

Seven states compete at regional Heartland Envirothon in Flint Hills

By Lucas Shivers

Bringing together more than 35 high school student leaders in sustainability, applied life sciences and ecology, the Kansas Heartland Envirothon drew teams from Arkansas, Florida, Kansas, North and South Dakota, Tennessee and Texas for a week-long learning experience and competition at Rock Springs 4-H Center from July 21 to 25.

"Each of these teams competed in local, regional and state contests to be named overall state winners and earn the privilege to participate in the event at Rock Springs," said Tom Meek, coordinator of the Kansas Envirothon Committee and Clay County Conservation District manager.

The original national contest fell through, and local leaders from Kansas took up the call to organize a regional Envirothon contest.

"When the North American Envirothon contest that was supposed to be hosted in Georgia was cancelled in February, we decided to host an alternate event for the region," Meek said. "We made the decision on March 19; and 123 days later here we are. We made a leap of faith that we could do it."

Planning the Event

Meek reached out to other state leaders in the region, and he found interested teams to join the event.

"I talked to a number of organizers from many states and a recurring theme came up that many felt they didn't have enough time to put it all together after more than a year of planning," he said. "We reached this milestone of short-time turnaround with the help of many conservation districts across Kansas who supported us financially and with personnel."

$35,000 for the event.

"One thing I can say about the whole team is reflected in our state song: 'where seldom is heard a discouraging word,' and I certainly thank those people who stepped up," Meek said.

Teams of organizers centered on a hospitality team who organized learning trips. A competition team was responsible for the testing and judges. A budget and finance team raised the necessary support. The resource presentation team helped teach about the unique features of the Great Plains region.

"The teams took a leap of faith to come to this event, and I think the next few days will earn their trust with the high quality event," Meek said.

Kansas Team

A team from Chapman High School represented Kansas with Adrian Fink, Dakota Caldwell, Kaylen Gugler, Wade Hambright, Brittany Duer and advisor Trenton Horn.

Envirothon appealed to Fink because he set a goal to solve the energy crisis from the ground up to make the nation better.

"Envirothon helps to teach me how to involve local communities to work on sustainability," Fink said.

Caldwell started on the Envirothon team as a freshman, like many who have years of experience in the contest when a senior recruited him.

"About two years ago, a former member came up to me and asked me to join the team," Caldwell said. "Our team got stronger each year."

Gugler plans to use what she learns to study agriculture in college.

Hambright, who grew up hunting and fishing with his family, wants to study wildlife management after high school.

"Even in my life, I've seen a drastic change in resources," Hambright said. "I want to make it my goal in life to make sure these resources are there for future generations who want to hunt or fish."

Duer, a future agronomist, loves to study science and the integration of many complex subjects to support and understand the interconnectedness of life.

"I want to know exactly what's happening with our soils, plants and animals," she said.

Learning and Testing

Training sessions in the aquatics ecology, forestry, soils and land use, wildlife and a rotating current issue. Testing took place at Rock Springs with the following results: Aquatics, first place Tennessee; Forestry, first place Arkansas; Soils/Land Use, first place Kansas; Wildlife, first place tie, Kansas; and Current Issue, first place, Kansas.

An oral presentation caps off the score to determine the overall winning team on the topic of "Sustainable Local Agriculture – Locally Grown" and used a scenario developed with the help of the Kansas Water Office. The scenario focused on a fictional Kansas ranching family and their efforts to develop practices to sustain water on their ranch and feedlot in southwest Kansas. The Texas team won this portion.

Overall, Tennessee finished in third place with $400 awards for each member; Florida was second with $600; and Texas received the championship plaque to display at their school, the Academy of Science and Technology in The Woodlands, Texas near Houston and $1000 each.

Envirothon's Benefits

"Throughout the event, the students come together to solve real-world challenges by working as a team," said Brandon Dibben, chair of the Geary County

Conservation District. "Students will be able to learn from each other and professionals in the field to learn about the Flint Hills."

Troy Munsch, assistant state Natural Resources Conservation Services director, worked with more than a dozen professionals who led the students through stations to make observations and ask questions before the tests.

"We had some very good specialists and speakers to work with teams. Students could ask questions and learn from these resources to learn from the best of the best about our local region."

Dibben said environmental and sustainability issues are central to producers.

"At the heart of every farmer and rancher, is the need to sustain the environment," Dibben said. "We seek to bridge the gap between urban and rural populations with the best conservation practices."

Munsch said the students' future is vital to the role of conservation in upcoming generations.

"These students are ambassadors to the future to take this information to others," Munsch said. "As the farming and agriculture community gets smaller, more responsibility falls to our shoulders to share the message of what we're doing and what needs to be done."

Envirothon students learn from Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks officials about the aquatic ecology section of the event.

Kansas State considers $150M research facility

(AP) – Kansas State University is seeking $5 million in state funding to lay the groundwork for a $150 million research facility that would focus on food.

University president Kirk Schulz requested the funding in the next fiscal year for the College of Agriculture and K-State Research and Extension to plan what is being called the Food Systems Research and Education Facility.

The proposal was discussed briefly during a recent Kansas Board of Regents budget session, the Lawrence Journal-World reported.

The project – which could involve the construction of several buildings – may be a few years down the road, Schulz said, but he wants to get legislators and other state officials familiar with the request.

The 200,000-square-foot facility would house labs, modern greenhouses, classrooms and Extension and distance education space, to be funded by a combination of federal, state and private funding, Schulz said.

"It will require all three to participate to make this a reality," he said.

The project would complement research at the planned National Bio and Agro-Defense Facility adjacent to Kansas State, Schulz and regents members said. The $1 billion NBAF is expected to start operating in 2022. It will focus primarily on infectious animal-borne diseases and threats to the food supply.

Research at the proposed Food Systems Research and Education Facility also would focus on the food supply, such as developing higher-yielding crops, more intensive cropping systems and improved processing and distribution system.

Kansas State hopes to receive the $5 million planning grant in the next fiscal year, which starts July 1, 2015. If it gets the money, the school could start construction on the facility in 2017-2018, with completion set two years later.

Speak from the heart

By John Schlageck,
Kansas Farm Bureau

Life experiences teach plenty to those willing to learn. From the time I was a small boy, I remember my dad, uncles and grandfather talking and debating the issues of the day whenever we visited one another.

As I grew older, I began to hear some of what they said. I began to understand what they were talking about. But it has taken me several decades to process, learn from and use what my elders were saying about the issues of their days.

About the time I was half way through high school, something he said finally sunk in. Grandpa Bert always said when you know a little about an issue, it's easy to form an opinion. When you learn a little more, it becomes a little more difficult to make a decision. And when you learn even more about an issue, your decision becomes, "just plain hard."

Lately, I've been thinking a lot about the issue of farmers and ranchers who often toil long days away by themselves. Sometimes they feel isolated with their backs against the wall. More than one farmer has expressed a feeling of, "It's me against the world."

Never before in agriculture has it been more important for farmers to express their basic wants, hopes and needs. Things like protection of personal property, a sound education for their children and a responsible, nonintrusive federal government, water usage to mention a few.

Never before has there been such an opportunity to express agriculture's needs. Today there are hundreds of satellites in orbit around our globe. Our cable system is loaded with hundreds of networks. The information highway continues to speed forward and we can communicate with people around the world instantly.

Today's technology allows individuals to access videos, music, news, weather, markets and consumer information – literally anything happening in our world today.

It's been more than three decades since newspapers entered the era of national and international publications. In this country, Christian Science Monitor and the Wall Street Journal pioneered the way.

Magazines and newspapers from all over the world are online today, available for anyone with the time and desire to read them. Of course they are still being shipped by mail. You can also read news, weather, markets and sports and screen after screen on your computer.

And that's not even mentioning all the data out there on social media – you know Twitter, Facebook, Pinterest – you name it, there's data out there. All you really need is time.

With all of these different information avenues at your fingertips, it may also be easy for some to tune out and turn off. Farmers, ranchers, businessmen, bankers and professionals cannot afford to do that. We must utilize these communication tools to tell our story. One way to help do this is by becoming active in the farm organizations and commodity groups of your choice. They can provide the vehicle to help you tell agriculture's story while developing sound farming policy that must be communicated.

Agriculture finally arrived as a headliner during the farm crisis of the mid-'80s. Every day, newspapers, radios, televisions and computers are chock full of stories on agriculture. Subjects range from food additives in processing to agricultural chemicals. Stories include animal welfare, cholesterol in the diet, sugarless foods, the farm bill and finding ways to increase agricultural trade.

Remember, farmers and ranchers must continue to voice their message in the public information arena. Agriculture must utilize this medium to promote and persuade others to bring about change – change that will benefit agriculture and a society that relies on U.S. farmers and ranchers for the safest and most abundant food source in the world.

A Kansas citizen said it best more than 90 years ago, "This nation will survive, this state will prosper, the orderly business of life will go forward only if men can speak in whatever way given them to utter what their hearts hold – by voice, by postal card, by letter or by press."

William Allen White wrote this in his Emporia Gazette during the post-World War I recession in 1922. These words ring true today.

John Schlageck is a leading commentator on agriculture and rural Kansas. Born and raised on a diversified farm in northwestern Kansas, his writing reflects a lifetime of experience, knowledge and passion.

It is one of the most dreaded days of the year at our house: the day before the fair. Each year we swear we are going to be more organized and have more done much earlier in the summer and make this day less stressful. Well, we all know what road is paved with good intentions that would be the road leading to the fair. I am not sure what road you thought I was talking about.

In any case, each year we wake up on the day before the fair with one goal. Survive and move on to the fair. We plan this day out in advance and it should all work but I am convinced that the hours are only 50 minutes long on this particular day because we seem to run out of time before we run out of things to do. However, a shortage of time is not the biggest problem of the day.

The day before the fair is the day that we have major breakdowns and calamities. No matter how smooth things have been all summer, something and often several somethings will happen on this fateful day. For instance, one year, the day before the fair, our normally very strong, very reliable well went dry on fair eve. That caused wide-spread fear, panic and hysteria on top of normal fair stress.

This year was no different. Earlier in the week, I had made the shocking discovery that we did not have enough sheep feed to make it through the fair. This was partially due to my miscalculation and partially due to the ewes getting into the barn and making a horrible mess. The week before the fair was in full swing complete with Murphy's law.

However, this trip to Clay Center seemed very fortuitous. The afternoon before we had ruined a big tire on one of our tractors. A new set of rear tires was not in the budget and a search for used tires revealed a couple in Clay Center. Maybe our day before the fair luck was changing, or maybe it was just setting us up for bigger calamities.

It was a good plan, run a couple of errands in Manhattan, drive up to Clay Center, deliver the tire and make it back to Manhattan for a doctor's appointment. The day started off smoothly, in fact, we were ahead of schedule. Then it all started coming unraveled. At a stop on the way to Clay Center a spot of oil was noticed under the pickup. Cause for concern but not necessarily alarm. Not until the next stop and I noticed a bigger spot of oil and a nice coating of oil under the entire truck.

A quick check of the dipstick revealed that the oil leak was cause for concern. A quick conference call determined that our chosen course of action was for me to add oil and drive to my house watching the oil pressure gauge all the way. If the gauge wavered at all, I would pull off to the side of the road and call for help. A tense drive home ensued but the gauge held steady and we made it, although by now we were around a half hour behind schedule.

The drippy truck was parked. I sent Isaac and the tire to the field with the afflicted tractor and I started back to Manhattan and the appointment with the doctor just a little behind schedule. After the visit with the doctor it was time to shear lambs and make them pretty for the show. What else could happen?

The kids were taking six lambs and we had already sheared them once so this was just touch-up work. No problem, it shouldn't take very long. However, shortly after we started on the first lamb, the clippers and blower went dead. Probably a tripped breaker, maybe blown fuse, but it should be an easy fix. Maybe most days, but not the day before the fair. No blown fuses or tripped breakers could be found. We located an extension cord long enough to snake from the house to the sheep clipping area and the problem was fixed.

I am sure that someday we will look upon all of the day before the fair wrecks with fondness and even laugh. That is probably many years in the future, maybe while we are watching our kids and grandkids scrambling to get ready for the fair. Right now this is not amusing, however, we will learn from our mistakes and be more organized next year. We will be easy to spot at the fair; we will be the ones with flying pigs.

Nine local schools awarded $38,000 for Kansas Agriculture Skills & Competencies Certificates

The Kansas Agriculture Skills & Competencies Certificate, awarded by the Kansas Department of Agriculture (KDA), was earned by 38 Kansas agriculture education students from nine local schools. Each certificate awarded earns the school $1,000, distributed by the Kansas Department of Education.

Schools receiving funds included Centre, Girard, Holton, Hugoton, Labette County, Marion-Florence, Riverton, Washington County and Winfield. The individual students achieving certification will not be publicly released.

The Kansas Agriculture Skills & Competencies Certificate recognizes agriculture education students who demonstrate excellence and a well-rounded experience by meeting the requirements of all three parts of the agriculture education model. Agriculture education with a combination of classroom instruction, supervised agricultural experience experiential learning, as well as leadership and skill development through FFA is key to developing young professionals to work in the agriculture industry. More than 11,000 students are enrolled in the 172 agriculture education programs in Kansas.

"The Kansas Department of Agriculture is committed to helping grow Kansas agriculture. Our industry needs young people who are interested in working in the fields of food, fiber, technology and production and have the skills to be successful in any career they choose," said Kansas secretary of agriculture Jackie McClaskey.

Agriculture is the state's largest industry, providing more to the state economy, and employees more people, than any other single industry in Kansas.

The certificate is listed as a qualifying certificate for Gov. Brownback's Career Technical Education (CTE) initiative. The certificate has been endorsed by the Kansas agriculture community, including; Kansas FFA Association, Kansas Farm Bureau, Kansas Grain & Feed Association, Kansas Livestock Association and other industry organizations and employers.

Applications for the Kansas Agriculture Skills & Competencies Certificate are accepted each spring. To find our more information, visit agriculture.ks.gov/ageducation.

THANK YOU Rosanne, Beth and Marilyn for sharing your Thelma Baldock recipes!
Rosanne Ballou: "I read your article in the current issue of Grass & Grain about Thelma Baldock and want to contribute a favorite recipe of Thelma's to honor her. We have been friends and neighbors for 50 years. I have clipped and saved many of her recipes that were published in Grass & Grain and also have her cookbook that she had published in 2002 of many of her favorites. The recipes that I clipped from Grass & Grain have been pasted in her cookbook. I am sending one of my favorites from her cookbook. Thelma got this recipe from an area woman, Ira Hare. It is a really good recipe and I have used it many times at harvest time. I often make half a recipe — good with whipped cream on top."
APPLE GOODY
1 1/2 quart peeled, thinly sliced apples (use a good cooking apple; Thelma liked Granny Smith apples)
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/4 cup flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 cup oatmeal
1 cup flour
1 cup brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 cup melted margarine
Mix 1 1/2 cups white sugar, flour and cinnamon in the sliced apples. Place in a buttered 9-by-13-inch baking dish. Mix oatmeal, flour, brown sugar, soda and baking powder in large bowl. Add melted margarine. Mix well. Put into baking dish. Put topping on apples. Pat down. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes or until apples are tender.

FAST & EASY MEAT DISH
8-ounce package medium egg noodles
1 pound ground beef
8-oz. package taco seasoning
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
8-ounce can tomato sauce
4-ounce package cream cheese
12-ounce carton cottage cheese
1/2 cup Parmesan cheese
1/2 cup water
Cook noodles as directed on package. Drain; set aside. Brown beef, drain; add taco seasoning, salt, pepper and tomato sauce. Rinse the sauce can with 1/2 cup water.

Marilyn Benfer, Longford, shares one of her favorite Thelma Baldock recipes:
MAKE-YOUR-OWN SWEETENED CONDENSED MILK
3 tablespoons margarine
1/3 cup boiling water
2/3 cup powdered sugar
1 cup instant nonfat dry milk
3/4 teaspoon vanilla
Melt margarine in boiling water. Mix dry ingredients. Stir into melted margarine and blend until smooth. Add vanilla and chill. Use in favorite recipes. Makes 1 1/4 cups equal to 14 ounces.

Cherry Pineapple Biscuits To Cheer Up Your Meals

(NAPSA) — Whether at picnics, barbecues, brunches, special occasions or no occasion at all, family and friends will flip for these Pineapple Upside Down Biscuits. What may make them even more popular is that they're gluten-free, something many people appreciate for their health and comfort. The recipe comes from Carol Kicinski, a professional recipe developer, editor in chief of Simply Gluten Free magazine and a TV chef.

Please note that while this recipe has been especially devised with people looking for gluten-free foods in mind, it can also be made with all-purpose flour instead of the rice flour and starch for everyone else.

Gluten-Free Pineapple Upside Down Biscuits

6 tablespoons melted butter, divided use
12 maraschino cherries, stems removed, patted dry

20-ounce can crushed pineapple

1/4 cup brown sugar

*3/4 cup white rice flour

*1/2 cup tapioca starch

*1/4 cup sweet rice flour plus more for kneading the biscuits

1/4 cup powdered milk

1 teaspoon sugar

3/4 teaspoon kosher salt

2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder

3/4 teaspoon baking soda

1/4 cup (1/2 stick) cold unsalted butter, cut into pieces

1/4 cup vegetable shortening

1 large egg

1/2 cup buttermilk

*in place of rice flour and starch, you can use 1 1/2 cups all-purpose gluten-free flour blend or all-purpose flour plus extra for kneading the biscuits

Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Brush standard muffin pan with 1 tablespoon melted butter. Place a maraschino in the bottom of each muffin tin. Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Combine pineapple, 4 tablespoons melted butter and brown sugar. Spoon mixture evenly into muffin tins. Place white rice flour, tapioca starch, sweet rice flour, powdered milk, sugar, salt, baking powder and baking soda into food processor. Pulse to combine. Add the cold butter and shortening and pulse the mixture several times until it resembles coarse crumbs. Add egg and buttermilk. Pulse to combine. Flour a work surface with rice flour, dump biscuit batter onto it and knead until dough is no longer sticky. Divide dough into 12 equal-sized balls and flatten them so they fit the muffin tins. Place biscuits on top of pineapple mixture. Mix 2 tablespoons of reserved pineapple juice with remaining tablespoon melted butter and brush on biscuits. Bake 12 to 15 minutes or until golden brown, cool in pan for 2 minutes, then flip onto a plate.

Return to Ojito

We were exhausted the following morning, having arrived home filthy and mud-crusted around 1:30 a.m. My brother Reece, never an early riser, nevertheless showed up on our doorstep at a reasonably early hour for our return trip to the Ojito Wilderness. Though there were two opposing theories about the timing of our return — later in the day would allow the road to dry harder, but it could also put us into a second helping of monsoons — our weariness was the deciding factor. We had only so much energy left to expend, so the earlier the attempt, the better.

There were other factors to consider, imponderables and unanswerable questions that could only be resolved after the fact. What if we walked back to the abandoned truck and found the road impassable in both directions? Our only recourse would be to walk back out and have someone make a third 85-mile drive from Albuquerque to retrieve us. Nor was waiting for us an option for it might be six hours before we met pavement if we were forced to go out the far side.

Without trying to decipher the intangible differences between optimism and delusion, my father dropped off Reece and I at the entrance to the wilderness. We weren't sure of the road's condition and didn't want to take a chance on getting stuck, so felt this was our best alternative.

It wasn't, as we discovered within a hundred yards. From outward appearances not a drop of rain had fallen the previous day; the road was hard-packed and dusty, the soil extending to the horizons sandy and seemingly dry as a bone.

"Oh, man," my brother groaned as we passed a construction site a half-mile up the road. "This sucks."

Indeed it did. But hey, we were on an adventure and this could only add to it.

Except that my right calf started aching and my stamina evaporated and I knew I had done a really stupid thing. There was nothing to do but continue, step by step by dusty step, hoping for a miracle—a lift to the arroyo.

When it came, a mile and a half in, maybe two miles, we were shocked to see Myron's smiling face peering out the window. In the back were Christian and Levi, his nephew and son, and Will at the wheel. "Hop in," Will said, and off we went in a plume of dust.

We didn't have time to formulate a plan for navigating the washed-out area, but we agreed that the last thing we wanted was to drive across the bad spot in the bed of a truck. If the roadway sheared off, the truck would undoubtedly flip upside down to plunge 15 feet into the muck. Anybody riding in back would be killed outright or drowned in liquid mud. But before we could protest Will drove over the narrow shelf as if it were as solid as the main highway through San Ysidro, the wheels skirting the edges on both sides of the eroded surface. Only then did he stop to inspect the road.

It didn't look good. The upstream side was undercut about a foot and the opposite side about three feet, leaving only two feet on stable ground. It could collapse at any second, and probably would if enough weight were pressed on it.

Will walked it back and forth, stepped out onto one of the battered metal culverts to peer into the gaping darkness under the top layer of gravel amalgam, and declared it safe. Maybe.

It struck me that these Native Americans were so trusting when I would have been utterly positive of certain death. And when Will drove back across and Myron followed, we could only do the same. Uppermost in my mind was the idea that their vehicles had weakened whatever minuscule structural integrity the remaining roadway possessed and now we would finish it off.

"Line up your wheels and goose it," I told Reece, and he did, and we crossed without breathing.

Will walked back to the narrow spot and grimaced. The road had split down the center under the weight of Myron's truck, but had held for our lighter vehicle. The next vehicle might not be so lucky, he said.

After they left, we dragged a waterlogged tree trunk onto the center of the road in the hope of alerting drivers of the danger. It was all we could do, and perhaps not enough, for as we walked away another foot of the downstream side caved off into the mud below. There was a wet splash as muck sprayed into the air, and then unbroken silence.

We had driven about three miles when we came across a truck hauling a heavy water tank. Our mad waves were met with stony stares from the three passengers who proceeded around us without slowing.

Reece and I looked at each other and then at the truck as it labored up a sharp grade and disappeared over the crest. The dust of its passage rose in a diaphanous golden cloud that hung in the air like a shimmering veil. After a few long moments of indecision Reece put the truck in gear and headed for pavement.

Kansas ag, ethanol groups disappointed Huelskamp remains cosponsor of bill that would repeal RFS

Rep. Tim Huelskamp remains a cosponsor of a bill that calls for the repeal of the Renewable Fuels Standard, a key program that gives ethanol producers access to sell their product in a market controlled by the oil industry. In a recent visit to Huelskamp's office, leaders from Kansas Corn Growers Association (KCGA) delivered a letter signed by several ag and ethanol groups asking him to remove his name as a cosponsor of H.R. 4286, the American Energy Renaissance Act. The congressman's staff told KCGA that he will not respond to the letter.

Kansas Farm Bureau

president Steve Baucus said Huelskamp's cosponsorship of the bill was short-sighted.

"Farmers across Kansas receive significant economic benefits and additional rural job opportunities thanks to the RFS," Baucus said. "Representative Huelskamp represents one of the largest agricultural districts in the country and his sponsorship of a bill that removes a key market from our producers' toolbox is short-sighted and shows a lack of understanding of commodity markets, value added agriculture, and what it means to be a congressional representative to his constituents."

KCGA president Bob Timmons, Fredonia, said a repeal of the RFS does not belong in a bill that benefits domestic energy production.

"We were surprised when we learned the Congressman was a cosponsor of a bill that would repeal the RFS, considering he has eleven biofuels plants in his district," Timmons said. "This bill would do some good things for domestic oil and gas production, but why go after ethanol, a vital part of our domestic energy portfolio?"

The letter was signed by Kansas Corn, Kansas Farm Bureau, Kansas Association of Ethanol Processors and the Kansas Grain Sorghum Producers Association. Ethanol industry signers were: Conestoga Energy Partners, Liberal and Garden City; Western Plains Energy, Campus; Nesika Energy, Scandia and Kansas Ethanol, Lyons, and ICM, Inc., Colwich.

In the letter, the groups noted that while the bill contained many beneficial items for domestic energy, the repeal of the RFS is also a key provision of the bill. The letter states:

"While the legislation may propose several beneficial items regarding domestic energy, we are adamantly opposed to its provision that would repeal the existing Renewable Fuels Standard and corresponding programs. Our state biofuels industry includes eleven plants which are in your district, employ many of your constituents and add value to the Kansas economy; therefore, your support of this provision simply is not in the best interest of the Kansas Big First Congressional District. The economic impact of these plants continue today as they generate economic activity in terms of direct and indirect employment, as well as creating markets and investment returns for several thousand Kansas citizens, many of which are your constituents.

"Repealing the Renewable Fuels Standard will have a profoundly negative impact on U.S. and Kansas agriculture, and many communities in the First Congressional District of Kansas. We request that you remove your name as a co-sponsor of H.R. 4286 immediately."

USDA reminds farmers of 2014 farm bill conservation compliance changes

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack reminds producers that changes mandated through the 2014 Farm Bill require them to have on file a Highly Erodible Land Conservation and Wetland Conservation Certification (AD-1026). The Farm Bill relinked highly erodible land conservation and wetland conservation compliance with eligibility for premium support paid under the federal crop insurance program.

"It's important that farmers and ranchers taking the right steps to conserve valuable farm and natural resources have completed AD-1026 forms on file at their local Farm Service Agency (FSA) office," said

Vilsack. "This will ensure they remain eligible for crop insurance support."

For farmers to be eligible for premium support on their federal crop insurance, a completed and signed AD-1026 form must be on file with the FSA. Since many FSA and Natural Resource Conservation (NRCS) programs have this requirement, most producers should already have an AD-1026 on file. If producers have not filed, they must do so by June 1, 2015.

When a farmer completes the AD-1026, FSA and NRCS staff will outline any additional actions that may be required for compliance with the provisions. The Risk Management Agency, through the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC), manages the federal crop insurance program that provides the modern farm safety net for American farmers and ranchers.

Since enactment of the 1985 Farm Bill, eligibility for most commodity, disaster, and conservation programs has been linked to compliance with the highly erodible land conservation and wetland conservation provisions. The 2014 Farm Bill continues the requirement that producers adhere to conservation compliance guidelines to be eligible for most programs administered by FSA and NRCS. This includes the new price and revenue protection programs, the Conservation Reserve Program, the Livestock Disaster Assistance programs and Marketing Assistance Loans implemented by FSA. It also includes the Environmental Quality Incentives Program, the Conservation Stewardship Program, and other conservation programs.

FSA recently released a revised form AD-1026, which is available at USDA Service Centers and online at: www.fsa.usda.gov.

USDA will publish a rule later this year that will provide details outlining the connection of conservation compliance with crop insurance premium support. Producers can also contact their local USDA Service Center for information. A listing of service center locations is available at www.nrcs.usda.gov/wps/portal/nrcs/main/national/contact/local/.

ON THE EDGE OF COMMON SENSE

Who Would Like RFD-TV Off The Air?

Who would like RFD-TV off the air? Or U.S. Farm Report? Who would like Farm Bureaus shut down, along with the National Cattlemen's Association, the Pork Producers, the Egg Council, the Northern Ag Network, Range magazine, the Delmarva Farmer, the Farm Journal, the Beef Checkoff, the Brownfield Ag Network? Who would like to make it illegal for movie stars, sports stars, heroes, singers and baby calves to be pictured with a milk moustache?

ANSWER: Any person or group that does not want people to know "where their food comes from." The first one that comes to mind is Humane Society of the U.S. (not associated with the local Humane Society in your home town). They make a living attempting to make farmers and ranchers look bad. I don't question their motive, it's a job, it's how they pay the bills. They come to work each day and send out letters asking for the "Cash" so they can "fight the evil farmers and ranchers." As long as they can keep their donors misinformed, blindfolded and mislead about the whole truth, the "Cash" keeps comin' in!

Another factor that is critical, is to portray agriculture, be it modern or homegrown, as inhumane, environmentally harmful, and run by insensitive country hicks who have no real moral attachment to the animals and the land... that it's all about money. That is easy for them to understand since so much of their own time and effort and commitment is dedicated to the pursuit of "Cash." There seem to be endless quasi-associations seeking funds to "protect and enhance the wildlife and the habitat, the heritage and the natural resources." They pop up every time someone can find a cause that will stimulate the "Cash." But just having a good cause is not enough. They must create a straw man to portray the enemy. That eliminates any deep inspection of the validity of their cause, and ranchers and farmers, hunters, miners, lumberjacks and oil field roughnecks fill their bill.

Another influential group of people who don't want people to know "where their food comes from" are politicians with a prejudice against those who work the land. Their reasons are usually personal; some childhood animosity that is now being repaid because they have the power, a guilt complex because they were born with a golden spoon, maybe the only farmer he knows ran against him for office. Who knows?

RFD-TV is being dropped from some media networks that are intent on merging. The reason given is that a network about and for agriculture is not relevant to the modern urban viewer. HSUS, among others, will be thrilled! Agriculture on television is one of the few places where the consumer can get to know "where their food comes from." The presence of agriculture is growing. It's not uncommon to see or hear news stories about farmers and ranchers. Most are good. Most reporters are reasonable people, they eat bacon and hamburger. They have a general concept that global population growth will demand more food, and that the USDA represents and is involved with keeping our food safe.

They are like most Americans, they trust farmers and ranchers and expect us to stay on top of things. We are able to do that because we have access to such a broad source of information, (re: first paragraph). We continue to educate and include the curious urban consumers in our thinking. We invite them to see for themselves; to know the truth about our business and to show them "where your food really comes from." And that, my friends, is the last thing the Humane Society of the U.S., the extremist ANTIs, and vengeful offended politicians want them to know.

Hay trade slow. Demand moderate to strong for dairy alfalfa, moderate for grinding alfalfa and pellets, light to moderate for grass hay. Unseasonably cool weather has returned with a good chance of rain over much of the state. The prairie hay and alfalfa baling are active, most swathers are taking a break until this rain chance passes. Pastures and row crops are showing stress from the hot temperatures last week, the northern third of the state really needs rain. If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange: www.kfb.org/commodities/haypasture/index.html

Dairy alfalfa steady, ground alfalfa 20.00 lower. Movement moderate. Alfalfa, Horse, 250.00-300.00, small squares 10.00/bale. The Kansas Hay Market Report is provided by the Kansas Department of Agriculture with technical oversight from the USDA Agricultural Marketing Service.

Dr. Jim Gerrish, well-known rancher, researcher, grazing educator, and co-founder of the Missouri Grazing School will be in Kansas this month to kick off Amazing Grazing II for Ruminants Great and Small. A workshop entitled "Management of Sheep and Goats for Grazing, Herd Health, Performance and Profitability" will be held August 15-16, 2014, 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. both days at Four Points by Sheraton in Manhattan.

This workshop is tailored for small ruminant producers specifically, and Gerrish will be able to help producers make better choices for their pasture situation. Dr. Gerrish states, "Sheep and goats offer opportunities for landowners as alternatives to raising cattle. Greater production efficiencies, niche market values, and ease of handling make sheep and goats particularly attractive for smaller acreages. Managing smaller ruminants does require a different skill set than cattle, and they require more attention to details of management. This workshop will cover topics including grazing practices for parasite management, fence and stock water development for ease of grazing, extending the grazing season, among others."

Dr. Brian Faris, head of KSU Animal Science Department Sheep and Goats and the newly built small ruminant facility, will join the Manhattan Small Ruminant Workshop. Faris was raised in Texas, and brings a wealth of knowledge and experience in the sheep and goat industry to this workshop. The workshop will include a tour of the new facility; where a hands-on workshop for producers to learn small animal health management techniques will be held later in the fall. A Friday evening ranch tour/supper is in the planning stages. Program director Mary Howell reports, "Amazing Grazing II was written specifically to address many of the issues that small animal producers keep asking for. Two days spent with Jim and Brian will be well worth the time and money invested. Ranch managers will learn valuable grazing information and management skills that will improve production and profitability of their livestock enterprise."

Cost for the workshop is $60.00, which includes lunch and handouts. An evening tour and supper is tentatively planned at a local ranch. Please register online at: www.AmazingGrazingKansas.com, contact Mary Howell at kfu.mary@gmail.com or call 785-562-8726. A block of rooms is being held at Four Points by Sheraton, Manhattan; call 785-584-5573. Check the website often for other upcoming events and to sign up for news as it happens.

Amazing Grazing II partners with Kansas Farmers Union; Kansas NRCS, Kansas Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education, Kansas Center for Sustainable Agriculture and Alternative Crops, Kansas State Research and Extension, Farm Credit, Kansas Grazing Land Coalition, and Kansas Graziers with funding from North Central Extension Risk Management Education Center and USDA National Institute of Food and Agriculture.

Appeals court upholds FDA action on judicious use of antibiotics

The Second Circuit Court of Appeals issued a 2-1 decision in New York recently that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration is not required to hold hearings concerning the safety of feeding antibiotics at subtherapeutic levels. The ruling overturns two district court rulings from 2012 in a case initially filed in 2011 by the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), the Center for Science in the Public Interest, Food Animal Concerns Trust, Public Citizen and the Union of Concerned Scientists.

The groups argue that FDA is required by statute to hold hearings to determine whether to withdraw approval for the use of penicillin and tetracyclines in animal feed after the agency declared that the subtherapeutic use of the drugs in animal feed “has not been shown to be safe” in the late 1970s. Such hearings would require industry to prove that the use of these drugs, as approved, is safe. FDA’s policy to pursue a collaborative stakeholder process to implement significant changes to antibiotic use rather than a regulatory action is supported by the Animal Health Institute (AHI), Centers for Disease Control and the President’s Council of Advisors on Science & Technology. All 26 companies affected by the policy have pledged to align their products with the effort, and changes have begun. The implementation of this policy means all medically important antibiotics used in food animals will be used to fight disease at the direction of a veterinarian. The legal challenges and citizen’s petitions that are set aside by this decision have diverted agency resources from focusing on moving ahead with implementing the judicious use policy. AHI said it believes this decision will clear the way and allow FDA to focus on working with stakeholders to successfully implement this policy in a timely manner. ## USDA announces grants to help veterans and minority farmers get started in agriculture

USDA deputy secretary Krysta Harden announced the availability of over $9 million in outreach and technical assistance for minority farmers and ranchers and military veterans that are new to farming and ranching. The funding, provided through the Outreach and Assistance for Socially Disadvantaged Farmers and Ranchers and Veteran Farmers and Ranchers Program, also known as the 2501 Program, will enable community-based organizations and other partners to work directly with these groups to successfully acquire, own and operate farms and ranches and equitably participate in all USDA programs. “The future face of agriculture needs to be varied in experience, background and knowledge to meet the demand of the 21st century,” said Harden. “The 2501 Program enables USDA to bring more farmers and ranchers into American agriculture by partnering with the institutions, land-grant universities and other organizations that work directly with these diverse communities. Through these critical partnerships, we will build a stronger agricultural future for our country and for the world.” Harden made this announcement at the White House during the Future of American Agriculture Champions of Change event celebrating the next generation of America’s farmers and ranchers. Through the 2501 Program, support is distributed to entities that work with minority or veteran farmers and ranchers — 1890 Land Grant Institutions, 1994 Land Grant Institutions, American Indian Tribal community colleges and Alaska Native cooperative colleges, Hispanic-serving and other institutions of higher education, Tribal governments and organizations, or community-based organizations. The 2501 Program, administered by the USDA’s Office of Advocacy and Outreach, has distributed over $57 million to 188 partners since 2010. The 2014 Farm Bill reauthorized the program and expanded targeted communities to include military veterans. Applications for 2501 Program funding will be accepted through August 25, 2014, and must be submitted through www.grants.gov. More information about the 2501 Program is available at: <http://www.outreach.usda.gov/grants/index.htm> America’s farmers and ranchers continue to become more diverse. According to the 2012 Agricultural Census, minority and historically underrepresented communities are part of the continued growth among new and beginning farmers and ranchers. According to the Census, 22 percent of all farmers were beginning farmers in 2012. That means one out of every five farmers operated a farm for less than ten years.

Huckabee endorses Roberts in Kansas Senate race

(AP) – Former Republican presidential candidate Mike Huckabee has endorsed Kansas Sen. Pat Roberts as he battles an aggressive GOP primary challenge from Tea Party candidate Milton Wolf. Huckabee described Roberts as a conservative warrior and said he’s fought tirelessly for lower taxes and federal government spending. Huckabee is a former Arkansas governor who now has a talk show on cable’s Fox News Channel. He ran unsuccessfully for the Republican presidential nomination in 2008 but won Kansas’ caucuses. Roberts is seeking his fourth, six-year term. Wolf is a Leawood radiologist and has the backing of national Tea Party groups ahead of the state’s Aug. 5 primary. Wolf spokesman Ben Hartman said Roberts won’t stop his slide in the polls no matter how many endorsements he receives.

Salina to host K-State Beef Conference

Central Kansas Extension District will be working with other local Extension districts to bring the 2014 K-State Beef Conference to Salina. This year it will be held on Thursday, August 14th in a town hall format at the K-State Salina campus in the Campus Conference Center. Producers can take an active role in the discussion on pertinent and timely topics that affect their bottom line. Faculty and State Extension staff will be on hand discussing topics ranging from successful sire selection to replacement females and "free feed" to managing a small herd. This event will have something for cattle producers of all sizes and production goals.

As an added bonus, Rawhide Portable Corrals will be on hand showing producers how their new, top-of-the line portable corral works. If you are in the market for a new portable corral, come on out, visit with them, and stay for the meeting.

A complimentary meal will begin at 5:00 p.m. and the speakers go on stage at 5:30 p.m. Cost is only $5 per person and you can RSVP by calling Anthony N. Ruiz at 785-392-2147 or send him an email at anruiz@ksu.edu. They will be happy to accept payment at the door and serve you seconds from their chicken fried steak dinner.

McCabe selected as Angus Ambassador finalist

Esther McCabe, Elk City, considers it a privilege to have grown up on a registered Angus cattle operation. Raising cattle is a way of life for the McCabe family, and she says she wouldn't have it any other way.

"Growing up in southeast Kansas, the Angus breed is where my roots come from," McCabe says. "Being a third-generation Angus breeder, it's where my passion is, and every day I wake up and that's what I want to be doing. I want to be out there with the cattle, and I want to see a calf from the time it's born to when we sell it as a two-year-old bull."

McCabe, a senior at Kansas State University majoring in animal science, recently competed in the 2014 Angus Ambassador competition held July 24 in Saint Joseph, Mo. Hosted by the National Junior Angus Association (NJAA), McCabe and her family visited the American Angus Association® headquarters along with other finalists and their families.

"The caliber of applicants in our Angus Ambassador program are second to none," says Jaclyn Upperman, Association director of events and education. "It's tremendous to see such dedicated and passionate youth who are looking forward to a future promoting our breed and the entire beef industry."

To be considered for the position, earlier this spring, each junior member submitted a cover letter, résumé and two essay responses. The top candidates were invited to the Association where they gave a three to five minute presentation with 5 minutes of questions that followed.

Topics ranged from the importance of connecting with consumers about beef products to the value of marketing cattle on the grid. McCabe's presentation addressed the opportunities and challenges associated with the uncharted waters the industry is experiencing with historical high prices, not only for buying cattle, but keeping them as well. McCabe also discussed the role the Angus breed plays in rebuilding the nation's cow herd.

Judging this year's competition were John Butler, chief executive officer of Beef Marketing Group; Crystal Albers, director of communications for Angus Productions Inc.; Jason Kenyon, Association director of information systems; Ginette Kurtz, Association director of commercial programs; and John Pfeiffer, Association board director.

Following the presentations, the judges selected Emma Jumper, Paragould, Ark., as the 2014-2015 Angus Ambassador. Jumper is a junior at Mississippi State University double majoring in business administration and foreign language. Joining McCabe as a finalist was Will Pohlman, Prairie Grove, Ark.

Funded by the Angus Foundation, the 2014-2015 Angus Ambassador will represent the breed at industry events throughout the United States and Canada, including the Angus Means Business National Convention and Trade Show; a Certified Angus Beef® Building Blocks Seminar in Wooster, Ohio; the National Cattlemen's Beef Association Cattle Industry Annual Convention in San Antonio, Texas; the Beef Improvement Federation Annual Research Symposium and Convention; and the Guiding Outstanding Angus Leaders (GOAL) Conference in Canada.

Building beef cow herd requires quality management and genetics

Rebuilding a beef cow herd to capture record-setting high prices is more than saving heifers to breed.

Dave Patterson, University of Missouri Extension beef specialist, said heifers need management – and new breeding technology.

Producers who do it right benefit in the long term. Patterson spoke to a national meeting of the American Society of Animal Science in Kansas City July 23.

Patterson, developer of the Show-Me-Select Replacement Heifer Program, said management and genetics add value to heifers. In managed care, more heifers become pregnant, producing live calves and staying in a herd longer.

The heifer program was started to improve calving ease. That takes more than using calving-ease bulls.

Much management focuses on checking stages of puberty. That reveals when heifers are ready to breed.

Selecting heifers to save starts earlier. Only those from the first calves born in a calving season are saved. Calves from early-calving cows will likely become pregnant early, like their mothers.

More Missouri producers breed heifers according to the SMS management plan, even if not enrolled, Patterson said.

Successful producers learn that Show-Me-Select heifers are worth more.

Recent SMS production sales show that Tier Two heifers, with stacked genetics, bring an average $407 premium. That's above the high SMS base price.

"Repeat buyers drive up heifer prices," Patterson said. "Those buyers learn the value of almost trouble-free calving."

With managed breeding, calving seasons are shortened. Also, there's less death loss.

Those enrolled in Show-Me-Select work with their regional MU Extension livestock specialist. Their local veterinarian becomes part of the management team.

"Pre-breeding exams show herd owners which heifers to breed – and which to feed out."

By palpation of reproductive tract, vets learn the stage of puberty. The reproductive tract score (RTS) ranks heifers 1 to 5. Those scoring 1 are not saved to breed. Those prepubertal heifers develop late and might not breed.

Those scoring 4 or 5 are cycling, making them candidates for herd replacements. Added maturity of reproductive tract improves success.

Another part of pre-breeding includes measuring pelvic opening. Heifers with small pelvic openings aren't bred.

Management doesn't stop at breeding. Ninety days after breeding, a pregnancy check tells of success. Those not bred go to the feedlot. That's more profitable than waiting nine months to find a heifer wasn't bred.

The vet helps with year-round health, a part of the plan. The extra effort pays big dividends. Nutrition needs attention also. Heifers must be gaining weight before breeding and calving.

"There's lots of known management tips and technology," Patterson told his peers. "Having them in a written plan makes work easier for producers."

"It sounds confusing. But it is not rocket science."

The SMS "Missouri Recipe" is one sheet of paper printed front and back.

"When we first worked with producers, I was shocked that few had a breeding plan," Patterson said. With a plan, herd owners can aim to have every cow, and heifer, bred, leading to a live calf to sell. All of that happens within one year.

Missouri producers learned the value of timed artificial insemination, which gives herd owners access to top proven AI sires. Breeding all cows, or heifers, on one day shortens calving seasons. Resulting uniformity of calves adds value for feeders.

spring and fall SMS sales adds value by attracting buyers. Heifers have sold into 95 percent of Missouri counties. Also, Missouri heifers have sold into 18 states.

"Many buyers quit developing their own replacements to buy them at Show-Me-Select sales," Patterson said.

The SMS program keeps adding value. A computerized database gives feedback.

"The system works," Patterson told animal scientists. "There's no need to reinvent the wheel. Other states starting heifer programs base them on the Missouri Recipe."

USDA announces results of soy checkoff request for referendum vote

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has announced the results of the request for referendum on the Soybean Research and Promotion Program (soy checkoff). USDA received 355 request-for-referendum forms, of which only 324 were valid, from Farm Service Agency offices. The 355 forms represent 0.06 percent of all eligible U.S. soybean farmers. That result falls short of the 10 percent needed to prompt a referendum.

"These results show that U.S. soybean farmers overwhelmingly see the value in our soy checkoff," says Jim Call, soybean farmer from Madison, Minnesota, and United Soybean Board (USB) chairman. "It's more important than ever that the volunteer farmer-leaders of USB continue to invest soy checkoff funds to maximize the profit potential for all U.S. soybean farmers."

If 10 percent of the 569,998 U.S. soybean farmers had requested a referendum, with no more than one-fifth of the 10 percent coming from one state, USDA would have conducted the referendum on the soy checkoff within 12 months. USDA conducts the request-for-referendum vote every five years, as required by the Soybean Promotion, Research and Consumer Information Act. The most recent period took place from May 5 through May 30.

Farmers certifying that they or the entity they represent paid into the checkoff at any time between Jan. 1, 2012, and Dec. 31, 2013, were eligible to participate in the petition for referendum. Eligible farmers who did not want a referendum did not need to take any action.

USDA requested and approved a notification by USB to inform U.S. soybean farmers about the request-for-referendum period. USB placed paid notifications on the request for referendum in national, regional and state agricultural publications and also distributed the notification to all Qualified State Soybean Boards and the news media. In addition, USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service and Farm Service Agency distributed the information about the request-for-referendum period.

"As industry leaders, USB will keep moving U.S. soybeans forward to be the top global oilseed," adds Call. "It's a great vote of confidence knowing U.S. soybean farmers support this work as well."

Thorpe honored for beef industry achievements

There is no man more associated with the words “cattle market” than Topper Thorpe, who left his mark on the industry during a 32-year tenure with CattleFax. His contributions and leadership will be noted as Thorpe receives the Feeding Quality Forum Industry Achievement Award in August. “The uniqueness of the cattle feeding industry is that we supply almost 80% of the fed cattle produced in the world,” says Larry Corah, vice president of supply for Certified Angus Beef LLC (CAB), who began his own career when Thorpe was a rising star. “That is a pretty impactful industry, and CattleFax and Topper have had a strong influence on how successful it has been.”

Raised on a diversified livestock and crop operation in southern New Mexico, Thorpe earned degrees in business and economics from New Mexico State University before becoming one of two original employees of CattleFax in 1968. As the first analyst at the start-up company, Thorpe laid the foundation and served 30 years as CEO of what became “the nation’s premier market information, analysis, research and education service, owned by cattle producers and feeders.”

“His leadership in creating the organization of CattleFax and putting market power in producer hands helped the feeding industry grow and become what it is today,” Corah says.

“Topper understood the value of data, of information, and he could take that aggregate data and do the analysis and then weave a picture of what this industry looked like and what it was going to look like five to ten years down the road,” says Randy Blach, current CattleFax CEO, hired by Thorpe in 1980. Friends and customers always appreciated Thorpe’s candor in bringing transparency to all sectors of the cattle industry. He led CattleFax through the farm crisis of the 1980s, ensuring company analysts always told the honest truth, even if it wasn’t what customers wanted to hear. During his leadership, CattleFax evolved with technology that “accelerated the learning curve” for producers.

“I think really all the credit goes to Topper,” Blach says. “CattleFax wouldn’t be here today if it wasn’t for him. And it wasn’t always easy – there were a lot of lean years, but his wisdom and guidance got us through those years and developed a foundation that we still benefit from today.”

Beyond his talent with the market and business, Thorpe was known for the emphasis he put on relationships, multiplying himself through others who knew him as a great mentor. “You always knew where he stood,” Blach says. “He showed he was genuinely interested in his people.”

The former CEO may have stepped down in 2001, but his vision sustains CattleFax and the cattle industry today.

“I just want to thank Topper personally for all he has done for me and all that he has done for CattleFax and the benefit he has brought to the cattle and beef industries through all these years,” says Blach. But to Thorpe, he was just doing his job. “Receiving this award is very humbling because there are many others that have made great contributions in the industry. To be considered is an honor,” Thorpe says. He will be recognized and comment at the 9th annual Feeding Quality Forums in Kearney, Neb., on August 19 and in Amarillo, Texas, on August 21. Those are sponsored by Zoetis, Roto-Mix, Land O’ Lakes Purina Mills, Feedlot magazine and CAB. # Horse owners encouraged to be vigilant with surveillance for VS disease symptoms

Kansas Department of Agriculture Division of Animal Health officials were notified recently that Colorado has become the second state in 2014 to have a confirmed case of vesicular stomatitis (VS). Four horses tested positive for the disease and have been placed under quarantine. The horses involved in these index cases have no history of travel.

On July 17, the National Veterinary Services Laboratory reported a positive test on samples submitted from four horses. The initial Colorado disease investigation was performed by one of the field veterinarians from the State Veterinarian's Office at the Colorado Department of Agriculture. Previous positive cases of vesicular stomatitis in 2014 have been diagnosed in the southern area of Texas near the Mexico border and more recently in Bastrop and Travis counties just south of Austin, Texas.

Kansas Animal Health Commissioner Dr. Bill Brown noted that this information is important to horse owners and those who participate in horse related activities including youth shows and rodeos. "At this time there are no travel restrictions in Kansas. We are asking veterinarians and horse owners to keep an eye on their animals, especially if they are traveling this summer and may be co-mingled with horses from other states."

Veterinarians and livestock owners who suspect an animal may have VS or any other vesicular disease should immediately contact state or federal animal health authorities. Livestock with clinical signs of VS are isolated until they are healed and determined to be of no further threat for disease spread. There are no USDA-approved vaccines for VS.

While rare, human cases of VS can occur, usually among those who handle infected animals. VS in humans can cause flu-like symptoms and only rarely includes lesions or blisters.

Vesicular Stomatitis (VS) Signs and Transmission:

VS-susceptible species include horses, mules, cattle, bison, sheep, goats, pigs and camelids. The clinical signs of VS include vesicles, erosions and sloughing of the skin on the muzzle, tongue, teats and above the hooves of susceptible livestock. Vesicles are usually only seen early in the course of the disease. The transmission of vesicular stomatitis is not completely understood but components include insect vectors, mechanical transmission, and livestock movement.

VS is not fatal, however blister-like lesions swell and break, leaving raw tissue. Infected animals are placed under quarantine during the diseases incubation period.

Tips for Livestock Owners:

- Strict fly control is an important factor to inhibit the transmission of the disease.
- Avoid transferring feeding equipment, cleaning tools or health care equipment from other herds.
- Veterinarians and livestock owners should contact the state of destination when moving livestock interstate to ensure that all import requirements are met. For additional information on Kansas import requirements go to www.agriculture.ks.gov/imports
- VS disease prevention procedures include minimizing the sharing of water and feed/equipment, applying insect repellent daily (especially to the animal's ears), and closely observing animals for signs of VS.

Important Points for Veterinarians:

- Any vesicular disease of livestock is reportable in Kansas. To report call 785-564-6601.
- Since VS is considered a foreign animal disease, any case with clinical signs consistent with VS will warrant an investigation by a state or federal foreign animal disease diagnostician (FADD).

• Because of the contagious nature of VS and its resemblance to other diseases such as foot-and-mouth disease, animal health officials urge livestock owners and caretakers to report these symptoms to their veterinarian immediately.

• When VS is suspected, the FADD will gather the epidemiological information, take the necessary blood samples, collect the necessary fluid or tissue from the lesions, and inform the owners and the referring veterinarian as to necessary bio-security and movement restrictions.

U.S. cattle inventory Down 3 percent from 2012

As of July 1, there were 95.0 million head of cattle on U.S. farms, according to the cattle report published by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS). This is the lowest inventory for July 1 since the series began in 1973.

Other key findings in the report were:

The 2014 calf crop is expected to be 33.6 million, of which 24.3 million were born during the first half of the year and 9.3 million are expected to be born in the last six months of 2014.

With tighter cattle supplies and historic cattle prices, all cattle on feed decreased to 11.6 million, down 6 percent from 2012.

Of the 95.0 million cattle and calves, 39.0 million were all cows and heifers that have calved.

Of the 39.0 million cows and heifers that have calved, 29.7 million head were beef cows and 9.3 million were milk cows.

Faced with budget reduction in fiscal year 2013, NASS discontinued the July edition of the cattle report. The agency was able to bring the report back this year, however, following the complete reinstatement of the budget for its estimates program.

To obtain an accurate measurement of the current state of the U.S. cattle industry, NASS surveyed more than 10,000 operators across the nation during the first half of July. NASS interviewers collected the data by mail, telephone and through face-to-face personal interviews. NASS asked all participating producers to report their cattle inventories as of July 1, 2014 and calf crop for the entire 2014 calendar year.

The semiannual cattle report and all other NASS reports are available online at www.nass.usda.gov.

Secret Invention

Psst, I've got a secret. Don't tell anybody. It's a new discovery I've made, and I'm very excited about it. My new invention has so many benefits that I'm trying to keep it confidential until I can get it on the market.

My new discovery has lots of advantages. It is wireless, cordless, and self-propelled. It is fully mobile yet requires no fossil fuels, battery power, electrical consumption or toxic chemicals to operate. It can naturally reproduce itself. It has an optic system on one end and a non-chemical fly control device at the other end. It produces organic fertilizer. Best of all, it can travel through rough terrain and harvest vegetable matter, while naturally converting such biomass into high quality protein.

Doesn't that sound like a great discovery? Based on the description above, the environmentalists and world hunger folks should love it. It is fully natural, it can utilize parts of the terrain where farm equipment cannot go, and thus it can help feed the world.

I have a high-tech name for my discovery: Bovine Energy-Efficient Forage Collection Omnidirectional Working System. The acronym is BEEFCOWS, for short.

My system has built-in support and redundancy. In fact, the working components of my system travel together. They practice their forage collection in a team called a Hierarchical Eating Regional Deployment, or HERD.

As noted, this system can reproduce itself. The accompanying poem describes how the components of my system provide nutrition to grow their successor units.

The above thoughts are sparked, in part, by a recent Time magazine cover story about the American diet. The article essentially said that the scientific emphasis on eliminating fat in our food during recent decades went too far. The author wrote that the energy and protein in dairy products, for example, were good for you. He wrote that it was okay to consume an occasional steak, even though he said that those with environmental sensitivity might feel guilty about it.

Feeling guilty about eating beef? That is totally misguided. As my new discovery shows, BEEFCOWS will utilize forage and generate needed protein from rangeland which would not otherwise be productive for human consumption. Thus, beef is good for the environment and good for feeding the world. When I announce my discovery, I wonder if Time magazine will send a reporter out to my ranch to sing its praises?

Meanwhile, I'm in the laboratory creating my next invention. I'm sure it's new, so keep it under your hat. This is a form of recycling through which the system can reproduce itself. I call each of these successor units a Carry-over Animal Living Facsimile, or CALF.

Gettin' Groceries

By Ron Wilson, Poet Lariat

Gettin' groceries is something we have to do. For supplies from the store each week or two. There's milk, bread, cereal, eggs and juice, Plus the snacks and drinks that teenagers use. And right before a holiday or before a winter storm, I get amazed at the shopper checkout lines that form. But when I see a cow nursing a baby calf, It reminds me of a cattleman that made me laugh. When he saw a calf nurse, one of his tendencies Was to say, "That calf is gettin' groceries." I thought it was a funny saying back in the day, But now I understand it in a modern way. For we all need food to help sustain and grow, Just like that newborn calf will undergo. While humans go to the garden or the store, of course, That calf gets his nutrition direct from the source. We have had a bottle calf, which the kids think is fun, But it takes time and trouble to get those chores done. So I give thanks for my favorable luck When I see a new calf that will stand and suck. Now my wife says our kitchen inventory needs to rebuild, So we'll be gettin' groceries for the pantry to be filled. But for the cow-calf man, there's nothing better somehow, Than seein' a calf gettin' groceries from a momma cow. Happy Trails!
