This includes too many rules, regulations and a lack of investment in export facilities by Washington; the lack of cooperation between countries pertaining to international trade and regulations and trade requirements imposed by individual countries on one another."

During the last two years Baccus has served as chair of the American Farm Bureau Federation's trade advisory committee. Throughout this time, this committee has traveled to countries, port facilities and waterways around the world to identify the many impediments to U.S. exports. During these travels they've also visited with food producers and seen crops first hand.

Illustrating his point about the need to upgrade and improve U.S. port infrastructures, Baccus used the example of Singapore, the largest port in the world. This facility was built by its government and one private businessman.

"In Singapore the cranes load and unload ships with one individual sitting in a computer booth two miles away," Baccus said. "No union labor, no union guy crawling up and operating each (individual) crane each shift, each day."

Yet, in this port facility halfway around the world, a loaded ship leaves the port of Singapore every 12 minutes, Baccus said. A loaded ship leaves a U.S. port every one and one-half hours.

The same businessman who helped build the Singapore port is looking at building a similar port in Tijuana, Mexico.

If this investor has the resources to build the port in Singapore, he probably has the resources to build in Tijuana, Baccus said. If he has the resources to build these ports, he has the resources to build the infrastructure to move the goods from Tijuana to the U.S. border.

Prairie Ponderings

By Donna Sullivan

When I was raising my kids, I read countless books on parenting techniques, some that were pretty good and others that weren't really worth the paper they were printed on. My oldest son, however, has begun using one that is a bit unconventional and probably not written about anywhere. It's the Border Collie method, and it's surprisingly effective.

It all started when they bought a little Border Collie puppy from my niece and her husband. She was to replace the old Lab my son had had since high school that recently died. Her name was Bo. To a three-year-old, if you're going to replace a dog named Bo, the new pup should also be named Bo. So now if they are fondly remembering the deceased dog, she is Old Bo.

If they're talking about the puppy, she is New Bo. And in case you were wondering, according to said three-year-old, God came and got Old Bo in his car and took her to heaven.

The other day I was out somewhere with my son and his family and suddenly he said in a kind but firm voice, "Lila, here to me." I looked at him quizzically as my granddaughter immediately stopped what she was doing and came to her dad.

"Isn't that what you say to your dog?" I asked.

"Yep," he grinned.

A little while later his son, the perpetual climber, was headed for his next conquest.

"Emmitt, down," my son said in the same voice, and Emmitt obliged.

We're not sure if the kids obey the commands because they see the puppy do it, or if they're just really effective commands. Whatever the case, they work.

Wives and moms, however, don't respond quite as well.

"Rach," he said. "Here to me." She gave him a "If I had a frying pan I'd smack you with it" look, and stayed where she was.

He looked at me. "Mom..." I gave him my best "Don't even think about it" look that I hadn't gotten to use on him in years.

All in all, though, I'd say the Border Collie method works pretty well... as long as you pick your audience wisely.

This week I saw the trailer for the movie "Free Birds." At first it seemed fairly harmless, just a buddy film featuring Woody Harrelson and Owen Wilson as animated turkeys trying to rescue fellow turkeys from Thanksgiving dinner. The clips showed plenty of great slapstick humor. I am sure the it has the right amount of crude body-function kid-pleasing humor mixed in with just enough adult innuendo for the older crowd. It is billed as a great family film, so why does it have me concerned?

In the trailer you have very smart, humanized, time-traveling, talking turkeys plotting against very evil/dumb pilgrims at the first Thanksgiving. Their goal is not just to save a few turkeys but to save all turkeys from the horror of Thanksgiving. There are also segments of the trailer where the turkeys are fighting humans in some sort of space suits in a giant factory.

Normally I am not the conspiracy theory type, but something about this trailer tripped my alarms. There were many stories about the movie's upcoming release. A couple of the actors in the movie said it would be hard to eat turkey this Thanksgiving. Amy Poehler, the actress who voices the female lead, said that she learned a lot more about turkeys because of this film (let's be clear, this is an animated film about time-traveling, talking turkeys). Two of the lead actors are avowed vegetarians. The film's director said it was not about vegetarianism but simply wanted us to rethink holidays.

I am not some sort of stick-in-the-mud killjoy but films such as this more and more blur the lines between animals and humans. Films like this portray farm animals as human-like heroes who fight the evil, backwards, dirty, dumb and/or greedy farmer. I know, it is just a kid's movie, don't over-react.

Just a generation or two ago I would have been over-reacting. Most of the population would have had immediate family who made a living farming or ranching and they would have had contact with farm animals. However, that has changed and the only contact with animals that many people have are with their pets and that line is already very blurry. It is easy for them to transfer their human emotions and thinking to their pets and watching a movie like this is just the next step down the road to making animals equal to humans.

Those of us who have been around turkeys know that they are very much different from the humanized cartoon creatures featured in this movie. They are simple prey animals at the bottom of the food chain. Modern turkey farms provide their birds with comfortable climate-controlled barns, with a balanced nutritional diet, free from disease and predators. They do not sit around and discuss how they might travel back in time to escape the horrors of being the main course at our Thanksgiving meal.

One blogger I read hoped that this movie would cause children to break down in tears at the sight of their family's Thanksgiving turkey. One movie reviewer speculated that tofu would replace turkey in many homes. I fear that there might be many adults also influenced by this movie because they have no real concept about turkeys or livestock. The idea that animals and humans are on the same level is slowly permeating all levels of our society.

I know at times I sound like a broken record but I will say it again. This is why we, farmers and ranchers, need to make our farms and ranches open. We need to invite the public out or at the very least tell about how we care for our animals. We need to show the public what real farm animals are like. Animals are not the smarter-than-human characters they have been portrayed as in movies. You scoff at the idea, but yesterday I listened to two adults have a conversation about their "kids" and it was not until one lady mentioned one of her "kids" was a terrier that I realized they were talking about dogs.

Farmers and ranchers, who make a living raising animals for meat, need to do a better job of educating the public about animals and their behaviors. I believe that animals were put on this earth for our use, but I also believe that they should be cared for, treated well and protected until they are ready for us to use. I would encourage you to watch the trailer, then have a conversation with the people around you about animal agriculture and encourage them to pass the word about how real farmers and ranchers treat their animals.

"What happens to West Coast ports if he builds a port like Singapore in Tijuana?" Baccus asks. "He'll cause major problems all along the West Coast."

And if this potential nightmare with Mexico isn't enough, Baccus witnessed another real challenge facing the United States and its agricultural exports.

During a recent trip to the Pacific Northwest, the Ottawa County grain farmer visited with several California fruit and vegetables growers. These food producers don't have enough labor to harvest their valuable crops.

"We talked to a producer who grows string beans and garlic," Baccus said. "He didn't have enough labor to harvest both fields so he had to choose between the crops. This grower decided to mow down his string beans so he would have the labor to harvest his garlic. These beans cost him between $2,000-3,000 an acre to plant."

Another California grower was forced to leave 20 acres of vegetables in the field to rot, Baccus said. This crop could have yielded him nearly $8 million.

In California and other parts of this country agricultural producers are shifting to different crops that can be harvested by machines because they cannot find available labor. "Farmers can't find the labor from south of our border to pick crops that must be harvested by hand," Baccus said. "Americans won't do this work. Farmers in California have tried. They work for an hour or two and quit."

There are legal immigrants who are accustomed to working for $2.50 a day in Mexico who want to come to the United States, he continued. They'll work for $10, $12 or $15 an hour and send their money back to Mexico to support their families. They're not interested in staying here, Baccus said. Most don't want to be U.S. citizens. They're willing to pay taxes. They want to be legal immigrants. They're willing to do whatever it takes to work here.

"It's a real shame we cannot design an immigration program to fix this situation," Baccus said. "If we don't get this job done and our U.S. Congress fails, we're going to see all the fruit and vegetables grown south of the border."

If that comes to be what could happen to food safety and the safeguards ensured by our highly regulated food industry?

How much control will this country have with the food produced in Mexico?

Zero?

This Week's Recipe Contest Winner
 Is Shirley Deiser, Kanopolis

Winner Shirley Deiser, Kanopolis:
KENTUCKY BUTTER CAKE

- 3 cups flour
- 2 cups white sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup butter
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- 4 eggs

Butter Sauce:
 3/4 cup sugar
 1/3 cup butter
 3 tablespoons water
 2 teaspoons vanilla

Mix flour, sugar, salt, baking powder and baking soda. Blend in milk, butter, vanilla and eggs. Beat and pour into greased and floured bundt pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 60 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean. Cool slightly and put cake on serving plate. Prick holes in cake if you want Butter Sauce to seep in. For the Butter Sauce in a saucepan combine sugar, butter, water and vanilla. Cook over medium heat until melted and combined. Do not boil. Pour over cake.

- EASY HALLOWEEN FUDGE
- 1 2/3 cups sugar
  - 2/3 cup evaporated milk
  - 1 tablespoon unsalted butter
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - 6 ounces chocolate chips
  - 16 large marshmallows
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
  - 1 cup chopped nuts

Combine sugar, milk, butter and salt. Bring to a boil and boil 5 minutes stirring constantly. Add chips and stir until melted. Remove from stove and add vanilla and marshmallows. Put in 9-inch pan. Let cool and cut.

CANDY CORN SURPRISE

- 2 cups coarsely chopped pecans
- 1 cup Halloween Candy Corn
- 1 1/2 pounds white chocolate candy bark, coarsely chopped
- 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Toast pecans, in a single layer, in a shallow pan for 8-10 minutes. Line a 15-by-10-inch jelly roll pan with lightly greased foil. Microwave candy bark, sweetened condensed milk, and salt in a 2-quart microwave safe bowl on high for 3-4 minutes, stirring at 1 minute intervals. Stir until smooth. Stir in vanilla, candy corn and pecans. Spread evenly in prepared pan. Cool; cover and chill at least 2 hours or until set. Turn candy out onto cutting board and cut into squares. Store, covered, at room temperature. Betterrecipes.com

AHA Certified As Heart-Healthy Let Potatoes Improve Your Salad Days

(NAPSA) — Here's heartening news: A smart salad can become even more heart healthy — and delicious-when you add potatoes.

That's because Idaho® potatoes have been certified by the American Heart Association as meeting its heart-healthy food criteria.

In addition, a medium 5.3-ounce Idaho potato has only 110 calories, contains zero fat and cholesterol, and is packed with nutrients including 45 percent of the daily value of vitamin C, nearly twice as much potassium as a medium banana, fiber, protein, vitamin B6 and complex carbohydrates. All these important vitamins and nutrients help keep your body fueled and strong all day long.

A great way to enjoy all that nutrition is in this easy, elegant salad:

IDAHO

POTATO & PESTO CHICKEN SALAD

Yield: 8 servings

2 pounds Idaho potatoes, well scrubbed (peeled, if desired)

- 1 pound fresh green beans, washed & trimmed
  - 1 tablespoon olive oil
  - 1 1/2 pounds boneless, skinless chicken breast, cut into 1-inch cubes
  - 3/4 cup prepared pesto sauce
  - 3 to 6 cups mixed salad greens (optional)
- Over high heat, in a large, heavy pot with tight-fitting cover, bring half a pot of water to boil. Meanwhile, cut potatoes in half lengthwise, then cut crosswise in 1/2-inch slices. Add potatoes to boiling water, cover and return to boiling; cook 3 minutes. Add green beans to pot with potatoes and cook another 4 minutes; drain potatoes and beans and set aside (vegetables should be firm). In same pot, heat olive oil over high heat and cook chicken, stirring 6 to 8 minutes or until meat is completely cooked through. Remove from heat; stir in pesto sauce, then gently stir in potatoes and green beans, taking care not to break up vegetables. Serve salad warm or at room temperature on a bed of salad greens, if desired.

To be sure you're getting genuine, top-quality Idaho potatoes, look for the "Grown In Idaho®" seal.

When did this happen?

By Lou Ann Thomas

I started talking even before Babs sat down. I was meeting my friend for lunch and was anxious to tell her about a party I had recently attended. I knew she would help me sort it all out.

The party had been filled with young advertising professionals and since copywriting had been my first career, I was hoping to make some connection with those doing that now. But apparently somewhere between my home and the party I had become invisible.

No one was the slightest bit interested in talking to me or even acknowledging my presence. I nodded, I spoke, I smiled my best and warmest smile, but my charm had no effect. I tried my best to start a conversation, but to no avail. And after eavesdropping a bit, I admit I felt a little relieved, since they seemed to be only talking about who had the fanciest smartphone and newest tablet, what apps they were all using and how much money they were making.

I quickly filled Babs in on standing around in a room full of people close to half my age, feeling quite deflated and much like a ghost — an old, very useless ghost.

"Don't take it personally," Babs said. "They're just young."

"When did this happen? When did we become invisible and of no use to those younger than us?" I asked.

"I don't know. It just happens. Remember how our mantra was 'Never trust anyone over 30'?"

Babs said.

"Yeah, but did we believe the world revolved around us and our dreams of big money and speed-of-light living?"

"No, we had different dreams. We talked about how we wanted to do something meaningful and how we were going to grow our own food and change the world, which we were certain revolved around us," Babs said.

"Our dreams seem more honorable," I said defiantly.

"Yeah? How much of your own food have you grown lately?" Babs asked as we walked out of the diner. "It's just part of the circle of life. Someday those 20- and 30-year-olds will be our age and wonder what happened to the younger generation and, more importantly, to them."

I kicked at a piece of gravel in the parking lot and said; "I'm feeling really old right now."

"You be careful," Babs said as we watched the piece of gravel roll away. "At your age, you could fall and break a hip."

THE WAY WEST

By Jim Gray

Red Bill Jones

Caldwell was incorporated on July 22, 1879. By August 14 Caldwell had its first official city police force. Two-gun George Flatt was appointed Caldwell City Marshal. Daniel William “Red Bill” Jones was named his deputy.

Jones was well known, having served as city marshal in the county seat of Wellington. After a couple of years in that position he operated the Red Fork Trader’s Ranch, located where the Chisholm Trail crossed the Cimarron River. He was well-liked by cowboys and citizens alike and performed his duty according to the law, as long as he stayed sober. His own officers had to arrest him for disorderly conduct when he was marshal of Wellington. His frequent bouts with the bottle gave him a sympathetic point of view towards the occasional drunken cowboy.

As Dan was Red Bill’s first name, the newspapers often referred to him as such. Just after he was deputized his name made the local paper. While making his rounds on September 22, 1879, Red Bill saw the need to answer “nature’s call.” His need was dire and in his haste he found himself inside the room reserved for ladies. Never mind. He would only be a few minutes. But in that time a lady attempted to enter. She was foiled by the latch Red Bill held on the inside. Not to be denied, the lady produced a key which was tried without success, but the door was forsaken with the mechanism locked from the outside. Wishing to remain nameless, Red Bill sat down, placed his boots against the door, and “pushed the door asunder.” Unfortunately, his pistol fell from its holster “down, down to the bottomless...” A light was procured and his pistol “fished up” from the deep. The editor of the Caldwell Post assured his readers that “if the street gossip don’t mention this we will never say a word about it to Dan.”

About a month later, a young cowboy by the name of John Dean managed to stir things up a bit. In the midst of his rowdy celebration someone noticed a pistol and warned the officers. As Marshal Flatt and Deputy Red Bill approached, the cowboy swiftly mounted his Texas cowpony and charged down the street, shooting wildly into the air. Flatt called out that Dean was under arrest, but Dean just turned in his saddle and let off a round in Flatt’s direction. Both officers opened fire, emptying their six-shooters, but Dean continued to bound away as bullets split the air all about him.

Evidently cowboy John Dean wasn’t the brightest of waddies on the range. He turned up back in Caldwell later that day and was arrested by Red Bill.

On Saturday evening, April 24, 1880, a soldier got tanked up on Caldwell whiskey and proceeded to shoot out window panes, proclaiming that he could not be taken by any officer that Caldwell had to offer. But “...as soon as Dan Jones (Red Bill) and James Johnson heard of the matter ‘they gathered him in’ and gave him quarters in the cooler." A few weeks later, the Caldwell Post of May 6, 1880, praised the police force, "Our city police are as vigilant as hawks and we cannot enough praise them for their efficiency."

On May 11, their efficiency was tested by a whole gang of drunken soldiers. The fight started over gambling winnings. As the soldiers weighed in on the judgment, the Marshal and Deputy Red Bill Jones waded into them. According to the May 13, Post, "For a while it was lively, as the number of cut heads and bloody noses bear witness."

The demons of the bottle caught up to Red Bill on October 25, 1881, when he "turned himself loose" on Caldwell with a shooting exhibition, cowboy style. He was rounded up and placed in the "cooler" without the slightest concession for the service he had given to Caldwell. Nevertheless his friends couldn't bear to see him treated as a common criminal. During the night the door was broken open and Red Bill was released. A state warrant was issued for his apprehension, but he was never again jailed.

A few weeks later, in a peculiar twist of frontier administration, the city of Caldwell offered Red Bill the city marshal position. Apparently he had tempted fate long enough. Red Bill turned down the offer of the badge and retired from the risky way of life he had come to know on The Way West.

Teddy Blue

Teddy Blue was a cowboy's cowboy. He lived the life as true as could be and rode the range long before fences crisscrossed the land. He was born in England and brought to America as a baby. He was ten years old when he made his first cattle drive up the trail from Texas to Nebraska in 1871.

During the Civil War, cattle ran wild across Texas. While the war raged, the cattle multiplied across southern Texas by the thousands. There were so many they were only worth $4 a head if you could find a buyer. Cheap cattle were overrunning Texas while the rest of the states were crying for beef. There were no railroads in Texas so cowboys began trailing them north to Kansas and Nebraska to the railheads for shipment east.

When Teddy's family came from England they settled near Lincoln, Nebraska. His father bought a herd of Texas longhorns and Teddy went with his father by train and boat to pick them up near the Red River in Texas. Young Teddy's job was to wrangle the horses on the way north. His first taste of the cowboy life convinced him that he would spend the rest of his life as a cowboy.

When they reached Nebraska, he stayed out on the range herding his father's cattle and worked on different outfits around Nebraska during the 1870s.

In the winter of those years, he lived at home but when the cattle were turned out in spring, he went with them and lived in camp, cooking and taking care of himself. In July, the herds from Texas started reaching Nebraska. He would visit the camps and listen to the cowpunchers as they told about the trail and the hardships they endured.

He left home in the fall of 1878 and hired on taking a herd north to the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation in South Dakota. When they delivstart moving north again, he hired on to trail a herd to Ogallala. When that drive was over, he went home and spent the winter. In the spring he went west to the Loupe River and signed on with the Olive outfit that he had brought a herd up the trail with a few years earlier. He was gaining a reputation as a savvy trail cowboy and his work ethic and reputation guaranteed him employment.

He worked around the Platte River with different cow outfits in the summer of 1882. They moved several herds to the railroad for shipment. The next year he hired out to a New England outfit to take a herd from Texas all the way to the Yellowstone River in Montana. That was a cowpuncher's dream, to go as far north as the Yellowstone River in Montana. Teddy Blue helped receive and road brand that herd near San Antonio.

It was brush country and he claimed that everything that grew there had thorns on it that were an inch long. You couldn't survive without chaps. After they had worked all day, they came to a little open prairie and bedded the herd down. Teddy tied his night horse to the wagon, took off his chaps and laid down on them. He pulled his slicker over him and fell asleep. The clap of thunder awakened him and then somebody yelled, "They're running!"

It was a stampede. Teddy grabbed his hat and jumped on his horse, forgetting to pull on his chaps. He spent the night chasing cattle through the thorny brush. When daylight came, they hadn't lost a single cow but Teddy Blue was a bloody mess. He had a big hole on his forehead and was covered in blood. His hands were cut to pieces because he had left his gloves in his chap's pocket. His knees were worst of all without the protection of chaps. He told the boss that if he ever got out of that brush, he was never going back. And he never did. He picked thorns out of his skin all the way to Kansas.

Eleven men made up the average crew with a trail herd. Two men led the herd and were the point men. As the herd strung out, two men behind them were the swing and two on the flank. In the rear were two drag drivers. The cook, wrangler and boss made up the rest of the crew. Greenhorns or least experienced men were always the drag where the dust was so thick you could chew it.

The first night after they crossed the North Platte, Teddy was on night guard and it hailed so hard, he told his partner to go to the other side of the herd, unsaddle his horse and hold the saddle over his head for protection. Teddy did the same on his side of the herd. There were still dents in his saddle when he sold it a year later.

Teddy spent the 1870s and 1880s driving herds up the Texas and Western Trails through Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Wyoming and the Dakotas. Montana and Canada were the final destinations for some of those herds. Conditions were primitive and the cowboys driving those herds spent months on the trail under extreme hardships. They were a tough breed and subsisted under conditions that would drive most men away after only a few days.

Teddy Blue relished the challenges faced on the trail but when he saw Montana's Yellowstone country, he decided to put some roots down. He filed on a homestead, bought some cattle and started the Two Deuce Ranch where he lived with his wife until his death in 1939.

Dead animal handling and composting demonstration planned for October 29

In Kansas, rendering, composting, incineration and burial are approved ways to dispose of dead livestock. Johnson County K-State Research and Extension is partnering with Johnson County Department of Health and Environment and the Johnson County Livestock Association to host a free, on-farm composting demonstration, Tuesday, October 29, from 11 a.m. to noon. The demonstration will be held at the farm of Pete and Donna Goetzmann, 15253 Dillie Road, Gardner. Ken Powell from the Kansas Department of Health and Environment will provide an overview of each disposal option and discuss livestock composting regulations.

For additional information contact Rick Miller, Johnson County Extension agriculture agent, at 913-715-7000, rick.miller@jocogov.org. Directions are available at www.johnson.ksu.edu.

Donate to the South Dakota Rancher Relief Fund

South Dakota and portions of Wyoming and Nebraska were hit earlier this month with what is being called one of the most devastating blizzards in history. The storm resulted in the death of tens of thousands of head of livestock. For some ranchers, reported herd losses are 50-90% or more.

To provide relief for producers affected by the blizzard, the South Dakota Stockgrowers Association, South Dakota Cattlemen's Association and the South Dakota Sheep Growers Association have established the South Dakota Rancher Relief Fund.

"While we're heartened at the outpouring of support coming from around the country and offers of cattle donations, we are encouraging folks to consider financial donations at this time," says Jodie Anderson, executive director for the South Dakota Cattlemen's Association. "With winter bearing down, those affected are struggling with clean-up operations in addition to the normal fall roundup, weaning and pre-winter preparations. Our focus at present is financial, physical and psychological support for producers slogging through the gruesome clean-up process."

The fund is administered by the Black Hills Area Community Foundation in cooperation with the founding livestock organizations. Find more details at www.sdcatmen.org or contribute online at www.giveblackhills.org, and search for "Rancher's Relief Fund."

Monetary Donations

To contribute with a credit card, please visit www.giveblackhills.org/2767 and click on the "Donate Now" button. Checks made payable to "Ranchers Relief Fund" may also be mailed to the Black Hills Area Community Foundation, P.O. Box 231, Rapid City, SD 57709. A financial donation to the Ranchers Relief Fund will help with immediate expenses incurred such as carcass removal, fence repair and roundup/hauling of strays.

Material and Labor Donations

The South Dakota Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster (SDVOAD) is handling the organization of material and labor donations. Within South Dakota, please call 1-877-708-4357 with offers of equipment or labor. Out-of-state volunteers may call 1-605-274-1454. Be prepared to give your name, contact information, and specifics of what you are willing to do and/or donate. This information will be matched with those needing assistance as they are identified in the coming days.

"This is going to be a long road to recovery for ranchers who were in the impacted area," Anderson says. "The next monumental task will be carcass removal before winter comes. Beyond that it's trying to help determine what rancher's financial and emotional hurdles are, and how we can help get them back on their feet."

Wyatt Forshee, Concordia FFA, drove the reserve champion market swine at the Cloud County Fair.

Final agenda set for Kansas Rural Center 2013 Farm & Food Conference

The final agenda has been set for the Kansas Rural Center's 2013 Farm and Food Conference, "Farming as if People Matter: How to Feed Ourselves, Build New Farms and Adapt to a Changing World." The conference will be held at the Meridian Center, 1420 E. Broadway Ct., Newton, Saturday, November 2, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The daylong event includes fourteen workshop sessions covering five topic tracks: Farm Transitions, Farm Management, Local Food Marketing, Community Food Solutions, and Food & Farming Policy. Workshop sessions will include regional experts in a wide range of fields to cover information on family farm transitions; farming with limited access to land, credit and capital; pricing of farm products for local markets; encouraging pollinators; Farm to School; emerging policy issues in Kansas; building soil health; crop insurance for specialty crops and organic; establishing community gardens and more. A full list of workshops offered during the day can be found at kansasruralcenter.org/conference.

The conference will feature keynote speaker Wes Jackson, founder and President of the Land Institute in Salina. Jackson, an internationally recognized leader in sustainable agriculture and author of several books, will present on "When Ecology Replaces Agronomy for Food Production."

The day will also provide an opportunity for networking with others who share the same interests, concerns, or challenges. This will include a "Lean In" inspired session for women on the farm, and a session intended to connect beginning and established farmers. An exhibition will be available throughout the day which will feature over 16 businesses and organizations offering information of interest to attendees. To register, please visit www.kansasruralcenter.org. Registration is $45 per person, which includes conference materials and a lunch made from locally sourced ingredients. This conference is an annual event presented by the Kansas Rural Center. Sponsors this year include Kansas Sustainable Agriculture Research and Extension, Kansas Center for Sustainable Agriculture and Alternative Crops, Farm Aid, and Heartland Mill, Inc.

The Kansas Rural Center is a non-profit organization that since 1979 has promoted the long-term health of the land and its people through research, education and advocacy that advances economically viable, ecologically sound, and socially just food and farming systems.

A conference agenda, list of exhibitors and sponsors and other upcoming events are available at www.kansasruralcenter.org. Or contact conference coordinator, Natalie Fullerton, nfullerton@kansasruralcenter.org or 402-310-0177 for more information.

Harvest a good time to evaluate your weed control programs

David G. Hallauer,
Meadowlark Extension
District Agent
Crops & Soils/Horticulture

Harvest tends to give us an opportunity for a 'bird's eye view' of our weed control program. Are you happy with what you see? What weeds 'escaped'? Was your herbicide program what it needed to be? In most cases, glyphosate alone isn't doing the trick - what will? During the next few weeks, we'll look at some 'problem' weeds and see what KSU Extension specialists Dallas Peterson and Doug Shoup have seen. First up: pigweeds.

When I say pigweeds, we'll lump them altogether to include waterhemp and Palmer amaranth. Unfortunately, glyphosate-resistant waterhemp has exploded across eastern Kansas in recent years, and glyphosateresistant Palmer amaranth is becoming more common as well. For pre-emergence pigweed control, the Valor-based herbicides (Valor SX, Valor XLT, Fierce, Gangster, Envive, and Enlite) and Authority-based herbicides (Authority Maxx, Authority XL, Authority First, Sonic, Authority Assist, Authority MTZ, and Spartan) can all provide very good to excellent control to supplement a postemergence program. Prefix is another excellent "foundation" herbicide for residual pigweed control in soybeans and can be applied early postemergence as prior to emergence. Intro, Dual, Outlook, and Prowl products can also provide some early-season pigweed control, but generally are not as effective as those previously mentioned products. Zidua and Anthem contain the active ingredient pyroxasulfone (also a component of Fierce). Pyroxasulfone has a similar mode of action to Intro, Dual, and Outlook but may provide longer residual control of pigweeds.

Although some of these herbicides can be applied in the fall or early spring, those treatments generally will not persist long enough to give good pigweed control into the growing season. If pigweed is the primary target, treatments will be most effective if applied no more than two weeks prior to planting. If glyphosate-resistant pigweeds escape preemergence control, the primary postemergence tank-mix options are Cobra, Flexstar, or Ultra Blazer. Timing is critical for good control. Apply these products before pigweeds exceed four inches tall.

Specialty license plate supports Kansas agriculture and education

Driving through Kansas, you'll see signs that say, "One Kansas farmer feeds 155 people and you," indicating the importance of agriculture in Kansas. Kansans can support the number one industry in the state while providing funds to help educate Kansas youth just by purchasing a specialty license plate for their vehicle.

The Agri-Tag specialty tag program is an effort by the Kansas Foundation for Agriculture in the Classroom (KFAC) to promote agriculture in Kansas and to support the statewide K-12 agriculture literacy programs KFAC delivers.

"Agri-Tags allow farmers, teachers and consumers to cheer for agriculture and agriculture education as they drive many miles of roadways," said Cathy Musick, KFAC executive director. "Dollars collected by these tax-exempt donations fund teacher workshops, educator guides and lesson plan creation for Kansas elementary teachers and their students. We are proud to offer this visual reminder of the importance of agriculture to our state residents and to the economy."

Previously, the procedure to get an Agri-Tag was more time-consuming and complicated. Interested patrons had to fill out a form and send in a $25 check to the Foundation to receive a green official document. The document had to be presented to their county treasurer in order to receive or renew their Agri-Tag. That system changed earlier in 2013 when the state created a system to track and record all new and renewed Agri-Tags. There's no need for the green certificate anymore so current and new Agri-Tag owners can simply visit their county treasurer.

"We are so appreciative of the state's county treasurers for taking on the issuing of our specialty tags," Sheridan Wimmer, KFAC program assistant said. "The process to receive and renew Agri-Tags is so much simpler and efficient now. KFAC hopes the increased efficiency will result in an increased number of Agri-Tags on highways, country roads and city roads."

The Agri-Tag program has more than 400 license plates on the road and several companies feature the Agri-Tag on their fleet of vehicles. "KanEquip, Inc. is proud to support KFAC's Agri-Tag program by displaying the license plates on our fleet of vehicles," said Jaimee Hoobler, Human Resource Manager at KanEquip. "The process is simple and it's a win-win; we support KFAC and promote agriculture at the same time."

If you're interested in supporting KFAC's mission to connect classrooms to Kansas agriculture, simply visit your county treasurer and ask for an Agri-Tag. A $25 donation will reach the Foundation. There is a one-time specialty tag fee of $48.50, plus your applicable fees.

The $25 donation is tax deductible. The vehicle weight limit is 20,000 pounds. For additional questions, contact the KFAC office at 785-320-4350.

BAXTER BLACK

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Amish Recycling

The Amish have many admirable traits; generosity, a work ethic, a Godly discipline, thriftiness and a small footprint on the ecology. Talk about recycling!

They put us glass, tin can, cardboard, energy-hungry practitioners to shame. We use so much diesel, gas and oil driving, hauling, mashing, crushing and condensing the messes we make it's probably not an even trade.

The Amish don't make a mess in the first place.

An example of their "leave no mess" philosophy was demonstrated when Amish Joe decided to sell a cull cow at the local sale barn in rural Indiana. Joe hired a man to haul her. Joe's son Jack and his brother-in-law Amos all wanted to go. They could only fit three in the pickup so Amos climbed in the stock trailer with the cow. It was November, but the trailer was a solid body gooseneck with full doors so there was no danger of Amos getting cold.

Once they reached the auction and parked in the unloading line, Joe and Jack went into the barn to visit. Amos waited patiently for them to come back, till finally he beat on the side of the trailer. This racket woke the driver, who came back and opened the trailer gates.

Amos stepped out into the daylight, paused, and the cow ran out over the top of him! She trotted through the parking lot and as truck doors opened she showed them all her tail. Out onto the four-lane highway, she looked back with pride, and was blindsided by a well-used faded gray Toyota Camry.

When Joe reached the scene of the collision he noted that the hood was dented and one headlight had a black eye. Joe offered to take the victim's information, but he took one look at the dazed cow and said, "No thanks!"

Before anybody could grab a rope, the cow struggled to her feet and ran into a newly harvested soybean field. The chase was on! The pursuers never had a chance, bogged down, slinging mud and stumbling over each other. Then the Indiana State Police arrived. One officer stayed to monitor the radio; the other, Officer York, had just come on duty. His hat was clean, his shirt was starched, his brass was polished and his shoes were shined. "I ain't goin' out der," said Officer York, "but with your permission I will restrain the cow." He drew his Glock 22, chambered for .40 S&W and began firing at the cow 20 yards away.

After a few stray shots

he handed the pistol to Joe, who brought her down with one bullet. The policeman asked about disposal of the carcass. Joe said he would take care of it. After a 30 minute trip to Wal-Mart he returned to the scene of the gun battle with a roll of plastic, Coleman lantern, meat saw and some butcher knives. By 2 a.m. they were putting a cowful of wrapped primal cuts in his propane freezer back home in the milk barn.

We can all learn a lesson about real recycling from Joe. As to what Joe learned, he remarked that if he was ever being pursued by the state police he'd prefer it be Officer York, especially if gunfire was involved.

Time to plan for the 2014 Kansas Wheat Yield Contest

With winter wheat planting underway throughout Kansas, farmers are encouraged to begin planning to participate in the fifth annual Kansas Wheat Yield Contest, and win $1,000 in cash.

Farmers must enroll a plot at least five acres in size into the contest and provide management information about that plot.

The contest includes three regions: Region 1 (Western Kansas), Region 2 (Central Kansas) and Region 3 (Eastern Kansas). Contestants achieving the top yield in each region will receive a $1,000 cash award from Kansas Wheat and BASF, the lead corporate sponsor of the Kansas Wheat Yield Contest. Additional cash prizes are available for winning entries using AgriPro, PlainsGold, WestBred, Limagrain or Kansas Wheat Alliance seed.

"BASF is excited to be a sponsor of the 2014 Kansas Wheat Yield Contest. Kansas wheat producers continue to raise the bar on wheat yields, a necessary step to feeding the expanding world population," said Sean Mills, BASF North Central Kansas business representative. "Confirmation of high-production techniques and practices contest winners develop demonstrates the potential for all Kansas wheat producers to increase yield and maintain high quality production demanded by the world market."

To enter the contest, farmers must submit a completed entry form and $50 per entry payment by May 1, 2014. For KAWG members the $50 entry fee is waived for the first entry. Farmers may enter more than once, but each entry must be submitted on a separate form.

"Kansas wheat farmers are some of the best in the world. One of our objectives in this yield contest is to provide an opportunity for them to highlight their profession, along with creating a little friendly competition sponsored by industry partners," said Justin Gilpin, Kansas Wheat CEO. "The deadline for entering the yield contest isn't until next spring, but preparations to compete in the yield contest begin in this fall. Wheat is becoming a higher management crop, and as we've seen with past winners, early decisions help their crop reach its genetic yield potential."

In order to enter, contestants must be wheat farmers of at least 18 years of age and Kansas residents. Farmers must use certified seed to be considered and the contest is only open to dryland fields planted with hard winter wheat varieties.

Contestants are encouraged to keep detailed records for any field that may be submitted to the contest. Important records for the contest include planting date, seed and fertilizer rate, and herbicide and fungicide applications. Other beneficial items to track are precipitation and soil type.

In addition to yield-based prizes, farmers will be eligible for the Quality Initiative of the contest sponsored by Kansas Wheat and Kansas Grain Inspection Service. Participants will be asked to collect a two-pound sample of wheat at harvest and send it to the Kansas Wheat office. These samples will be graded, scored and evaluated based on a number of quality parameters. The farmer with the top-quality sample will receive $250 in cash.

Ron Ohlde, 2013 yield contest winner, enjoys participating in the Kansas Wheat Yield Contest because it gives him a chance to compare his operation to others.

"I love to see how my operation stacks up," said Ohlde. "It boils down to testing. You've got to test varieties, fertilizer types and rates. Every field and every operation is different, but we can learn from each other."

Additional information about the contest rules and deadlines can be found at www.kswheat.com.

Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay trade slow. Demand light for dairy and grinding alfalfa, for stock cow hay, grass hay and alfalfa pellets. Corn harvest is moving along quickly, rapping up in some places as Soybean harvest picks up, milo harvest is just beginning. Alfalfa producers are finishing up their last cutting, wheat planting is finishing up. Sudan cutting and baling are still active. Livestock producer are hoping for wheat pasture this Fall and right now prospects still look promising. If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange: www.kfb.org/commodities/haypasture/index.html

Kaw Valley 4-H Club to celebrate 75th anniversary Oct. 27

The Kaw Valley 4-H Club of Wamego will celebrate the 75th Anniversary of their Founding Charter on Sunday, October 27, 2013. All past and present Kaw Valley 4-H members and leaders are invited to the Wamego Middle School from 3 to 4 p.m. to enjoy refreshments, visit with old friends, reminisce and see what the club is doing now. If former members have photographs, newspaper clippings, an old record book, plaques and awards, or other memorabilia, they can bring them to show that day or contact Annie Phillips at 785-456-7583 or phillips@wamego.net. The very first 4-H Club charters were issued in Kansas in 1924. Wamego's Kaw Valley Club was chartered in 1938 and the members are proud to celebrate seventy-five years of learning, fun, achievements and community service. Some of the projects being enjoyed by current members include raising and showing livestock, woodworking, sewing, geology, knitting, painting and other arts and crafts, baking and food preservation, LEGO designs, robotics, rocketry and veterinary science. The current club members are looking forward to meeting past members and hearing about their experiences. A commemorative pin has been designed to mark this proud occasion.

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crofts

The government shut-down is done for the time being and we are back to getting USDA reports. The October supply and demand report has been cancelled completely, so we will have to wait until November 8th for fresh supply and demand numbers. The October Cattle on Feed report has been postponed until Thursday, October 31st at 2:00 p.m., which is a change of pace for that report since it is usually released when the markets aren't trading. Export sales data began being released Friday, but they only released the oldest missed report instead of catching us up to the present, so I am not sure how they will proceed from here with the old data, but we should have a normal report this week.

The corn market was pretty quiet during the past week with only one day of any action to speak of. The rest of the time was spent in directionless trade. Yield reports remain very good, which will continue to cap rally attempts due to the fear of a bearish November supply and demand report. As the export sales data become available we will probably see some friendly numbers, but in the short run the production number should trump demand. Once harvest is over and the crop size is determined then demand numbers will play a more significant role. The deteriorating value of the dollar may end up spurring a huge recovery in U.S. corn exports.

The wheat market has been very active. There are a number of bullish market inputs ranging from strong demand for U.S. wheat, to Argentine production problems, to rising prices in Europe and China. The November supply and demand report will show very tight supplies of Hard Red Winter Wheat, and just how small the HRW ending stocks figure is will have a lot to say about price direction in the coming months.

There is a very good chance we see the old crop futures move over $8.00, but the new crop is a different story. The new crop will be very sensitive to the weather this spring because another poor crop will keep supplies uncomfortably tight.

The November soybeans have been range-bound the entire month of October, which makes perfect sense given the information being thrown at the market. On one hand traders are worried about the good yield reports and fear a higher estimate in the next report, but on the other hand there is still concern about an acreage cut in the next report and export sales have been outstanding. There is still a great deal of bullish potential in the soybean market, but it will all come down to the production estimate in the November report.

Cash cattle traded as high as $131 and we saw new highs in most of the live cattle and feeder cattle contracts, but the market fell apart once the cash cattle trade was done. The charts look pretty negative after Thursday's big reversals lower, so we are bound to see some follow-through selling. The long term direction of the market will still come down to the cash cattle trade. If we see steady to higher trade then the correction in the futures will be very short-lived. The fundamentals of the cattle market are still very bullish and the cattle on feed report should confirm that once again.

PROPERTY LOCATION: 2 miles north of Olpe, KS on Hwy. 99 to Rd. 90 then west 4.4 miles to Rd. F and the SE corner of said property or approximately 6.5 miles south of Emporia to Rd. 90th.
LEGAL: N/2 of the SW/4 and the SE/4 of Sec 23, Twp 20S, Rge 10E of the 6th PM except a 10-Acre tract. All in Lyon Co., KS. Approximately 228.86 Acres more or less.
TAXES: $389.94 (based on 2012).
MINERALS: Sellers mineral rights sell with the real estate. There is no mineral production or mineral leases on the property.
GENERAL DESCRIPTION: Been looking for more grazing land in the Flint Hills? Here is your opportunity. This pasture has good access with county road F along the east side & 90th along the south side. The pasture is watered by three ponds (one is spring fed) and is cross fenced with approximately 80 acres on the NW and the balance in the SE/4. Both pastures have water and good fence with 4 & 5 barb wire with steel posts.
 Native bluestem & mixed grasses offer livestock grazing with some trees in the draws for good protection for winter grazing in the east pasture. From atop the high country in the west pasture one can see for miles in every direction. The west pasture is clean native grass with little brush or trees. The two pastures complement each other for rotational grazing or varied breeding programs. I encourage you to look at this opportunity to enhance your livestock program.

INSPECTION: Anytime by appointment with Griffin Real Estate & Auction Service, LC.

TERMS: $30,000.00 Earnest money payable evening of the auction to Moon Abstract in certified funds. Balance and possession on or before December 4, 2013 at which time seller will give Kansas Warranty Deed. # Champions chosen from large field of livestock, exhibitors at junior show

A combination of relative newcomers and young “veterans” earned top honors with their livestock projects at the 81st Kansas Junior Livestock Show (KJLS), September 20-23 in Wichita. A total of 716 Kansas youth from 89 counties exhibited 1,457 head of livestock. The show is sponsored by the Kansas Livestock Association (KLA), Kansas State University and the Agri-Business Council of Wichita.

A 1,337-lb. crossbred shown by 16-year-old Shilo Schaake from Westmoreland bested a field of 128 head to earn grand champion steer honors. Schaake's steer was purchased by Elanco Animal Health, Kansas Feeds, Zoetis Animal Health, Jim & Linda Maddox, State Farm Foundation, Xtra Factor, The Hartford Company, Qualitech and Direct LLC for $10,600 during the Auction of Champions held at the show's conclusion.

The reserve grand champion steer, shown by 12-year KJLS exhibitor Brooke Jensen of Courtland, was a 1,296-lb. crossbred worth $12,950 to Micro, Micronutrients, NuTech Biosciences, Bill DeVore, Westway, Coonrod Family Foundation and Nutrition Services.

For the second consecutive year, Sarah Pelton of Paradise led the champion Angus steer. The reserve went to an Angus entry shown by Taylor Goering of McPherson.

In the Chianina division, Madylien Voboril of Overland Park exhibited the champion steer. Clay Pelton, Paradise, led the reserve Chianina.

Champion Hereford went to a steer shown by Wyatt Lange of Clifton. Kate Hagans, Utica, owned the reserve Hereford steer.

Showing the champion

Maine-Anjou steer was Blane Steckline of Garden Plain. Jansen Parsons of Anthony exhibited the reserve Maine-Anjou.

Katelyn Moore from Osborne showed the champion steer in the Simmental division. The reserve Simmental was exhibited by Abigail Dickinson, Gorham.

In the Shorthorn division, Jared Hoffman of Effingham showed the champion. Chantelle Scott, Ransom, led the reserve Shorthorn.

Taylor Goering, McPherson, owned the champion steer in the all other breeds (AOB) division. Jillian Keller of Piqua showed the reserve AOB.

A Chianina owned by six-year KJLS veteran Taylor Goering of McPherson was judged supreme champion of the 265-head breeding heifer show. A Maine-Tainer shown by Madison Loschke from Kingsdown was the reserve supreme heifer.

The reserve Chianina heifer was led by Cody Hrabe, Stockton. Clay Eckert of Hutchinson exhibited the reserve Maine-Tainer. A heifer led by Luke Sankey of Andale claimed champion honors in the Angus division. An Angus entry from Kelsey Theis of Leavenworth followed in reserve.

McKenna Richardson, Eureka, showed the champion Charolais heifer, while the reserve was owned by Jaid Runft, Scandia.

An entry from Chase Ratliff of Westphalia earned champion Charolais percentage honors. Weston Schrader of Wells led the Charolais percentage reserve.

Sweeping the Gelbvieh division were entries led by Meredith Clark of Barnard, taking both champion and reserve.

The champion Hereford

female was owned by Ben Jensen from Courtland, with Ty Ellerman of Effingham exhibiting the reserve Hereford.

Ashlee Corns from Eureka owned the champion Limousin. The reserve went to a Limousin heifer exhibited by Logan Wilson of Osawatomie.

Abby Wood of Leavenworth led the champion Maine-Anjou heifer, while Haven Johnson from Washington showed the reserve.

In the Red Angus division, Jera Schoenfeld of Oakley exhibited the champion, and Grace Aust from LaCygne owned the reserve.

A heifer shown by Jansen Gerstner from Frankfort was named champion Shorthorn, while Jake Nikkel from McPherson exhibited the reserve. The ShorthornPlus division was topped by an entry from Trenton Goering of McPherson. Blane Steckline, Garden Plain, showed the reserve ShorthornPlus.

The champion Simmental was led by Jody Baragary from Tonganoxie, with Carson Keller of Piqua showing the reserve. Lauren Prill of Wichita owned the Simmental percentage champion and Cody Hrabe of Stockton exhibited the reserve.

In the AOB division, Cheyanne Ratliff of Westphalia showed the champion. Kaylee Gum from Pittsburg led the reserve AOB. The champion commercial heifer was exhibited by Madison Ratliff of Westphalia. Reserve commercial honors went to an entry from Brooke Jensen of Courtland.

Barrett Simon, Leon, took the champion senior cattle showman title. Reserve senior champion was Hadley Schotte, Marysville. Rounding out the top five, in order of finish, were: Bailey McKay, Marysville; Taylor Nikkel, Maple Hill; and Jake Nikkel, McPherson. In the junior cattle showmanship division, Mason Runft, Scandia, earned champion honors. Taylor Dieball, Little River, took reserve. Rounding out the top five, in order of finish, were: Drew DeWitt, Braman, Okla; Tanner Walden, Tonganoxie; and Clay Eckert, Hutchinson.

Layne Pettijohn from Cedar guided her 269-lb. dark crossbred to the grand champion market hog title. S.O.W. Corporation of Wichita paid $3,105 for her entry during the premium sale. A 283-lb. Yorkshire owned by Iola sophomore Caitlin Dreher was reserve grand champion hog of the 262-head show. MoJack of Wichita placed a bid of $2,680 on Dreher's hog.

Brody Nemecek of Iola showed the reserve champion dark crossbred, with Oren Rickabaugh from Wilmore owning the reserve Yorkshire. In the Duroc division, Briggs Kerr of Dodge City exhibited the champion. Shelby Werth from Ellis showed the reserve Duroc. Brody Nemecek of Iola also exhibited the champion Hampshire. Reserve went to a Hampshire entry from Tristan Davis, Princeton.

The champion dark AOB division was won by an entry from Tristan Davis of Princeton. Will Blythe, Maple Hill, guided the reserve dark AOB barrow. In the light AOB division, Alex Cannady of Ottawa exhibited the champion. Emily Peine of Princeton showed the reserve light AOB. Dillon Knepp, Solomon, entered the barrow that won the light crossbred division. In reserve, was a light crossbred guided by Cooper Wuthnow, Manchester.

A Yorkshire owned by Lane Mai of Russell bested 68 head to claim supreme champion honors in the breeding gilt show. Tyler Goetzmann from Gardner owned the dark AOB chosen as reserve supreme gilt. Braden Mai of Russell guided the reserve champion Yorkshire, while Seth Burroughs from Williamsburg exhibited the reserve dark AOB. In the Duroc division, champion honors went to a gilt owned by Trentyn Gilges of Edgerton. The reserve Duroc was shown by John Fritts from Emporia. Brody Nemecek of Iola exhibited the champion Hampshire gilt. Reserve was awarded to a Hampshire shown by Kaylee Lukert from Paxico. In the light AOB division, Carly Dreher of Iola showed the champion, and Logan Wilson from Osawatomie exhibited the reserve.

LYON COUNTY • COTTONWOOD RIVER CROPLAND

AUCTION

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14 — 7:00 PM

Auction Location: Flint Hills Room at Best Western Hospitality House, 3021 W. Hwy. 50
EMPORIA, KANSAS 66801

SELLERS: ASHCRAFT BROTHERS

PROPERTY LOCATION: 1600 Rd. C 5, Emporia, KS. Approximately 4 miles west of Emporia, KS on Hwy. 50 to Rd. C 5 (1/4 mile west of Williams Truck Service), then south over the railroad tracks. The property is on the east side of the county road.

LEGAL DESCRIPTION: W/2 of the NE/4 and the N/2 of the NE/4 of the NE/4 of Sec 16, Twp. 19, S. Rge 10 E. of the 6th PM subject to right of way of the AT&SF railway. All in Lyon Co., KS. 82.51 Ag acres more or less.

TAXES: $560.00. MINERALS: Sellers mineral rights sell with the property. There is no production or mineral leases on the property.

DESCRIPTION: Many of you have been asking for the deep soils of the Cottonwood River Valley, we are privileged to offer just that with this property! Access is important and this property has access on the west with Rd C5, and on the east with Rd D. The railroad crossing on the west has lights and crossing arms. The property is in the flood plain. An important note is the fact that the 2013 flood of the CWR only covered a few acres along the RR tracks. This property will flood, yet it will take one of the bigger floods to cover the property. The acres of cropland are 78.12, Tame Grass is 1.03 A, and the balance of 3.36 acres is native grass, timber and CWR.

FSA INFORMATION:

	Base Acres	Direct Yield
Wheat	14.90	35
Grain Sorghum	34.10	58
Soybeans	35.10	19

Total farm payment: $1,068.00

THE SOIL TYPES: Osage Silty Clay approx. 60%, Chase Silty Clay Loam approx. 30%, Reading Silt Loam approx. 8%, Ivan Silt Loam approx. 2%. These soils are conducive to productive row crop production. There is very little non productive acreage with this tract, but for those who do like some fishing the Cottonwood River flows through the SE corner of the property.

Improvements consist of an older style barn.

NOTE: The 2013 wheat yield was 92 bushels to the acre. Our sellers say they wouldn't believe the wheat yield except they have the elevator tickets for proof! The fall crop is in soybeans. This property definitely has the potential for excellent crop production. Please consider this parcel to enhance your ag operation! We look forward to seeing you at the auction!

TERMS: Earnest money of $25,000.00 will be payable upon signing of contract evening of the auction, payable in certified funds to Lyon Co. Title. Seller will give Kansas Warranty Deed on or before December 12, 2013. Buyer and Seller will share equally for the expense of title insurance for the owner's policy and for closing fees of the title company. The property is being sold with a 40-60 crop share lease in place. The buyer will be responsible for 40% of the fertilizer and 40% of the chemicals for the 2014 wheat crop. The buyer will receive 100% possession of the cropland following harvest of the 2014 wheat crop. Should there be any cropland open for 2014 spring planting the buyer shall receive 100% possession March 1, 2014 of the unplanted acreage. Buyers will be informed of the wheat acreage planted or intending to be planted by evening of the auction. Taxes for 2013 will be the responsibility of the seller. Seller will receive crop share of 2013 crops. All financing arrangements must be made prior to the auction. Statements made evening of the auction take precedence over advertisements. All information has been gathered from Lyon Co. sources and is considered reliable, but not guaranteed.

Prior to the Auction of Champions, KJLS presented $20,500 in scholarships to 12 exhibitors. Those receiving $2,500 awards were: Callahan Grund, Wallace, and Brooke Jensen, Courtland. Tristan Davis, Princeton; Chase Gleason, Uniontown; Nicholas Meyer, Tampa; and Gage Nichols, Russell, each were awarded $2,000 scholarships. Receiving $1,500 stipends were Chloe Creager from Olpe and Chelsey Figge of Onaga. Augustus Anders of Chapman and Jansyn Van Horn from Garfield each were awarded $1,250 scholarships. Receiving $1,000 scholarships were Brittney Houck of Americus and Jaid Runft from Scandia.

Since the inception of the KJLS scholarship program 20 years ago, a total of 268 exhibitors have been awarded $348,600. Proceeds from the Beefeater Barbecue, prior to the Auction of Champions, and private contributions are the primary funding sources for the KJLS scholarship pool.

In addition to KLA, K-State and the Agri-Business Council of Wichita, dozens of volunteers help organize and put on the show.

Nov. 12-14 symposium: finding resolution regarding antibiotic use, resistance

A 360-degree view of the often polarizing topic of antibiotics and antimicrobial resistance will be shared by human health and animal health experts at the “Bridging the Gap between Animal Health and Human Health” symposium in Kansas City, Mo., on Nov. 12-14.

Individuals providing insight and the latest research findings on this highly important issue include Dr. Richard Raymond, former USDA Undersecretary for Food Safety; Katy Keiffer, producer and host of “What Doesn’t Kill You: Food Insights,” a weekly show covering food politics and policy for Heritage Radio Network.org; Craig Wilson, Costco’s vice president of quality insurance, food safety and merchandise services; Tom Heinen, owner of Heinen’s Fine Foods with 17 stores throughout Ohio and Illinois; six speakers from the medical community; and additional presenters from the animal agriculture and environmental health communities.

“This symposium will provide dialogue that will be interesting and eye opening—and even challenging,” states Dr. Nevil Speer, PhD, Western Kentucky University and co-chair of the “Bridging the Gap between Animal Health and Human Health” symposium. “The first and second antibiotic symposium underscored the need for continued dialogue, as antibiotic use in animal and human health is often emotionally charged and plagued by misinformation and incomplete information.

“Finding resolution to antimicrobial resistance must begin with the end in mind: improving human and animal health. Each of us must think in bigger and broader dimensions and focus on collective interests and not positions. This symposium is moving toward that goal.”

Eric Moore, DVM, Merck Animal Health and co-chair of the symposium stresses that the symposium provides a platform where individuals can hear scientific information and separate the scientific facts from perceived facts.

“Reaching resolution among human, animal and environmental health communities requires acceptance that the issues of antimicrobial use and resistance are not personal,” Moore adds. “The scale and complexity of animal and human medical problems embedded in a changing environment demand that scientists and those involved in their respective communities—including myself—move beyond the confines of our own disciplines and explore new organizational models for team science.”

Hosted by the National Institute for Animal Agriculture, the symposium is open to food retailers and leaders in public health, consumer advocacy and animal agriculture, the media and other individuals interested in discussing science and future strategies to preserve antibiotic efficacy.

The 2013 symposium in Kansas City will start on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 12, and conclude in the early afternoon on Thursday, Nov. 14. In addition to high-level, on-the-cutting-edge speakers, the symposium will include small group discussions and time allotted for attendees to ask questions.

The agenda, presentation topics and confirmed presenters for the “Bridging the Gap between Animal Health and Human Health” symposium is available online at www.animalagriculture.org

A white paper summarizing the 2012 symposium, “A One Health Approach to Antimicrobial Use and Resistance: A Dialogue for a Common Purpose,” can be accessed online at NIAA’s website: www.animalagriculture.org

To register for or to learn more about the symposium, please go online to www.animalagriculture.org or call 1-800-237-7193.

Showing the grand champion breeding doe at the Morris County Fair was Joey Carson, shown with Judge Ryan Smoes.

Reserve champion market goat honors at the Cloud County Fair went to the entry shown by Ceanna Hamilton, Hopewell Corners 4-H Club.

Ohlde Seed Farms introduces new field-specific corn hybrids

In a day and age when optimizing the performance of every acre on your operation is your primary goal, Ohlde Seed Farms has developed seed varieties and hybrids that are engineered for your specific field and soil conditions. This Ohlde technology gives you the ability to optimize yield performance in every field in your operation.

"The value of new technology certainly can't be argued," says Shane Ohlde, president of Ohlde Seed Farms. "However, our goal is to utilize the best available global trait technology to develop specific prescription varieties that can provide maximum yields in local soils and field types.

"We all recognize that no two fields on the average Midwest farm have the same characteristics," he continues. "What works best for the loamy soils in a producer's bottom ground is dramatically different than what works on the rolling terrain. And the higher ground that retains little moisture requires a completely different seed solution with higher drought tolerance."

One example of the company's success in this area is their new Ohlde 24-13 corn hybrid, a 113-day maturity variety that provides high yields in combination with great heat and drought-stress tolerance, a feature that is becoming increasingly important in parts of the Midwest. The high test weight and grain quality traits from O 24-13 also come with solid roots and stalks that improve standability.

Explaining the company's number code, Ohlde notes that the first number, or "2" in the case of the 24-13 Hybrid, represents the number of traits. The second is the year the product was, or will be released (2014) and the last two digits provide the maturity (113 days).

"Another important feature of 24-13 and all the other new hybrids for 2014 is that they include Genuity® VT Double PRO® RIB Complete corn technology," Ohlde adds. "This is the first double-stacked corn trait with dual modes-of-action against corn earworm and above-ground insect protection against fall armyworm and European and Southwestern corn borer."

The new VT Double PRO RIB hybrids also offer tolerance to Roundup® brand agricultural herbicide, while the RIB (refuge-in-the-bag) technology puts the refuge that's required for IRM into the same package or container as the fully traited seed.

Other new Ohlde corn hybrids for 2014 include O 24-12, a high-yielding hybrid with great stress tolerance that is ideal for highly productive soils; O 84-01, a 101-day hybrid that provides consistent ears with good placement, despite the fact that it is bred for tough dryland soils and drought stressed area, and O 24-10 RB, another stable and consistent hybrid that is a great choice for tough dryland conditions. For even more diversity, there's a new O 24-05 RB hybrid that adds depth to the early line-up with both toughness and yield punch. Adaptable to a wide geographic area and numerous soil types, it features medium plant height that provides an early canopy and great intactness for fall harvest.

"Of course, we still offer our best tried-and-true products, like O 20-05, which remains the dryland king when it comes to 130 bushels or less," Ohlde concludes. "Plus, the big, robust plants offer stalk strength and the type of ear flex that is hard to find in a 100-day or less hybrid."

For more information on Ohlde Seed Farms or Ohlde corn hybrids, call 785-692-4555 or visit www.ohlde-seeds.com.

Certified Hereford Beef LLC reports record volume in 2013

Certified Hereford Beef (CHB) LLC experienced another year of growth during fiscal year 2013 despite the challenging U.S. economy. The company posted a record year in volume with 48.8 million lb. sold – a 4% increase compared to the previous year.

“Despite tight cattle supplies, record high beef prices and somewhat stagnant beef promotion due to the wide price spreads between beef and competing proteins, CHB LLC reported another record year for volume,” says Craig Huffhines, American Hereford Association (AHA) executive vice president. CHB LLC is a subsidiary of the AHA, with its fiscal year ending Aug. 31.

“At a time when retailers and consumers are cinching their belts, CHB LLC expanded the program,” Huffhines says. “Both harvested cattle numbers and carcasses certified that meet the specification were up by 5% during fiscal year 2013.”

Much of the growth came from expansion of new retail store openings for existing customers along with a rejuvenated case-ready ground beef program. CHB LLC's largest customer – The Fresh Markets (TFM), based in North Carolina – added eight new locations since the first of the year to bring total store numbers to 137 in 26 states. Total CHB@ volume for TFM increased 12.6%, generating more than 8 million lbs. of beef sold during the fiscal year.

Cattle numbers required to supply the CHB program continue to create demand for Hereford and Hereford-English baldie cattle. More than 382,000 cattle were identified through CHB-licensed packing facilities during FY 2013 as eligible from a live specification standpoint, while more than 259,000 carcasses were certified for the program – a certification rate of 68% for FY 2013. “We are thrilled with the growth of the Certified Hereford Beef program and the continued credibility that the Hereford breed is gaining not only in the consumer food sector but also in the demand created for Hereford genetics within the commercial cattle industry,” Huffhines says. “The Hereford breed is a well-established iconic breed within the U.S. cattle industry that is bringing a rejuvenated value to the industry at a time when the industry needs it the most.”

Currently CHB is offered in 301 retail supermarkets in 35 states, as well as through 38 foodservice distribution centers serving restaurants. Since the inception of CHB, 4.3 million cattle have been identified through licensed packing plants as meeting the live animal specifications, and 2.6 million carcasses have been certified to carry the CHB name.

Early results suggest carcass value enhanced by finishing out of the sun

On a hot day, cattle prefer shade. Observing the obvious led to research on the benefits of providing shade in open pens, even before the era of large-scale cattle feeding.

That research continues, ongoing today at Pratt Feeders, a 40,000-head, quality-focused feedyard managed by Jerry Bohn. He noted in last year's profile on winning a Certified Angus Beef® Quality Focus Award that shades were added to some pens to assess the cost/benefit on cattle already stressed by widespread drought.

More recently, Bohn addressed the Feeding Quality Forum Aug. 22 in Garden City.

"We had a little death loss each of the last three years due to heat," Bohn said. Last year was the worst, and prompted him to hire an Iowa contractor to build five shades straddling ten pens, at the cost of $15,000 each. The 50- by 48-foot steel frames have canvas covers with a heat escape vent in the center, all supported by three 24-inch steel poles.

Up to 150 cattle found relief under each structure during the hottest days. Last winter a 17-inch snowfall did not cause problems, but there was significant storm damage this summer from 110-mph winds.

A research project with Kansas State University this year included a veterinary student working at the yard all summer, and that study is in its summary stage now. Preliminary results were shared on groups of cattle that were sorted a month to six weeks before marketing.

"Sorting the cattle as equally and randomly as we could, we put one group under the shades and one in the regular feedlot pens," Bohn said. "We then measured feed intake, average daily gain and feed conversion, and later gathered carcass data from National Beef."

In highlighting basic results, the cattle feeder said he was surprised there was not much difference in feedlot performance with or without shade.

"What we did see in four of the six groups was a pretty good difference in packing plant performance," Bohn reported. "That generally favored the cattle in the shade and it came from hot yield as well as quality grade."

From an animal welfare standpoint, he added, "I think we have to continue to look at these kinds of things as an industry. Sometimes I think we'll be forced to do things in the future that might not have good economic reasons, but you've got to do it the right way."

USDA confirms cancellation of crop reports due to lack of data during shutdown

USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) and World Agricultural Outlook Board said last Thursday they have cancelled or postponed publication of several USDA statistical reports because of the just-ended government shutdown. Reports impacted included NASS's crop production report and the World Agricultural Supply and Demand Estimates (WASDE). NASS's crop progress reports for Oct. 7 and 15 were also cancelled. Other reports will be postponed. USDA said the changes were necessary because while it is up and running as of Thursday, its employees were unable to collect and analyze all the data necessary for the reports in question. USDA reports are considered the gold standard in information about ag markets, and many market analysts have been concerned about the impact on market functioning from the data dearth during the shutdown.

320 ACRES • MARION COUNTY • 3 PONDS

AUCTION

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 7 — 7:00 PM
Auction Location: Lincolnville Community Bldg. — LINCOLNVILLE, KS

SELLERS: EMMA HUTH & FAMILY

PROPERTY LOCATION: From Intersections of Hwy. 150 and Hwy. 77 East of Marion, KS, north on Hwy. 77 for 5 miles to 250th Rd. at Antelope, then take 250 Rd. East 3.5 miles to Zebulon Rd., north 1/2 mile to the southeast corner of said property. Watch for signs.

LEGAL: N/2 of Sec. 32, Twp. 18, Rge 5, Marion Co., KS, containing 320 acres more or less.

TAXES: $479.68. MINERALS: Sellers mineral rights sell with the real estate. There is a mineral lease w/minimal production.

DESCRIPTION: Here is a Flint Hills pasture of native bluestem and mixed grasses ready to go to work for YOU! The sellers have cleared the large hedge trees leaving only the smallest sprouts which can be managed with a sprayer. The high volume of grass in this pasture remaining after the lease expiration of October 31, 2013 will be very conducive for winter grazing. The pasture is watered by three ponds. There is a non functioning windmill on the property. The fences are 5 to 3 wire barb with steel and hedge posts.

Access is from Zebulon Rd. on the east and 260th on the north. If a person wanted to improve the access with a gravel road, it is only 1/2 mile from Rd. 250th to the SE corner of the pasture.

AUCTIONEER'S NOTE: Burning and yearly maintenance will continue to improve this pasture. Our sellers have invested in the major cleanup and now are offering the benefit to YOU the buyer. Don't overlook this opportunity. We will look forward to seeing you at the auction!

TERMS: $40,000.00 earnest money payable in certified funds to Hannaford Abstract & Title Co. upon signing of the contract evening of the auction. Buyers will receive appropriate Kansas deed on or before December 10, 2013. Sellers receive 2013 lease money and will pay 2013 taxes. Title insurance expense for the owner's policy and closing fees of the title company will be shared equally between the buyer and seller. Sale is not subject to buyer receiving financing. All information has been gathered from Marion County sources and is considered accurate, but is not guaranteed. All statements made evening of auction will take precedence over advertisements.

Baccus to world leaders: trade barriers must come down

KFB president Steve Baccus said recently in remarks to world leaders that barriers between the United States and its trading partners must come down.

Baccus, an Ottawa County grain farmer, spoke to the 36th North American and European Union Agricultural Conference in Mexico City, Mexico. Baccus serves as chair of the American Farm Bureau Federation's Trade Advisory Committee between the U.S. and said the EU must deal with the many substantive issues that impede U.S.-EU agricultural trade, such as long-standing barriers against conventionally raised U.S. beef, ongoing restrictions against U.S. poultry and pork, and actions that limit U.S. exports of goods produced using biotechnology.

The U.S. and the EU are major international trading partners in agriculture.

U.S. farmers and ranchers exported more than $8.8 billion in agricultural and food products to the EU in 2012, while the EU exported more than $16.6 billion in agricultural products to the U.S. last year.

Baccus said those numbers could be even larger if trade barriers were removed.

"Over the last decade, growth of U.S. agricultural exports to the EU has been the slowest among our top ten export destinations," he observed. "If U.S. farmers and ranchers were provided an opportunity to compete, the EU market could be a growth market for them. However, regulatory barriers have become a significant impediment to that growth."

KFB's president also called for the addition of Japan to the Trans Pacific Partnership (TPP) negotiations between Australia, Brunei, Canada, Chile, Japan, Malaysia, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru, Singapore, Vietnam and the United States.

"The addition of Japan to full participation in the TPP talks will enhance the significance of the negotiations and make the agreement much more encompassing of North American goals for agricultural trade, as well as generate greater interest in and support for the TPP," he said. "It will also fuel interest among other Asia-Pacific nations for similar opportunities to improve trade relations with the U.S. and other participating countries."

Baccus called for North American agriculture to continue its commitment to World Trade Organization (WTO) negotiations. "We must remain committed to advancing the goal of trade liberalization and increased opportunities for real trade growth," he said.

"I encourage my friends from across the Atlantic to work with us to resolve our trade issues so we each can enjoy more of the other's agricultural bounty."

Prime the pump

By Steve Suther

It's time to prime your herd to produce Prime beef.

That herd is a well of potential that can meet consumer demand for high-quality beef.

Any intact male will provide some variety of calves, all worth more than ever. If they make it through the finishing phase, consumers will eat them all, even though the beef will cost more than ever. If they are disappointed, will they go back to that well?

With the fewest cows in 60 years and the cattle cycle primed for rebuilding, a long-range view will ensure consumer demand. When today's replacement heifers are in their prime, they must profitably produce not only more but the best beef.

Say you can get $1,000 for a calf right now. Can somebody else make money on it in the months ahead? Can the beef industry make money on it in the months after that? With Choice boxed beef at $200 per hundredweight (/cwt) and Prime $30 or $40 higher, the buyer will pay more to make sure he or she won't be disappointed.

A few years ago, Prime beef made up less than 2% of the fed cattle supply, and

What's true on average for commodity beef is reality, so don't expect more from your herd.

But wait a minute.

In the last ten years, Prime boxed-beef has often risen to more than $50/cwt above Select, and grid premiums offer much of that to cattle producers. Variable-price grids often pay more than $5/cwt for carcasses that qualify for premium Choice brands, which you could think of as a consolation prize.

Even when such premiums appeared, it was not uncommon to hear the reasoning that an extra $200 per head is not worth thinking about when you take it times the 2% likelihood in a typical herd.

Those who ignored the premium targets may still be in business, but it's a limiting view of the cattle business. It is too limiting when consumers are expected to pay so much more for any beef.

Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw wrote in 1949 what the Kennedys famously quoted in the 1960s: Some men ask why. I dream things that never were and ask why not?

Erica Auchard's entry was chosen by Judge Ryan Smoes as the grand champion market sheep at the Morris County Fair.

Fortunately for the U.S. cattle business, a lot of producers asked, why not? Bringing selection pressure to bear on not only bulls but cows, based on records, progeny data, ultrasound—and lately DNA testing—hundreds of them moved up to 5%, then 10%, 20% and more than 30% Prime.

Feature stories have shown us English-breed cattle that produce 75% Prime and gain faster than industry average. Those cattle are worth at least $200 above average and their "consolation prizes" still beat the heck out of average. Such herds are owned by some of the most forward-thinking, profit-minded ranchers in the business.

It's logical that most producers don't think about such premiums. They don't sell finished cattle.

There are many ways to prime the pump to deliver more quality and turn around a 60-year decline in numbers. Tag calves with an information link to each cow. Weigh cows and calves to chart efficiency; then get a benchmark reading on what comes after weaning.

Use the steer futurities, help a neighbor complete a feedlot load, partner or negotiate with a feedlot that returns individual data. If you can't tag calves now, be more selective of bulls and add to your herd with proven females.

More and more of us need to think about those premiums, or there will continue to be fewer and fewer of us.

Commodity beef will never compete with chicken, pork or fish on a price basis. That's just biology. If we want consumers to pay $200 or more per year for beef over other proteins, we need to take another look at how to produce calves that are worth $200 more to everybody in the chain.

Next time in Black Ink® Miranda Reiman will look at decision making. Questions? Call 330-465-0820 or e-mail steve@certifiedangusbeef.com.

Covering the Trail

This was a first. For years, there have been gatherings of various kinds here at our family ranch, such as roundups and times to work cattle. Then our 4-H club came for a bonfire and hayrack ride. After that we opened the ranch for other kinds of gatherings, from family reunions to club meetings to birthday parties. But in early September we had a gathering which was a first: A workshop for people interested in barn quilts.

What is a “barn quilt”? An Ohio woman named Donna Sue Groves had a design of an actual quilt square painted on a wooden panel which she put up on the side of her barn. She called it a “barn quilt.” (They are a bit like the painted hex signs a person can see on buildings in Pennsylvania Dutch country, but these designs come from a quilt square.)

The practice of posting these on farm buildings caught on and spread across the country. Local people organized Barn Quilt Trails, where visitors would travel across the countryside to view the various barn quilts. A writer named Suzi Parron even wrote a book about it.

Down the Trail

By Ron Wilson, Poetariat

Some cowboys herded longhorns up the dusty Chisholm Trail. Some modern folks like trail rides, with horses head to tail. But there's a new kind of trail, now that the story's spilt, That carries the kind of folks who want to wrangle a barn quilt. “What's a barn quilt?” you say. Well, I surely didn't know, Until the topic came up here several months ago. It seems a lady in Ohio took a quilt square design, And painted it upon a board. It was kind of like a sign. Then that sign was placed upon the side of her barn, And they called it a “barn quilt” to complete this truthful yarn. These colorful barn quilts grew in popularity And spread across the countryside for everyone to see. Then people got together in a region or a county, To organize some trips to see the barn quilt bounty. They call them barn quilt trails, where people go and ride, To see these pretty barn quilts sprinkled through the countryside. Now the Flint Hills of Kansas has organized a group So folks can see these pretty sights as they travel in a loop. We give thanks for artists, barn owners and others this may entail, And for these modern- day wranglers who travel the barn quilt trail. Happy (quilt) Trails! © Copyright 2013

My wife became intrigued with this idea. She has a quilt which was made by her great-grandmother so she had an artist paint a wood panel modeled after the quilt and we put it up on the barn. It was the first barn quilt in Riley County. Sue Hageman of Riley County has created several barn quilts and become an expert about them.

The alert entrepreneurs of the Flint Hills region noted this growing interest as an opportunity to celebrate our culture and expand tourism. Led by Wabaunsee County's Abby Amick and Manhattan's Marcia Rozell, they organized a Kansas Flint Hills Quilt Trail. They are also empowering more people to create and post more barn quilts in our region. They conducted a couple of barn quilt workshops, including one at our ranch, with a presentation by Sue Hageman and Connie Larson. Sue explained how people select their design, from family heirlooms or classic designs or something that represents their farm, and gave “hands-on” help for painting them. About 30 people, both men and women, came to the workshop and started creating 21 new barn quilts of their own. For more info, see <http://ksflinthillsquilttrail.blogspot.com/>

Now guess who's coming to dinner - or at least to Kansas: Suzi Parron, author of the book Barn Quilts. She plans to tour our area in spring 2014 and potentially write another book about barn quilts. This would be wonderful visibility for our state and has sparked more interest, leading to workshops such as the one at our ranch.

It was a first for me. I had never seen so many people interested in barn quilts.

So mount up in your SUV or family minivan and let's hit the trail. Barn quilts ho!

Turning Grain into Gold – grain donations support Special Olympics

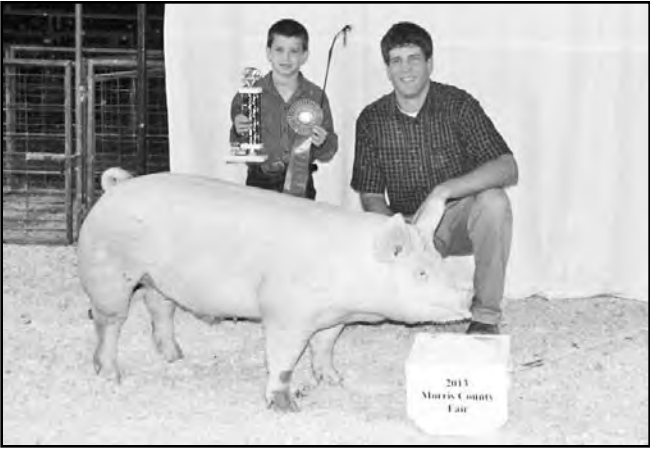

With a simple donation of grain, farmers can support Special Olympics Kansas in a unique way. Donated bushels from their harvest will be converted into funds for the athletes of SOKS.

Right now, co-ops in Garden City and Offerle are prepared to convert the donations. However, any farmer may notify Luke Schulte about participating, and Schulte will contact the local co-op to make the transaction complete. Any commodity is welcome and any amount is appreciated.

Schulte, development director stated, “Grain Into Gold is an easy way for farmers to turn their grain into medals and ribbons for Special Olympics Kansas. Every town in Kansas has a Special Olympics athlete who calls that community their hometown. What a great way to connect your farm to our movement of inclusion in each hometown across Kansas.” Schulte can be reached at schulte@ksso.org or 620-408-4450 Additional information can be found at www.ksso.org/events.

Trichomoniasis regulation now in effect

After more than 18 months and over 36 public meetings with at least 2,000 stakeholders, the Kansas Department of Agriculture Division of Animal Health's final regulation regarding Trichomoniasis (Trich) in cattle became effective October 4, 2013.

Trich is a highly contagious venereal disease in cattle that is carried by a bull and transmitted to a cow during breeding. It causes pregnancy loss or abortion in the cow, prolonged calving intervals and high open rates in infected herds, which costs livestock farmers and ranchers valuable income.

The final regulation addresses the change-of-ownership of bulls within Kansas and import requirements for both bulls and females. The department reviewed public comments and addressed stakeholder concerns in the final rule.

"The cattle industry in Kansas is the largest sector of the largest industry in the state. That is why it is imperative for us to work with Kansas farmers and ranchers, livestock markets, veterinarians and all involved in the cattle sector to eradicate infectious and contagious livestock diseases, including Trichomoniasis," said Kansas Animal Health Commissioner Dr. Bill Brown. "This regulation was developed with input from industry. We have worked with our partners in the industry and listened to stakeholder concerns throughout this lengthy process. I am confident this final rule will help protect herd health throughout Kansas."

Under the final rule, non-virgin bulls, bulls of unknown virginity status and bulls older than 18 months of age must test negative for Trich prior to change of ownership in Kansas. The final rule exempts from testing requirements virgin bulls 24 months of age or younger coming from a herd with an approved Trich management plan and bulls moving directly to slaughter or for feeding purposes. Virgin bulls 18 months of age or younger may be imported into Kansas with an owner's statement that the bulls have not been sexually exposed to breeding-aged females.

The final rule also requires that cows and heifers moving into Kansas must go directly to slaughter or an approved livestock market unless accompanied by a CVI. The CVI must show imported females meet one of seven criteria set out in the revised regulation: have a calf at side, and since parturition, have only been exposed to bulls that are certified negative for Trich; are at least 120 days pregnant; are virgin heifers with no sexual exposure to bulls since weaning; have had at least 120 days of sexual isolation; are heifers or cows exposed only to bulls that are certified negative for Trich; are purchased for feeding purposes only with no exposure to bulls after entering Kansas; or are moving for the purpose of embryo transfer or other artificial reproduction procedure with no exposure to bulls after entering Kansas.

Dr. Brown encouraged farmers and ranchers who think they may have Trich in their cattle herd to contact their herd veterinarian or a Kansas state veterinarian.

86th Cattlemen's Day in Eureka November 2

Mark November 2 on your calendars, write in the dust on the pickup dash, or scratch it on the barn door. The 86th Greenwood County Cattlemen's Day will be held in Eureka again this year and offer a full day of activities beginning with an early morning pancake feed and topping out with a banquet and dance in the evening. Other activities include a western art/trade show at historic Greenwood Hotel and history demonstrations during the day, a parade beginning at 1:30 p.m. followed by games for kids. Also on tap during the weekend are a 5K run, the tallest bluestem contest, and Eureka archery contest. A ranch rodeo will wrap up the weekend on Sunday.

Paul Seeley will serve as grand marshal for the parade and related festivities. A native of Oklahoma, he grew up working cattle on the family ranch before managing the J-J Ranch near Fall River and operating El Dorado Livestock Auction. With ranches in northwest Oklahoma and Greenwood County, he and his wife Jacqueline now live in Eureka. Although semi-retired, Paul maintains an active interest in the cattle ranching business and brings a great deal of experience and knowledge to the community.

The evening banquet will feature steaks with all the trimmings served by members of area 4-H clubs. Entertainment by Jerry Crownover, a noted storyteller/humorist/rancher from the Missouri Ozarks, will follow the meal. The evening concludes with dancing to music by the Trent Crisswell Band. Tickets for the banquet/dance may be purchased in Eureka at Ranch Aid, Flint Hills Feed and Supply, Home Bank & Trust, Eureka Livestock Sales, and in Madison at Citizens State Bank, or by contacting Dale Kirkham at 620-344-0202 or any of the other officers and directors.

Cattlemen's Day celebration dates back to the time when stocker cattle were shipped into the area on railcars in the spring for fattening on bluestem pastures. They were gathered by cowboys on horseback throughout the late summer and early fall for shipment to Kansas City, Chicago and other points in the Corn Belt. Cattlemen made many "handshake deals" in the old Greenwood Hotel on mainstreet Eureka and gathered in the same location to celebrate the end of each grazing season, thus becoming the basis for the upcoming event.

98-year-old Kansas farmer keeps working the land

(AP) - The combines are growling nonstop with a farmer's urgency to get the corn harvested.

Through the stubble, a John Deere tractor pulling a grain cart races to a nearby combine. Using mirrors he has strategically placed inside and outside the tractor's cab - "Because I'm not as agile as I used to be" - Loyd Ratts perfectly aligns the cart with the combine's auger while the combine and tractor continue to move in synchronization.

At 98, Ratts is undoubtedly one of the last Dust Bowl-era farmers still actively engaged in farming his land, a living link to the state's agricultural history, the Wichita Eagle reports.

But he is also one of Kansas' newest inventors. Last year, he received a patent for a ground-level grain bin lid controller he designed. The pulley-and-cable device allows a farmer to open his grain bins from the ground rather than climbing to the top of the bin to manually open the door.

"One of the driving forces I had was the safety factor," Ratts said. "Every year, farmers fall off those bins. Some die; some are permanently injured."

Ratts' inspiration as an inventor comes from nine decades of practical know-how.

He was born on Feb. 18, 1915, on the family farm northwest of St. John. His father, Edmund, named him Loyd with one L "because he didn't see any sense for the extra L," Ratts said.

At the age of four, Ratts began his farming career. His father sent him to St. John, five miles from the farm, driving a team of horses with a wagonload of wheat.

"That team of horses he had on there could have taken the load to town themselves," Ratts said. "But Dad thought he could scoop another load of wheat and put four horses on his wagon to catch up with me. He guessed wrong."

"I got to town before he did, and I still have vivid memories of going down the west side of the square in St. John and all the foot traffic stopping and watching me. I was smart enough to know I didn't know how to drive onto the scales where they tipped the wagon to unload. So I just pulled off to the side of the street north of the depot and waited for Dad to come."

At age six, he was pulling a harrow in the fields with a team of four horses. At ten, he was driving the family's first tractor, a Fordson.

By age 12, the farm converted completely from horse power to tractor power. That summer, in 1927, he pulled a combine with an Allis Chalmers tractor.

Two years later, the stock market crashed and the country headed into the Great Depression.

When Ratts graduated from St. John High School in 1932, there wasn't money for college.

"Dad had to buy a bigger tractor and bigger machinery and put a mortgage on the place - that was in 1927 when the prices were high, but in 1929, everything dropped out. By 1932, it was apparent the mortgage was going to take our home."

Ratts started working at the garage in nearby Radium as a mechanic and welder, often working 60 hours a week. His weekly paycheck was $12.50.

His dad started farming a quarter-section of land in Kearny County in southwest Kansas, near some of the worst-hit areas of the Dust Bowl years. As the black clouds of dirt blew through, wheat would get covered in dust.

Landowners began contacting the Rattses to farm their land because the pair made farming work. They had to. Paying the mortgage depended on successful crops.

Using early conservation practices, their land was often the only fields of green and gold on the horizon of brown dust.

When there was any spare time, he and his sisters Thelma and Vida performed in a singing group, the Ratts Trio. The siblings sang on radio stations in Dodge City, Great Bend and Salina. After performances, they often had difficulty getting home because of blowing dust.

During the winter of 1939, Ratts temporarily left the farm and worked as a carpenter's helper on the construction of Camp Funston at Fort Riley, and from 1940 through 1942, he worked at Cessna Aircraft in Wichita.

Beginning in 1942, Ratts returned to Stafford County and began farming by himself. In addition to working at the Radium garage, he milked eight cows a day.

In 1954, he opened Loyd's Repair Shop on his farm. By then, he was raising a family.

All told, there were eight children and two wives. His first wife, Bonnie, died in 1956 at the age of 31. He remarried in 1961. His second wife, Betty, died in 2005.

He phased out of livestock production in the mid-1960s because, as he put it, "I just didn't have that many hours in the day."

He has grown wheat, corn, soybeans, sunflowers, alfalfa and cane. Currently, his primary crops on 480 acres are corn, soybeans and wheat.

Although he never received any formal education or training, Ratts developed a local reputation for fixing things, sometimes altering or redesigning an old farm implement and giving it new life. The framework of an old cultivator was remade into a fertilizer sprayer.

In 2004, he was named a Kansas Master Farmer by Kansas State University. He now farms the land along with his son-in-law and grandson, Phillip and Jason Koelsch.

Through the years, Ratts has served on the Kansas Soybean Commission and switched to no-till farming.

"No-till takes less labor and it gets huge benefits," he said. "You can save moisture that the weeds used to take."

Last April, Ratts joined his son, Jim, in Oklahoma City for an awards ceremony that honors the history and culture of the American West. Jim Ratts received the "Wrangler" award for producing the best Traditional Western Album in a ceremony at the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum.

But the younger Ratts, who has performed with the likes of the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, was not the only Ratts honored that day. Once the celebrity-filled audience discovered there was a real-life Dust Bowl-era farmer in the house, Loyd Ratts became an instant celebrity.

"This was a man who walked in and who could look them in the eye and talk with them," Jim Ratts said.

KLA Young Stockmen's Academy tours beef and dairy industries

The third installment of the KLA Young Stockmen's Academy (YSA) was held October 2-4. The group of young producers spent three days touring various segments of the beef and dairy industries in Kansas. Merck Animal Health is the exclusive sponsor of the YSA program.

Stops were made at Collinge Cattle Company near Hamilton and Dalebanks Angus at Eureka. Mike and Glen Collinge visited with the group about the benefits of using low-stress cattle handling in their stocker operation, and explained how burning and proper grazing management help preserve the native grass of the Flint Hills. Matt and Tom Perrier gave an inside look into the breeding program at Dalebanks. Most cows are artificially inseminated during a 25-day period, then herd bulls are turned out for 25 to 60 days. The Perrier family strives to produce balanced-trait beef genetics for cow herd owners.

While on a tour of the milking parlor at Forget-Me-Not Farms, Cimarron, manager T.J. Curtis told the YSA class the dairy facility produces 12 truckloads of milk per day. Each truck holds about 6,250 lbs. of milk. Lee Reeve highlighted various aspects of his business, which includes a feedyard and ethanol plant, during a stop at Reeve Cattle Company near Garden City. Wet distiller's grain, a by-product of ethanol production, makes up 16% to 17% on a dry matter basis of the feed ration for cattle in the feedyard.

The group also visited the Winter Livestock auction market in Dodge City, participated in a Beef Quality Assurance injection site demonstration and was hosted by U.S. Premium Beef vice president of field operations Brian Bertelsen for a tour of the National Beef packing plant in Dodge City.

The fourth YSA session will be held during the KLA Convention, December 4-6. YSA members will have the opportunity to attend educational sessions and help form policy during council and committee meetings that will guide the association in 2014.

KLA is a trade organization representing the business interests of members at both the state and federal levels. Voluntary dues dollars paid by producers are used for programs that benefit KLA members in the areas of legislative representation, regulatory assistance, legal troubleshooting, communications and the advancement of youth.

Members of the Young Stockmen's Academy include, back row, from left: Kim Cerney, Salina; Sydney Shephard, Pomona; Ty Riggs, Sedan; Garrett Rolland, Norton; Blaze Mollhagen, Lorraine; Suzanne Ryan, Platte City; Keith Bergkamp, Pretty Prairie; Austin Sexten, Wamego; Hyatt Frobose, Manhattan; Front row: Christine Mushrush, Strong City; Clarke Nelson, Long Island; Justin Keith, Allen; Hattie Hartschuh, Manhattan; Kathryn Taylor, Manhattan; Derick McGhee, Wellsville; Cody Nichols, Wichita; Lori Bammerlin, Manhattan; and Flinton McCabe, Elk City. The annual FSA farm payment (DCP) is $1761. 2012 property taxes were $1122.80. This farm is all irrigated with a center pivot and flood irrigation in the corners. The pump and all underground components of the irrigation system go with the farm. Bob Wietham owns the motor and the center pivot. This farm will be sold to the general public in the usual manner. However, due to prior agreement, Bob Wietham will have the right to match the highest bid price and purchase this farm. If he does not exercise this right the highest bidder will be the new buyer. This is an excellent farm. From the airport 1 mile west of Clay Center, Kansas go 2 miles N to 20th Rd. then 1 mile west to Kiowa Rd. and ½ N to the SW corner of the tract.

Kansas State University celebrates World Food Day

Imagine taking a trip back in time more than 70 years, to the beginning of what many call the “Green Revolution.” It was a time when the world population doubled, and the agricultural industry was forced to grow rapidly with the population to prevent starvation. The growth in the food and agriculture system took sound research and advancements in science and technology to become more efficient.

Today, 70 years after the Green Revolution, the food and agriculture system is facing the same issues of a rapidly growing population and determining ways to meet the demand again using the same limited resources. World Food Day is a global movement to end hunger and celebrated Oct. 16. It is a day to remember the estimated nearly 870 million of the 7 billion people in the world, or one in eight, who suffer from chronic malnourishment, according to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), which established World Food Day.

While most malnourished people are from developing countries, more than 49 million people in the United States alone struggle with hunger. John Floros is the dean of the College of Agriculture at Kansas State University and director of K-State Research and Extension. Floros, a renowned food scientist, said World Food Day is a day to recognize our past, present, and most importantly our future, as it relates to food systems and making sure every mouth on the planet is fed.

“We have a (world) population of 7 billion people, and we can feed everybody,” Floros said. “But not everybody gets fed. There’s a lot of work to be done, even today.” Floros said since the beginning of the Green Revolution, the world’s food and agriculture system grew to produce two-and-a-half times more food, with the same resources, to feed the 7 billion. Investing in more research, educating people about where their food comes from and preventing food loss all need to happen, he said, to feed those hungry in the world today and to prepare to feed a larger population — more than 9 billion projected by 2050 — in the future.

In the area of research, Floros said more efforts by plant, animal and food scientists, as well as behavioral and social scientists, must be put into finding solutions for some of the food and agriculture system’s challenges. Some of the biggest challenges include water, climate and consumer perception. Water and climate are central issues, he said. Without water, food production will suffer, and if the climate changes drastically, current plant biology might not be able to keep up.

Perhaps most alarming though, Floros said, is that very educated people in the world have negative opinions of science-based technology. “That’s a big problem, because without science, without research, that system will not be able to advance to the point where we have a secure future for our children, our grandchildren and even their children,” Floros said.

Educating people, especially younger generations, about where their food comes from is always going to be a challenge because of the disconnect that exists between the farm and average consumer, Floros said. Many people and organizations — the government, academic institutions, private industry companies, and social and consumer groups — must continue educating consumers about the food and agriculture system and what it will require to feed more than 9 billion people in the immediate future. “Because we have managed to produce enough food, and a variety of food, and made it available to the average individual, people don’t spend a lot of time thinking about where their food comes from,” Floros said. “It came from a very sophisticated science-based system that has managed to understand biology, plant biology and animal biology, so that we can produce enough efficiently, transform it into food and preserve it so that it can be available around the world.”

Because many developing countries don’t have preservation technologies in place, food loss at the farm level can be 40 to 50 percent, and in some cases higher, Floros said. “Most of that loss takes place because they don’t have the technology, transportation means and ability to preserve the material,” he said. “So they lose it to rodents, micro-organisms, moisture and number of different reasons that technology can resolve.”

Just as important as improving technology in developing countries is preventing food waste in developed countries, including the United States, where the food loss mostly happens at the end of the system in restaurants, grocery stores and in consumers’ homes. About one-third of food produced in developed countries is wasted. “This is where we all waste food,” Floros said. “We buy more. We put it on the table. We eat some of it. The rest of it goes to waste. If we were able to minimize that loss, minimize that waste, then we don’t have to waste the resources to grow those crops and animals, and everybody wins. The consumer wins. The system itself wins. The environment wins. The planet wins.”

A video interview with Floros about World Food

Day is available online ( <http://youtube/tBNu39OhjY4> ). Established by the FAO in 1979, World Food Day was first observed in 1981. The 2013 theme is “Sustainable Food Systems for Food Security and Nutrition.” World Food Day offers the opportunity to strengthen national and international solidarity in the struggle against hunger, malnutrition and poverty and draw attention to achievements in food security and agricultural development. ## Kansas corn leaders play role in shaping the future

Kansas will have strong representation on national agriculture leadership committees in the coming year. Three Kansas corn leaders have been selected to serve on National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) action teams, which offer an opportunity to gather direct member input on issues that impact the corn industry.

Bob Timmons, Fredonia, was once again reappointed to the Research and Business Development action team. Timmons was first appointed to this committee in fall 2010, making this his fifth year on the committee.

Dennis McNinch, Utica, was selected to serve on the Ethanol Committee, making this his second NCGA term.

Ken McCauley, White Cloud, was appointed Chair of the CornPac. McCauley is a past president of NCGA and has served on CornPac for several years.

The action teams and committees will have their first set of meetings in St. Louis in December. Kansas Corn Growers Association Director of Communications Sue Schulte said Timmons, McNinch and McCauley each offer strong leadership on the national level.

“Corn growers who give their time to the NCGA action teams have a commitment to grassroots leadership,” Schulte said. “We are lucky to have these three Kansas growers to once again lead on the national level. Any corn grower in Kansas can have this opportunity and we would be happy to talk to them about becoming involved on the state and national levels.”

NCGA members can apply to serve on an action team, with a fiscal year beginning in October for each term. Action teams provide growers an opportunity to play an active role in shaping the future of the corn industry and to become a part of the national agricultural leadership community. Committees range from production and stewardship, research and business development, public policy, grower services, ethanol committee, trade policy, biotechnology and the national political action committee.

“Corn growers will face many challenges and opportunities in the year ahead and it's great to have smart, dedicated farmer-leaders in this organization to carry out its mission,” said NCGA President Martin Barbre, Illinois. “We have many terrific volunteers and are excited to be working with this team of leaders.”

Farm Bureau members of Kansas serve on state committees

More than 75 Farm Bureau members of Kansas have taken leadership positions within their farm organization and will serve on the organization's agricultural advisory committees. Members on the eight-state ag advisory committees surface commodity-specific issues, discuss solutions and make recommendations to the Kansas Farm Bureau board of directors.

“Having a solid group of committed members serve on our ag advisory committees means we have a strong grassroots organization,” Steve Baccus, Ottawa County farmer and president of Kansas Farm Bureau, says. “Each committee represents an ag commodity that is important to our state, and our committee members represent the entire state of Kansas. That's KFB at its best.”

Committee members include:

Pork producers connect farm to fork during October Pork Month

October became known as Pork Month because it marked the time of year when hogs were traditionally marketed. Today, it serves as a celebration to thank pork producers and share their stories with consumers.

“If you eat, you have a connection to a farmer every day,” said Karen Richter, National Pork Board president and Montgomery, Minn., pork producer. “October Pork Month is an opportunity to refresh the connection consumers have with farmers. We are committed to continuous improvement on our farms and to providing high-quality pork products for families across the United States and around the world.”

In 2008, pork producers adopted the six ethical principles at National Pork Industry Forum. The pork industry follows the six guiding ethical principles of the We Care initiative to maintain a safe, high-quality food supply of pork. Producers are committed to:

- Producing safe food;
- Safeguarding natural resources in all industry practices;
- Providing a work environment that is safe and consistent with the industry’s other ethical principles;
- Contributing to a better quality of life in communities;
- Protecting and promoting animal well-being; and
- Ensuring practices to protect public health.

“These ethical principles define our values and who we are,” said Richter. “Consumers can be confident that the pork they eat was raised using these ethical principles.”

Pork is the world’s most widely eaten meat, representing 42 percent of the meat consumed, according to the USDA Foreign Agricultural Service. Some 81 percent of the population consumes pork in-home at least once in an average two-week period.

The top five most popular pork products include ham, sausage, bacon, lunchmeat (excluding ham) and pork chops. Of pork products consumed at home, ham accounts for 31.1 percent, sausage represents 19.6 percent, bacon totals 18.1 percent, lunchmeat accounts for 10.3 percent and pork chops round out the top five with 10.2 percent of pork consumed in-home.

“Consumers recognize the versatility of serving pork in their homes,” Richter said. “Cooking to the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s recommended internal temperature of 145° F will ensure flavorful and tender pork on the plate.”
