

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

It was yet another directionless week in the corn market. The December corn has been range-bound since July 21st and it doesn't seem to matter how good the weather is or how big of a yield is discussed, the market won't break and it won't rally to give us a better selling opportunity. We have apparently reached equilibrium and corn is supposed to be worth about $3.67.

I still worry about the corn falling apart during September. The market has a pretty good track record of heading lower into harvest especially when the crop is expected to be big. It was good that the market closed off the low Friday or we would have had to worry about a gap lower on Monday night after the three day weekend.

There isn't much fresh news out there and we are basically just waiting for the September supply and demand report to see what USDA does with the yield estimate and waiting for harvest reports to see actual yields. It is the same basic scenario for the soybeans, except that the beans did make a new low last week. In the long run though, I'm not optimistic about either market.

The wheat is a little bit different story. Every week we get a little bounce on news about the fighting in Ukraine and every week it seems to get a little drier in Australia. At some point, maybe, one or both of those issues will result in actual export sales for us. Until then we will be stuck with a very choppy market where rallies don't hold

Beef checkoff sees strong early results for digital campaign

Millennials initiate more than five million online food-related searches each day. What a tremendous opportunity for the beef checkoff's consumer digital advertising campaign. And just 12 weeks into the new campaign, the results are impressive indeed!

The "Beef. It's What's For Dinner." website reached more than 1 million consumers during the first 12 weeks of the campaign; the five "no-recipe recipe" YouTube videos on the site were viewed 1.5 million times; and associated social-media sites hosted a total of 434,000 engagements (likes, comments, shares, re-tweets, and click-thrus to checkoff resources such as recipes).

"Our checkoff's digital advertising program is where the consumers are, across the entire U.S., ensuring beef's visibility in the marketplace," says Terri Carstensen, beef producer from Odebolt, Iowa and chairwoman of the checkoff's Domestic Consumer Preference Committee. "The exciting part is that we are showing consumers they don't have to sacrifice taste or nutrition for convenience. We continue to engage consumers during their moments of meal planning, inspiration and decision-making, and results show we're having an impact and that every interaction matters. Digital/social media is such a great tool because it is available 24/7."

State beef councils using digital platforms from the national media buys included: Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Texas and Utah. Participating states used digital media, such as Facebook and paid Google search advertising to share positive beef messages with millennials.

The new campaign helps the checkoff get to know beef's targeted consumers better – like the fact that 80 percent of them eat beef at least once a week and they're visiting the checkoff-funded "Beef. It's What's For Dinner." site for recipes and beef cooking techniques.

"At the end of the day, the checkoff aims to shift consumers' perceptions of beef," says Carstensen. "What the data shows is that 97 percent of consumers have positive opinions about beef after visiting the site. That's a result to be proud of!"

and breaks don't last long either. I really want to be bullish wheat due to the tight supplies of hard red winter wheat, but the lack of consistently large export sales and the failure to hold gains when we get them is very discouraging. A close above $6.58 in the December KW would do a lot to help my attitude.

The excitement of the week was in the livestock sector. We had a pretty major turnaround in both the hog and cattle futures and cash cattle traded at $155, which was higher for the first time in several weeks. On the charts I am still looking for a move up to the $152.50 - $153 level in the October live cattle at which point I want to be a put option buyer. Sell futures only if you are willing to stand a move to new highs or you are using a tight stop. The fundamentals are still quite bullish, but one week of higher cash cattle trade does not make a trend, thus the cautious approach.

The feeder cattle charts look more bullish to me than the live cattle at the moment. The October feeders should be able to test the contract highs in the near future, and then we will see how the market reacts. Just like the live cattle, if you need price protection I would prefer to use options.

From the Land of Kansas tailgate contest highlights Kansas ingredients

College football season is right around the corner and what would college football be without tailgating? From the Land of Kansas' inaugural tailgate contest hosted at the Kansas State University home game, September 18, seeks to find the best tailgates utilizing Kansas products and ingredients. The contest will seek out tailgates across the east and west Bill Snyder Family Stadium parking lots with the best dishes in three categories: main dish, side dish and dessert featuring Kansas ingredients.

"Kansas has a lot of wonderful products and ingredients that are the perfect addition to tailgating traditions," said Stacy Mayo, From the Land of Kansas director. "We want to see Kansans take ingredients from across the state and create memorable dishes. This could mean using onions from your garden or the farmers' market, beef from a Kansas ranch or incorporating your favorite Kansas barbeque sauce into your dish." Visit the From the Land of Kansas website to find Kansas products and ingredients near you. "Tailgaters can check out our website or connect with us on social media where we feature Kansas companies on a regular basis," Mayo said. "You can find us on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram."

Limited contest spots are available for the first year of competition. Competitors must submit their tailgate spot and participation category to fromthelandofkansas@kda.ks.gov by Thursday, September 11, 2014. For more information on entry requirements, visit FromtheLandofKansas.com/tailgate. The scoring rubric is listed on the site.

Livestock water and fencing workshop set for September 9

Mark Green, NRCS specialist from Missouri will return to Kansas to offer his very popular workshop on electric fencing and livestock watering options September 9, 2014 in Topeka. The workshop will be held at the Topeka Ramada, 420 SE 6th Avenue. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. and the program lasts until 4:00 p.m.

Water availability is the number one limiting factor for grazing possibilities. The addition of electric fencing will increase grazing options that can in turn benefit range health, the soil, as well as improve production and profitability. Green will explain electric fence products, the pros and cons of various materials used in electric fence construction and installation techniques. Green will also cover livestock watering topics: water distribution for improved grazing distribution, permanent and portable tanks, above and below ground pipeline, and water sources — wells, streams, springs and ponds. Green will include fencing and watering needs for sheep and goats.

Producers always enjoy Green's cowboy humor and expertise from years of experience. Mark states "I believe that folks in my line of work should gather information that works and pass it on to the ranchers I work with. What makes me different is that I am not selling anything; I am sharing the ideas I have seen visiting many ranches. Even little things can make a big difference. I will relay what works; as well as things to avoid in water and fencing."

Cost for the workshop is $30.00, and includes lunch and two very nice handouts on electric fencing and water development. Please RSVP reservations to: AmazingGrazingKansas.com or for questions contact Mary Howell at kfu.mary@gmail.com or call 785-562-8726.

Governor’s Water Conference to be held November 12-13

Registration is now open for the Governor’s Conference on the Future of Water in Kansas

The Kansas Water Office (KWO) is excited to announce the Governor’s Water Conference will be held Wednesday, November 12 and Thursday, November 13, 2014 at the Hilton Garden Inn & Conference Center in Manhattan.

The Governor’s Conference on the Future of Water in Kansas will highlight the latest policy and research developments of water issues in Kansas as well as share the outcomes of the past year to address Brownback’s 2013 Call to Action to develop a long-term vision for our state’s future water supply. Many great speakers and topics are planned; a few are highlighted below.

- Rhett Evans, CEO of Golf Course Superintendents Association of America
- Mark Lambert, CEO of IDE Americas, Inc.
- Mike Teague, Oklahoma Secretary of Energy & Environment
- Paul Wenger, President of California Farm Bureau Federation
- Jerry DeNoyelles, Kansas Biological Survey

Topics and themes will complement the Vision such as: working with your available resources, developing additional sources of supply, and conservation and management practices

Stocker role in beef cattle herd rebuilding is a topic at Sept. 25 K-State Field Day

The role of stocker cattle in beef herd rebuilding, as well as production considerations and water use, are among topics planned for the 2014 Kansas State University Beef Stocker Field Day on Thursday, Sept. 25.

The day is designed to provide the latest practical information for producers to aid decision-making in the current dynamic beef industry environment.

The event starts with registration and coffee at 9:30 a.m. and the program at 10:15 a.m. A barbecue lunch is provided, and the day ends with an evening social, the "Cutting Bull's Lament 2014" at 5:30 p.m. A panel of producers talking about nutrition issues and several other presentations are on the agenda.

- Forward Planning Implications for Herd Rebuilding: Where Does the Stocker Segment Fit?

- Producer Panel: Receiving and Growing Nutrition Philosophies

- Stocker Parasite Control: A New Frontier

- Management Strategy Response to the FDA Phase-out of Antibiotics

- Breakout sessions include: Livestock Watering Options; Evaluating Environmental Impacts of Small Receiving/Growing Facilities; and Coccidiosis: The Robber Baron.

Posters that reflect K-State beef cattle research projects will be on display.

The fee to attend the Beef Stocker Field Day is $25 if paid by Sept. 15. More information and online registration is available at www.asi.k-state.edu/species/beef/research-and-extension/. After Sept. 15, attendees must pay at the event. Further information is available by contacting Lois Schreiner at 785-532-1267 or lschrein@ksu.edu.

Patent issued for research that alleviates pain in cattle suffering from lameness, castration, dehorning

A U.S. patent was recently awarded for technology created by researchers at Kansas State University that improves the health and welfare of beef cattle and other ruminant animals suffering from lameness and following castration, dehorning and other painful but necessary management procedures.

U.S. Patent No. 8,791,105, "Methods for Alleviating Chronic Pain and Improving Performance of Cattle Undergoing Dehorning or Castration," was awarded to the Kansas State University Research Foundation, a nonprofit corporation responsible for managing technology transfer activities at the university.

The patent is for research conducted while at Kansas State University by former faculty member Hans Coetzee, now a professor of clinical pharmacology at Iowa State University, and Butch Kukanich, associate professor of anatomy and physiology at Kansas State University.

The patent covers administering meloxicam alone or administering a combination of meloxicam and gabapentin to help alleviate acute and chronic pain and improve the performance of cattle.

Researchers found that combinations of meloxicam and gabapentin improved the welfare of cattle by reducing the severity of lameness. Meloxicam alone improved weight gain after dehorning and reduced the incidence of bovine respiratory disease after castration.

"Once meloxicam was orally administered to beef cattle prior to these common procedures, the cattle gained more weight and had slower incidence of bovine respiratory disease because it allowed them to be more comfortable and less stressed," Kukanich said.

A significant benefit of this patented technology is that it reduces reliance on antibiotics to treat and control diseases in cattle. This reduces the risk of antibiotic resistance selection and has positive implications for both human and animal health.

The patent is available to license.

Currently, the Kansas State University Research Foundation has been awarded four patents in 2014 for inventions by university researchers.

Iowa State-UNL partnership creates plant science app for teachers, students

A new app will give high school agri-science teachers a tool for teaching biotechnology to their students.

“The Journey of a Gene” is the product of a partnership between Iowa State University and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. The project uses the example of soybean and the disease, sudden death syndrome, to illustrate the process of genetic engineering.

The project began with a U.S. Department of Agriculture grant for more than $5 million titled “Transgenic Approaches to Sudden Death Syndrome in Soybean.” ISU scientists Madan Bhattacharyya and Alison Robertson envisioned an Extension component that would target agri-science teachers who also lead FFA chapters across the country.

Bhattacharyya and Robertson thought an app that could be used on a smartphone or tablet would work best for teachers and their students. Robertson was familiar with UNL agronomy professor Don Lee’s teaching in genetics and biotechnology, and they partnered with him and UNL’s Plant and Soil Science eLibrary to develop and evaluate the app.

Grace Troupe, one of Lee’s graduate students, took the app development refining the app. It will be piloted with college students this fall to see how it changes their attitudes toward genetic engineering, and the app will be used next spring in the Nebraska FFA contest. Troupe also is presenting it in other regional meetings.

The app gives science teachers a way to present very complicated but critical, science-based information to their students.

“The reason they don’t teach this very much is they feel it’s a really difficult subject. They worry about misunderstanding the science,” Troupe said. She cited the example of one teacher who used to spend ten minutes on genetic engineering in class in the past; now, using the app, he wants to do eight full class periods on the topic.

“These classrooms have our future producers and consumers. They need to understand this technology so they can make better decisions,” Troupe said.

UNL’s Plant and Soil Sciences eLibrary produces educational material covering aspects of agriculture ranging from genetics to soil science to agronomic practices. Founded in 1999, the eLibrary is a collaborative project between the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Enrollment for new dairy farm risk management program under way

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack has announced that as of Sept. 2, 2014, farmers can enroll in the new Dairy Margin Protection Program. The voluntary program, established by the 2014 Farm Bill, provides financial assistance to participating farmers when the margin – the difference between the price of milk and feed costs – falls below the coverage level selected by the farmer.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture also launched a new Web tool to help producers determine the level of coverage under the Margin Protection Program that will provide them with the strongest safety net under a variety of conditions. The online resource, available at www.fsa.usda.gov/mpptool, allows dairy farmers to quickly and easily combine unique operation data and other key variables to calculate their coverage needs based on price projections. Producers can also review historical data or estimate future coverage based on data projections. The secure site can be accessed via computer, Smartphone, tablet or any other platform, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"We've made tremendous progress in implementing new risk management programs since the Farm Bill was signed over six months ago," said Vilsack. "This new program is another example of this administration's commitment to provide effective safety net programs that allow farmers and ranchers to manage economic risks beyond their control. And the supplemental Web tool will empower the nation's 46,000 dairy producers to make decisions that make sense for them."

Development of the online resource was led by the University of Illinois, in partnership with the USDA and the Program on Dairy Markets and Policy (DMAp). DMAp partners include the University of Illinois, the University of Wisconsin, Cornell University, Pennsylvania State University, the University of Minnesota, Ohio State University and Michigan State University.

The Margin Protection Program, which replaces the Milk Income Loss Contract program, gives participating dairy producers the flexibility to select coverage levels best suited for their operation. Enrollment begins Sept. 2 and ends on Nov. 28, 2014, for 2014 and 2015. Participating farmers must remain in the program through 2018 and pay a minimum $100 administrative fee each year. Producers have the option of selecting a different coverage level during open enrollment each year.

Dairy operations enrolling in the new program must comply with conservation compliance provisions and cannot participate in the Livestock Gross Margin dairy insurance program. Farmers already participating in the Livestock Gross Margin program may register for the Margin Protection Program, but the new margin program will only begin once their Livestock Gross Margin coverage has ended.

The Margin Protection Program final rule was published in the Federal Register on Aug. 29, 2014. The Farm Service Agency (FSA), which administers the program, also will open a 60-day public comment period on the dairy program. The agency wants to hear from dairy operators to determine whether the current regulation accurately addresses management changes, such as adding new family members to the dairy operation or inter-generational transfers. Written comments must be submitted by Oct. 28, 2014, at www.fsa.usda.gov or www.regulations.gov.

The 2014 Farm Bill also established the Dairy Product Donation Program. The program authorizes USDA to purchase and donate dairy products to nonprofit organizations that provide nutrition assistance to low-income families. Purchases only occur during periods of low dairy margins. Dairy operators do not need to enroll to benefit from the Dairy Product Donation Program.

NSP board elects officers, welcomes new directors

The National Sorghum Producers board of directors elected officers and appointed two new individuals to the board during its annual August board meeting.

Both NSP board chairman J.B. Stewart of Keyes, Okla., and vice chairman James Born of Booker, Texas, were reappointed to their officer positions for the 2015 fiscal year.

New directors appointed to the board include Dan Atkisson, of Stockton, and Larry Dahlsten, of Lindsborg. Both Atkisson and Dahlsten will serve three-year terms beginning with fiscal year 2015.

Another new member to the board is Mike Battin of Chromatin Inc. who assumes Greg Krissek's seat on the NSP board and will serve the remainder of his three-year term that expires September 2016. Krissek, who served on the NSP board for two and a half years as an industry representative, resigned from his board seat this spring when he accepted his current position as CEO of the Kansas Corn Growers Association and the Kansas Corn Commission.

"These three gentlemen bring a wealth of leadership and knowledge to the NSP board of directors," J.B. Stewart said. "We welcome them and look forward to their help moving the sorghum industry forward."

Atkisson is a farmer and rancher in northwest Kansas and grows 500 acres of sorghum. He is an active member of many other boards in his state and region and was a member of Kansas Agricultural and Rural Leadership Class XI. Atkisson said looks forward to bringing producer energy to the board and feels it is a critical component to future momentum during this pivotal stage in the sorghum industry.

Dahlsten is a sorghum producer from central Kansas, farming 100 to 200 acres of sorghum annually.

Dahlsten is an active member of his community, region and state and plans to utilize those experiences in his new role on the NSP board. He enjoys agriculture and the challenges and opportunities it presents and looks forward to the opportunity to serve and advance the sorghum industry.

Battin is the national sales director at Chromatin and Sorghum Partners, a grain, forage and sweet sorghum seed company. Battin provides 20 years of agriculture sales and management experience and is keenly aware of the issues that affect growers' decisions on the farm.

The NSP board of directors also says goodbye to two long-standing leaders in the sorghum industry. Gerald Simonsen farms near Ruskin, Neb., and served on the NSP board from 2000-2014. Simonsen served as chair, vice chair and past chair, among many other responsibilities, during his time on the NSP board. David Thomas, who served as an industry representative working for Chromatin and Sorghum Partners, served on the board from 2008-2014. Likewise, Thomas had served many roles on the NSP board.

"What Gerald and David brought to the table was certainly unique and special to NSP and the sorghum industry," Stewart said. "They will be missed even with the quality of candidates we have to replace them. We wish them the best in their future endeavors and know their contributions will have lasting impacts on the sorghum industry."

Changes to the NSP board of directors are effective October 1, 2014.

U.S. Farmers & Ranchers Alliance announces launch of I Am Farmland campaign

U.S. Farmers & Ranchers Alliance® (USFRA®) is launching a new campaign entitled I Am Farmland geared to help support the expanded distribution of Farmland, a new feature length documentary about the lives of young farmers and ranchers. Funds raised by the I Am Farmland effort will be used to bring the film to high school classrooms, college campuses, in addition to communities all across the country.

USFRA invites others in agriculture to help spread the message that Farmland accurately depicts life as an American farmer and rancher. I Am Farmland is a group of friends of the film working to reach broader audiences and wider distribution.

“Farmers and ranchers owe it to ourselves to help ensure this film is seen by young people in an effort to curb the criticisms and lack of understanding consumers have for food production,” said USFRA board member and Minnesota farmer Gene Stoel. “Consumers are generations removed from agriculture today and they don’t know the people growing and raising our food. This is the first authentic representation of modern agriculture on this scale and the agriculture industry needs to step up and support it in a big way.”

USFRA will use the funds raised in this campaign to continue to heighten the energy of Farmland by offering screenings on college campuses, a curriculum-based program for high schools, and screening kits for farmers and ranchers who would like to conduct outreach in their local communities.

“If you have seen the film, you realize that it’s something everyone in America should see,” said USFRA CEO Randy Krotz. “Initial distribution of Farmland has been successful but limited. Now that we know the positive impact viewing the film has on non-ag audiences, we owe it to interested consumers to get the film in front of them. We need agriculture’s support to help more people around the country view this amazing film.”

If you would like to contribute to help expand the distribution of the film, please go to www.iamfarmland.org.

USFRA was created to answer consumers’ questions about how their food is grown and raised. This long-term movement has worked to address these questions through a variety of formats including the foodialogues.com website, social media, the signature Food Dialogues events, and most recently, through the funding of Farmland.

Visit www.iamfarmlandfilm.com for additional information about the film and to watch the trailer.

Sell At St. Marys

Sell Or Buy Cattle By Auction STARTING TIME 10:30 AM Tuesdays

After 66 years of serving our customers with a smile, Phyllis Rezac passed away on August 25. She will be greatly missed by her family, our employees and our customers.

We sold 1806 cattle August 26. Steer and heifer calves were in good demand at prices that were steady to $5.00 higher. Feeder steers and heifers 850 pounds and down were steady. Heavier feeders steers sold $2.00-4.00 lower. Cows and bulls sold $2.00-5.00 lower.
