

CoBank announces $150,000 matching fund to support wildfire

CoBank, a cooperative bank serving agribusinesses, rural infrastructure providers and Farm Credit associations throughout the United States, has announced it is launching a $150,000 charitable fund to support wildfire relief efforts throughout the states of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Recent fires have impacted farming and ranching communities in all three states, burning hundreds of thousands of acres, destroying property and killing livestock. In Kansas, an estimated 700,000 acres have burned throughout more than 20 counties in the state's southwest and central regions. In Oklahoma, the Forestry Service has estimated that approximately 400,000 acres have burned and a state of emergency has been declared in 22 counties. An estimated 325,000 acres have burned throughout the Texas panhandle.

"These wildfires have had a devastating impact," said Tom Halverson, CoBank's president and chief executive officer. "CoBank is committed to working hand-in-hand with our customers, other Farm Credit organizations and local relief agencies to support farmers, ranchers and other victims of these fires in impacted communities."

All five Farm Credit associations in the state of Kansas have already committed to using the fund to support relief efforts in that state. American AgCredit, Farm Credit of Ness City, Farm Credit of Western Kansas, Frontier Farm Credit, and High Plains Farm Credit have pledged $80,000, which will be entirely matched by CoBank.

The remaining $70,000 in the fund is available to all active CoBank borrowers as well as Farm Credit banks and associations. Contributions to relief efforts will be matched on a dollar-for-dollar basis and coordinated through the bank's Corporate Communications Division. Customers interested in taking advantage of the fund can call 303-740-6518 for details on how to apply.

New Conservation Reserve Program SAFE Practice offers market-based financial incentive for restoring playas

Kansas landowners and ag producers who have playas on their property may be eligible for a new USDA Continuous Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) practice that provides a market-based financial incentive for restoring playas and planting a native grass buffer around them. The newly established Migratory Bird, Butterfly, and Pollinator Habitat State Acres for Wildlife Enhancement (Migratory Bird SAFE) practice uses a reverse auction whereby landowners submit an offer to enroll their playa for the amount they are willing to accept as an annual payment — up to a maximum amount of $300 per acre — for a period of ten to fifteen years. This practice is entirely focused on conserving playas, a critical source of water for the wildlife and people in western Kansas. The name of the program gives a hint at how important these temporary wetlands are to the region's wildlife, but playas also provide important benefits for the people who live in this region. Research shows that properly functioning playas are a primary source of recharge for the Ogallala Aquifer — contributing up to 95 percent of inflow to the aquifer and improving the quality of that water. USDA will evaluate submitted offers for the Migratory Bird SAFE in a competitive process. As a continuous CRP sign-up conservation practice, landowners can submit bids at any time, but offers will be ranked at intervals. Offers that don't make the first cut-off date, or aren't accepted during the first batch, will be carried over for consideration during the next round. To be considered in the first ranking, offers must be received by March 31, 2017.

To learn more about playas and playa conservation programs, including the Migratory Bird SAFE, and to find USDA and partner staff who can provide assistance, visit PlayasWorkForKansas.com or contact a local USDA Service Center.

Monsanto gives $50,000 to support fire relief efforts

Monsanto has donated $50,000 to Kansas Farm Bureau's (KFB) Foundation in support of young and beginning ranchers affected by recent wildfires.

The funds will support a Young Farmers & Ranchers (YF&R) fire relief effort between Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado state YF&R programs.

"We've seen an outpouring of support since the fires," Amy France, KFB's YF&R chair, says. "Coming together in times like this is indicative of the charitable nature of our nation's agricultural industry and we're incredibly grateful for Monsanto's support."

"Our hearts go out to those individuals and families who have been impacted by the devastating wildfires in Kansas," Brett Bege-mann, president and chief operating officer at Monsanto, says. "Here at Monsanto we are committed to strengthening both farming communities and the communities where we live and work, and supporting others in agriculture."

"We consider it a privilege to play a small part in the Kansas relief efforts and encourage others to join us in restoring the livelihoods of the state's farmers and ranchers who have lost homes, crops, livestock and grazing lands. We're all in this together," he added.

The wildfires burned an estimated 1.5 million acres in the affected states. These funds will be distributed to help rebuild fence, restock herds, provide hay and other needed items.

To contribute to the fund, visit www.kfb.org/yfr-firerelief. Donations will be matched dollar for dollar because of Monsanto's contribution.

Kansas wheat update: Crop challenged by lack of moisture through much of the state

Dry winter weather that helped fuel wildfires in Kansas and other Plains states also left many wheat fields in need of moisture even as above-average temperatures pushed wheat plants to green up earlier than usual.

The dry conditions through much of the state left some wheat fields in tough shape, said Kansas State University agronomy assistant professor Romulo Lollato.

Total precipitation from Sept. 1, 2016, to Feb. 28, 2017, varied widely with some areas receiving far more than normal precipitation while the entire southwest quarter of Kansas received below-normal precipitation, according to the Kansas Weather Data Library.

"As a consequence of the precipitation shortage last fall in southwest Kansas, many fields there have erratic stands or are just now germinating or emerging," said Lollato, a wheat specialist with K-State Research and Extension. That leaves growers facing several agronomic and economic considerations as they decide whether to maintain the crop or plant the field to a different spring-planted crop.

In fields where the wheat seed sowing depth was relatively deep (two inches), the first leaf may have started below ground, he said. Some of those plants may never push through the soil surface, so those fields may have scattered wheat stands. In other fields that were dry last fall and now have moisture, shoots may push through and producers could end up with a decent stand. In these cases, sowing depth, seed treatment, seed vigor, and occurrence of pests and diseases will affect the final stand.

Previous research indicates that fields that are just now emerging, months after they normally would, have about half the yield potential of a crop that emerged and tillered in the fall. Spring weather, of course, will still be a factor, Lollato said. "If the weather turns cool and moist during the spring, these fields might still yield okay, but if we have a more normal warm and dry year, the yield reduction could be even worse than half."

Spring-emerged wheat will likely have thinner stands across the field which could give weeds a greater chance to thrive and pressure the wheat. Some spring-emerged wheat may also have problems vernalizing. Some varieties need six to eight weeks of soil temperatures below 50 degrees.

If a grower's wheat doesn't emerge until spring but the stand is decent, the crop will still have reduced yield potential compared to a normal fall-emerged crop, as spring tillers are less productive than fall tillers, Lollato said. Producers in this situation should take a stand count to determine the final number of plants emerged per row foot and compare it with a target stand. Information about taking a stand count and how to compare it with a target stand is available online in the March 3 K-State Agronomy eUpdate newsletter or by contacting a local K-State Research and Extension office.

"If the stand is decent compared to the target stand, consider whether having a reduced yield potential is affordable," Lollato said. "If the stand is not decent or producers cannot afford the reduced yield potential, terminating the crop and going into a summer crop may be an option, herbicide restrictions allowing."

temperatures resulted in an early greening of wheat fields, with some already past the jointing stage of development in south-central areas.

"The early spring green-up will require producers to make certain management practices, such as nitrogen fertilization, earlier than normal," the agronomist said. "Winter wheat turns from vegetative to reproductive development after its vernalization requirements are met - normally in early spring, so the number of spikelets per head is determined at greenup. Having nitrogen in the root zone by then is critical to ensure good head formation and to maximize the number of spikelets per head."

Insect management is another important consideration in warmer-than-usual conditions.

Another major consequence of the early start to this growing season is the heightened risk of freeze injury to the developing crop, Lollato said. He noted the average last date for freezing temperatures in Kansas ranges from early April in southeast Kansas to early May in northwest Kansas.

Where the crop is developing early, it is more likely to be in more-sensitive phases of development if and when a freeze occurs this spring, he said. A recent cold snap, during which minimum air temperatures reached as low as 9 degrees Fahrenheit from March 8-14, is a good example of that. While most Kansas wheat should have dodged the detrimental effects of that freeze event, especially fields where the growing point was still below ground, it highlights how the crop may be vulnerable to a freeze in the near future. As of March 22, many fields around the state are reaching the jointing stage of growth, and a similar cold snap could be much more detrimental.

If the crop escapes freeze injury, either by a mismatch between freeze occurrence and highly sensitive growth stages or due to the absence of a freeze, an early spring green-up might signify an early grain fill period.

"During the 2015-2016 growing season, the Kansas crop avoided three major freeze events due to a mismatch between freeze occurrence and sensitive stages of development, and yields were generally very good since the crop experienced good grain-filling conditions," Lollato said. "It will all depend on the weather moving forward."

He said many fields are showing yellowing of older leaves, typically from a combination of drought and nitrogen deficiency stresses. "In many cases, producers were timely applying the nitrogen to the wheat crop, but the lack of moisture did not distribute the nitrogen to the root zone, where it needs to be in order for uptake. If this week's precipitation forecast materializes, it will be beneficial to the crop to reduce some of the drought stress and ensure nitrogen is in the root zone for plant uptake."

Kansas companies participate in trade mission to Russia

In February 2017, the Kansas Department of Agriculture sponsored seven Kansans in an agricultural trade mission to AgroFarm Russia to expand market opportunities in productive animal husbandry. AgroFarm Russia is a leading exhibition for animal husbandry and animal breeding, and provided the group an opportunity to interact with breeders and genetics companies to promote the use of U.S. livestock genetics.

Crystal Carothers of Carothers Brothers in Anthony appreciated this trip of a lifetime to advocate for agriculture and the U.S. livestock industry in Moscow. "I walked away with many new connections and a better understanding on ways to promote agriculture trade in Russia," she said. "Through the work of KDA and the U.S. Embassy in Russia, we were given opportunities to visit with producers and see the actual marketing and production of agricultural products in Moscow."

Other participants on the trade mission included: Mike Callicrate, No-Bull Enterprises, St. Francis; George Eakin, Osborne Industries Inc., Osborne; Thad Geiger, Geiger Cattle Inc.; and Lynne Hinrichsen, Suzanne Ryan-Numrich and Kerry Wefald, KDA.

No-Bull Enterprises and Osborne Industries also promoted their Kansas-made products in the booth at AgroFarm. Following the trade show, the group visited a dairy and dairy processing business outside of Moscow and experienced a retail tour of three supermarkets and one open market. One of the stops on the tour, a Miratorg supermarket, now features case-ready beef cuts merchandised and labeled with Black Angus branding. Over the past five years, Miratorg agricultural holdings has imported live purebred cattle from Kansas and surrounding states to establish production of high-quality marbled beef in Russia.

"Just a few years ago, Kansas was sending record numbers of cattle to Russia, although exports have decreased as sanctions were put in place by the Russian government in August 2014," said Geiger. "Despite these current trade barriers, we believe it is necessary to foster trade relationships with Russia knowing at some point the sanctions will be lifted. Their initiative to become self-sufficient in feeding their people allows for the state of Kansas to develop relationships that place agriculture in a lead position. This trade mission planted many seeds to grow these trade relationships."

The trade mission was sponsored by KDA with assistance from funds from U.S. Livestock Genetics Export Inc. and a cooperative agreement with the U.S. Small Business Administration using a State Trade Expansion Program (STEP) grant.

KDA strives to encourage and enhance economic growth of the agriculture industry and the Kansas economy by exploring and expanding both domestic and international marketing opportunities. For information on this or other international trade missions, please contact Suzanne Ryan-Numrich, KDA international trade director, at suzanne.numrich@ks.gov or 785-564-6704.

In the overall gain contest F&F Feeds of Emporia took first place with an overall gain of 3.793 pounds per day.

Kansans who spent a week in Russia in February on an agricultural trade mission include, from left: Crystal Carothers, Carothers Brothers; Rachel Vanderberg, USDA FAS Livestock Attaché, Moscow; David Leishman, USDA ATO Director, Moscow; George Eakin, Osborne Industries; Jonathan Groessl, USDA Minister-Counselor for Agricultural Affairs, Moscow; Lynne Hinrichsen, KDA; Jay Weiker, National Association of Animal Breeders; Kerry Wefald, KDA; Mike Callicrate, No-Bull Enterprises; Suzanne Numrich, KDA.

"I have purchased bulls from Neal for the last 10 to 15 years. They have always performed well and conception rate on my cows has been excellent. As a result of buying bulls from Nemaha Valley Cattle Company we never pull a calf from (first-calf) heifers. The calves gain really well and are very uniform in size. Nemaha Valley Cattle Company is a top-notch operation." Brad Ebel, Hiawatha, KS

"Our family has been buying bulls from Neal Haverkamp at Nemaha Valley Cattle for over 10 years. They have been quality bulls at a fair price. The bulls have performed excellent in our herd and thrived in our environment and management. Their calves have done well and sold excellent at our local auction barn." Scott Wolfe, Daykin, NE

Schwieterman Market Outlook
 A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

March 31st we will get the Quarterly Stocks Report and the Prospective Plantings Report from USDA. It has been a long time since we had the long string of seemingly random stocks numbers from USDA, so that report isn't much of a concern. However, the Prospective Plantings Report will be very important and set the tone of the corn and soybean markets for the next couple of months. Market direction will be determined by how close the corn and soybean acreage figures are to 90 million. 90 million acres of corn would be supportive, but much more than that would be construed as negative. 90 million acres of soybeans would be outright bearish, but the number would have to be less than 86 million to be considered even a little friendly. Obviously the assumption is that we are going to see fewer corn acres and more soybean acres, the unknown is just how big of a change will be get. Be prepared for a lot of volatility on Friday because numbers that are very far away from expectations will create big moves in the markets.

On the charts, it was a pretty rough week for the corn, wheat and beans. We ended up seeing multi-month lows in all three and not much sign of support. Demand wasn't really the problem since we saw good numbers across the board, but ideas that the S. American crops are great, soybean acreage is going to expand in the US, and that rain will salvage the U.S. HRW crop, all worked together to keep the markets under pressure. The July KW seems to have found support at the $4.40 level for now, but it looks like the July corn will have to test the $3.60 area and the July beans may be headed for $9.50, especially if we get a large acreage figure Friday.

The cattle market was basically the opposite of the grains. We saw new multi-month highs or new contract highs in virtually every contract. The Fed Cattle Exchange had a high of $136 and an average of $133.50, so the momentum of that market is clearly up, and the feeder cattle auctions were at least $3 higher than the prior week, all week long. Demand for beef is very good right now and the problems in Brazil with their inspection system will either help with the demand for U.S. beef, or cut the available supply that we can import. Depending on how long it takes to resolve their problems, we could see a significant increase in U.S. beef prices.

Looking ahead, the cash cattle market is still well above the futures, but that probably won't change until after the April live cattle options expire. If the cash market is still strong at that point, the delivery period for the April live cattle contract will be pretty exciting. In the feeder cattle market, the March futures are above the cash index, but since the index is rising, that doesn't concern me too much. Chances are that the cash market will be up with where the futures are in time for expiration.

Schwieterman Marketing, L.L.C. specializes in risk management and cash grain and livestock marketing plans. For information on the markets or our marketing service you can contact Bret Crotts at 888-437-9131 or bret@swbell.net.

Despite fewer hives, Kansas honey production increases

Honey production in 2016 from Kansas producers with five or more colonies totaled 336 thousand pounds, up 17 percent from 2015, according to the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service.

There were 7,000 honey producing colonies in Kansas during 2016, down 13 percent from 2015.

Average yield was 48 pounds per colony, up 12 pounds from 2015. Producer stocks were 54 thousand pounds on December 15, 2016 down 50 percent from a year earlier.

Prices for the 2016 crop averaged 297 cents per pound, down from 350 cents in 2015. Prices were based on retail sales by producers and sales to private processors and cooperatives. Total value of honey produced in 2015 was 998 thousand dollars, down 1 percent from 2015.

Sales tax exemption and refund programs available for fencing materials used to rebuild after Kansas wildfires

To help provide farmers and ranchers rebuilding after the 2016 and 2017 Kansas wildfires, the Kansas Department of Revenue has created www.ksrevenue.org/wildfires with information on applying for refund and exemption certificates.

In March, the Legislature passed and Governor Sam Brownback signed into law a bill exempting the sales tax on fencing material used to reconstruct agricultural fences destroyed by wildfires in calendar years 2016 and 2017.

The page includes information on both the refund and exemption certificate application processes, the required forms for both programs and answers to frequently asked questions.

"We realize that Kansas farmers and ranchers are rebuilding their lives and hope that this information will help them access assistance easily," said Revenue Secretary Sam Williams.

Visit www.ksrevenue.org/wildfires for more information on the refund and sales tax exemption certificates.

In addition to the sales tax exemptions, the department is also waiving some fines and fees for those in fire-affected areas including:

- Those who lost a driver's license or ID card in the wildfires can get a free replacement by visiting a state driver licensing office or a county treasurer's office that offers driver's license renewals.
- Those who need to replace vehicle titles lost in the wildfires can get a free replacement by visiting their local county treasurer's office.
- People who need replacement copies of their tax returns can call 785-296-3081, and the department will provide a copy for free.
- For those who lost vehicles in the wildfires, they can bring in insurance claims to their local county treasurer's office and apply for a refund for the vehicle's tags.

Homeowners may be eligible for a property tax abatement on destroyed or substantially destroyed dwellings due to fire. Contact your county appraiser's office for details.

For businesses affected by the wildfires, which are busy trying to reopen, the department will waive any late filing fees they incur if they file those taxes late. The owner should call 785-368-8222 to coordinate with the department.

Agriculture nominee to distance himself from businesses

(AP) – Agriculture secretary nominee Sonny Perdue says he will step down from several positions at companies bearing his name, restructure family trusts and create blind trusts to avoid a conflict of interest if he is confirmed.

In a written agreement with a government ethics agency, the former Georgia governor said he will also step down from positions at the National Grain and Feed Association and the Georgia Agribusiness Council.

“I will not participate personally and substantially in any particular matter in which I know that I have a financial interest directly and predictably affected by the matter,” Perdue said in the agreement.

The agreement is routine for any member of the Cabinet. Senators have been waiting for more than seven weeks for Perdue's letter, which is dated March 7 but was posted on the Office of Government Ethics website just recently.

Donald Trump chose Perdue for the job on Jan. 18, two days before the inauguration, but the formal nomination was only sent to the Senate last week.

A financial disclosure form released by the ethics office shows that Perdue holds substantial assets from agricultural companies, including a grain merchandising company called AGrowStar that is worth between $5 million and $25 million.

The ethics agreement is required by the Ethics in Government Act of 1978, passed after the Watergate scandal.

In the weeks since he was chosen, Perdue has held several meetings with senators on Capitol Hill. Farm-state senators have mostly praised his nomination, including Democrat Heidi Heitkamp of North Dakota, who said she would support him.

Perdue, 70, is a farmer's son who would be the first Southerner in the post in more than two decades. He built businesses in grain trading and trucking before becoming the first Republican governor of Georgia since Reconstruction.

Like Trump, Perdue declined while serving as governor to put his assets in a blind trust, as his immediate predecessors had done. He said then that he did not want to abandon businesses that were still operating. That set the stage for critics to question various land deals and tax breaks and prompted charges of conflict of interest.

While Perdue's nomination is pending, acting Agriculture Deputy Secretary Mike Young is in charge.

RAFI accepting donations to aid in wildfire recovery

The recent wildfires in Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado have caused considerable financial loss and the devastation of livestock, homes and equipment. The Red Angus Foundation Inc. is rising to the occasion to accept and distribute donations that will assist our fellow friends, neighbors and cattlemen in their recovery efforts.

Pasty Krause, fundraiser for RAFI, said that helping aid in recovery is the ultimate goal. “We know some of the ranch families that were affected by the recent outbreak of wildfires lost everything, including their homes,” said Krause. “Hundreds of miles of fence were laid flat. Many ranchers are literally starting from ground zero to rebuild their livelihoods.”

RAFI is a 501(c)(3) charity organization. All donations sent to RAFI designated to fire relief will be channeled directly to qualified recipients in the Red Angus community and to other approved relief organizations that benefit those affected by the fires.

In surveying the damage, the loss and injury to livestock is staggering. Some ranches lost nearly everything, while others lost homes, barns, grazing pastures, equipment and fences. Some of these operations were generations in the making, and the recovery will be a slow, arduous process.

To assist the recovery in the best way possible, Krause encourages those who are able to support this relief measure to donate to RAFI. RAFI is collecting numerous types of donations, including gifts of animals and semen, although financial contributions provide the greatest flexibility.

If you wish to donate fencing materials, contact Krause and she will provide a tax receipt for your contribution. If you wish to gift livestock or semen, RAFI will be arranging online auctions to turn your donation into cash.

“Whatever resources you can donate to help these cattlemen in need is greatly appreciated,” Krause said.

Please mail cash donations via check to RAFI, 4201 N. Interstate 35, Denton, TX 76207. Please write “Fire Relief” in the memo. If you have questions about other contributions call Patsy Krause, RAFI Fundraiser, at 406-599-2852 or email her at patsy@redangus.org.

Guidebook informs grocery shoppers' food choices, checks guilt off the list

Grocery shoppers can save time and take home less guilt if they spend a few hours to learn the truth about their food.

On average, Americans spend over $7,000 per year for food, and nearly a week shopping for it. So understanding food choices is key, according to Michele Payn, author of a newly released aisle-by-aisle grocery guidebook. Her aim? Offer an informed voice of reason within an overly sensationalized food and health arena to help consumers feel better about the food they buy and eat.

Payn's Food Truths from Farm to Table - 25 Surprising Ways to Shop & Eat Without Guilt, a #1 New Release on Amazon www.amazon.com/Food-Truths-Farm-Table-Surprising/dp/1440849978, outlines "25 food truths" - providing a transparent window into today's farming and ranching practices. Each chapter includes a story about food producers and answers questions around major food issues such as organics, animal welfare and sustainability. Fifty-five food, agriculture and health experts contributed to the book, which references 119 research studies.

"During National Nutrition Month and National Ag Day, March 21, it's a great time to grow your understanding of how food is produced, said Payn. "It can lead you to confidently make food choices that are nutritious, a good value and consistent with your own beliefs."

"Understanding the 'real story' about food is a critical issue for every health professional, parent, chef, and essentially anyone buying food," said Marianne Edge Smith, MS, RD, LD, FADA, FAND, past president of the Academy of Nutrition and Dietetics, who reviewed the book. "You will find answers to your most challenging questions around nutrition and health in Food Truths from Farm to Table."

"Smart grocery shopping and healthy eating shouldn't require a science degree," added reviewer Phil Lempert, The Supermarket Guru, and former NBC News Today Show Food

Trends Editor. "If you are looking to shop and eat with less guilt, read this book. Michele's 25 food truths will give you the freedom to enjoy your food again."

Food Truths from Farm to Table author Michele Payn also wrote No More Food Fights! Growing a Productive Farm & Food Conversation. She brings clarity and common sense to the grocery store. Reach her at www.causematters.com.

K-State holds Kansas Junior Swine Producer Day

Approximately 430 participants representing 55 Kansas counties and two Nebraska counties, attended the biennial Kansas Junior Swine Producer Day in Weber Arena.

The program was open to youth, parents, Extension agents, and swine project leaders. Topics included selection, meat science, breeds and ear notching, proper grooming and clipping, nutrition and management, Youth PQA Plus training and certification, daily care, the state nomination process, VFD impacts on show feed, and showmanship.

"Youth events with so many interested in pigs is very fulfilling to help host," said Joel DeRouchev, KSU Animal Science and Industry professor and event organizer.

KPA was a sponsor of the program and also created a Snapchat filter for attendees to use. The filter had 2,406 views and 105 uses.

Ag community bands together for wildfire relief efforts

By Donna Sullivan, Editor
As the farming and ranching community watched the horrors of the southwest Kansas wildfires unfold, the gut-wrenching images became a call to action for many individuals, businesses and organizations. The Kansas Livestock Foundation, Livestock Marketing Association, Kansas Farm Bureau and others began coordinating relief efforts. Many area sale barns have conducted roll-over auctions with cattle donated by individuals, and several producers conducting spring sales donated partial or complete proceeds from designated animals to the effort. According to Kansas Livestock Association, Farmers and Ranchers Livestock in Salina sold a Charolais bull donated by Fink Beef Genetics that brought $12,200 and a heifer pair donated by Norman Fuller sold for $3,600. With other donations, they raised close to $20,000. A steer donated by Neal and Marya Haverkamp sold at Marysville Livestock Auction for 16,038 and they plan to keep a donation jar available for a week or so. Pratt Livestock also held a benefit auction. Holton Livestock sold a steer donated by Kim and Kelly Kirkham of Valley Falls in a roll-over auction for a total of $27,381 and a steer donated by Steve Arndt sold multiple times at Emporia Livestock for total donations of $38,376. Wedel Red Angus accepted fencing supplies and cash donations at their annual sale in Leoti. Springhill Herefords and Alcove Cattle Company, both of Blue Rapids, committed 5% of all bull sales from their On Target Bull Sale and gave customers the opportunity to match or exceed the 5%. $6,900 was raised. The Wide Awake 4-H Club that meets in Blue Rapids also had a table set up at the On Target Bull Sale, which raised $320 for the orphan calf project they partnered on with Grass & Grain, and raised $320. Kratzger Show Goats donated the proceeds from a purebred boar doe and Hinkson Angus Ranch contributed the proceeds from a 3-year-old commercial cow-calf pair from their production sale. The pair brought $2,200 and other donations brought the total to $2,900. Twenty-five percent of the proceeds of two bulls from the McCabe Genetics bull and commercial email sale were designated for wildfire relief, as was money from the sale of an open Angus heifer from Black Velvet Cattle's production sale at Mankato Livestock. Woodbury Farms pledged the proceeds from a registered heifer from their annual bull and female sale, which was held at Overbook Livestock Commission Company, and brought more than $8,000. Flat Iron Angus donated the proceeds from an open registered heifer from their production sale. Sandhill Farms of Haviland donated a registered Hereford bull to be sold during their annual bull and female sale on March 31. The Kansas Angus Association pledged $1,000 to the Kansas Livestock Foundation and the Kansas Junior Angus Association is raising funds for a special project. Many individuals and companies have donated hay for the ranchers affected by the fires, and sometimes that required teamwork and sharing of resources. When Randy Fisher from Garden City wanted to donate hay, he was faced with the challenge of hauling it and called Shawn Tiffany to see if he knew of anyone who had a truck that could be used. When Shawn couldn't locate one, he let them use his. Jason and Justin Brown of JC Cattle Company in Dwight donated the use of their drop deck trailer and Matt Forge provided a driver. When local ranchers got wind of it, more hay was donated until six loads had been delivered. Also donating hay were Todd Britt, Kent and Rose Bacon, Tiffany Cattle Company, Cattle Company and Korby Effland. Cash contributions to the Kansas Livestock Foundation are tax-deductible and can be sent to KLF, 6031 SW 37th Street, Topeka, KS 66614. Editor's note: This is in no way a complete list of all the relief efforts that have been conducted throughout the state, but an effort has been made to recognize as many as possible. If your business or organization has contributed, please email gandgeditor@agpress.com. While we realize none of the efforts were done for the recognition they would receive, it is heartening to hear the stories of how the agriculture community bands together in times of crisis, and Grass & Grain would like to share as many as possible.

Manhattan Commission Company held a rollover auction Friday, March 24, selling a Simm/Angus open replacement heifer donated by River Creek Farms, Manhattan, and a BWF replacement heifer donated by Garrett and Gary Preedy, Waverly. A pedal tractor donated by KanEquip in Wamego was also auctioned off. As of Friday afternoon, total proceeds were at $23,875.00, with donations still coming in.

Last Friday, River Valley District 4-H members presented a check to Joe Ebert of Fourth and Pomeroy (Key Feeds) to buy feed for the orphan calves that are being fostered by 4-H families in Meade County. Also partnering with Grass & Grain on the project were Riley County 4-H and the Wide Awake 4-H Club from Marshall County. Key Feeds sold the feed for the project at cost and delivered it for free. In all, enough money was raised for 14 pallets of feed and River Valley District had additional money that was sent down for medication or other needed supplies for the calves. Pictured are, front row: 4-H members Jenna Fickes and Trey Collins. Back row: Grass & Grain editor Donna Sullivan, River Valley District Extension Director John Forshee, Joe Ebert, Fourth and Pomeroy vice president and general manager, 4-H'ers Natalie Vesta and Allison James, RVD 4-H program manager Karen Langvardt, RVD office professional Katrina Sorell and Zita Milligan, Fourth and Pomeroy CFO.
