

Representatives, farm groups react to Mexico trade agreement

On Monday, August 27 U.S. secretary of agriculture Sonny Perdue announced a trade agreement between the United States and Mexico, sending the stock market soaring to a new record high. "The agreement specifically addresses agricultural biotechnology to keep up with 21st Century innovations," Perdue said. "And we mutually pledge to work together with Mexico to reduce trade-distorting policies, increase transparency, and ensure non-discriminatory treatment in grading of agricultural products."

"This is nothing short of a great victory for farmers and ranchers, because locking in our access to Mexican markets is critical to supporting farm income and strengthening rural communities. Mexico has historically been a great customer and partner and we are happy to have this resolved for our

Sen. Pat Roberts, who chairs the Senate ag committee said that while the announcement of a preliminary agreement with Mexico is a "critical first step in the right direction," Congress must also work to finish a bipartisan farm bill that contains programs designed to provide certainty and predictability for ag producers. "I thank President Trump for his work to improve trade relations with one of our top trading partners," Roberts said. "I am eager to learn more of the details of the new U.S.-Mexico trade deal. The value of U.S. agricultural exports to Mexico has increased by 305 percent since NAFTA entered into force; farmers and ranchers need to be able to rely on that important market." Roberts added he hopes the administration will move quickly on securing a beneficial trade deal with Canada

"As I've expressed to the administration on numerous occasions, any agreement that has been in place for decades should be reviewed and modernized, and I am pleased President Trump has reached a preliminary deal with Mexico," commented Sen. Jerry Moran. "Kansas is an export state, and our ability to make a living is directly tied to our ability to export the goods we grow and manufacture. This initial agreement between the United States and Mexico is a needed step in beginning to inject certainty back into our trade policies; still, we must re-engage Canada – the top export market for Kansas in 2017 – to reach a trilateral consensus and deescalate ongoing tariff disputes worldwide to provide our nation's producers with a larger degree of market expectations and stability. I will continue to engage the administration to make certain the voices of Kansas farmers, ranchers and manufacturers are being heard in delibera-

Rep. Roger Marshall said the deal updates the NAFTA agreement so that it meets the demands of the 21st-century global economy. "The days of taking advantage of our American businesses and producers are over," he said, adding that with this agreement, Kansas producers will be treated more fairly as it addresses trade-distorting policies on agriculture goods and promotes complete transparency between the two countries.

Rep. Ron Estes called the agreement "great news for Kansas farmers and manufacturers," and reiterated the need for the agreement, which was more than twenty years old, to be modernized. "Today's agreement signals a major breakthrough in these efforts and includes an agreement by Mexico to purchase more agriculture products from the U.S. I will work to ensure Kansas products are included in that process and continue urging the administration to open more markets through free and fair trade. There is still a lot of work to do, but this is great news for our state and country."

Farm groups were quick to voice support for the agreement, but most stressed the importance of engaging Canada and continuing to work on the trilateral agreement.

National Corn Growers Association president Kevin Skunes said in a statement following the announcement, "NAFTA has been an unequivocal success story for American agriculture, dramatically expanding market access for all parties, integrating supply chains and providing economic opportunity to farmers and rural communities. Mexico is the largest export market for U.S. corn farmers and we are pleased the United States and Mexico are reaffirming mutual commitment to this important relationship. However, the trilateral relationship is important, and we urge President Trump to reconsider terminating the underlying agreement until full trilateral negotiations have been concluded and a new agreement is secured. This new agreement has the potential to deliver the economic certainty prematurely terminating the existing agreement would only undermine that potential."

American Soybean Association (ASA) president John Heisdorffer said, "We need NAFTA and new free trade agreements to build and ensure the certainty of our markets for soy and livestock product exports. Approval of NAFTA would be a big step in the right direction for us, with the uncertainty and market loss resulting from China's tariff on U.S. soybeans. We are hopeful that a new NAFTA agreement will set the tone for more trade agreements to come."

U.S. Wheat Associates (USW) chairman Chris Kolstad believes the breakthrough in NAFTA negotiations with Mexico and the announcement that the trade dispute aid package for U.S. agriculture includes new funding for export market development are welcome news for U.S. wheat growers. "We are glad to see progress toward a renegotiated NAFTA that builds on the opportunities the existing agreement opened with Mexico's wheat importing flour millers," he said. "We hope it spurs negotiations with Canada to resolve outstanding issues like its discriminatory wheat grading law. The new market development program will help us plan new activities that will begin repairing the cracks in our crucial, long-term trade relationships with Mexico and other countries. We appreciate that the Trump administration supports the need for additional market development in this unique trade environment." Kolstad said U.S. Wheat Associates agrees with the National Association of Wheat Growers (NAWG) that while it is important to hold China and other countries accountable for unfair trade practices, policies that invited retaliation and created the need to provide federal aid to farmers are not the best course.

"Like NAWG, we believe the long-term solution is to end the trade war and move on to negotiating new trade deals that work for farmers and for our overseas customers," Kolstad said.

Leveraging forages for livestock, soil health focus of field day

Producers and researchers will share experiences integrating grazed forages into dryland crop rotations at a field day in Bird City on Sept. 13. The program will begin at 9 a.m. at the American Legion with short presentations and then move to view fields and demonstrations. Lunch and a producer panel will take place back at the Legion.

"In Northwest Kansas, producers are trying to understand the tradeoffs of water use that comes with keeping the soil covered with forages during typical fallow periods and subsequent crop yields," says Sandy Johnson, K-State Extension beef specialist.

Can using forages for livestock improve or maintain the total operation's bottom line while also improving soil health? That is the question being addressed by a Conservation Innovation Grant from Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) that has K-State Research & Extension, Colorado State University and area producers working together to collect data and answer.

Meagan Schipanski, Colorado State University assistant professor of agroecology and lead investigator, will share what has been learned about the potential of grazing cover crops to balance economic and soil health

A producer panel including Mike Neff, Matt Wilson, and Nathan and Josh Sowers, all producer cooperators on the grant, will share lessons learned from managing cover crops for grazing. Field tours at Matt Wilson's farm just north of Bird City will demonstrate different approaches to utilizing cover crops as forages and intercrops. Water infiltration demonstrations will be provided by NRCS.

K-State Research and Extension personnel will highlight key points of cover crop selection for grazing, considerations when using forages for livestock and share results of forage crops planted after wheat including the effects on soil moisture and farm economics from field trials near Garden City.

The field day is free and begins at 9 a.m. at the American Legion, 113 W 4th St, Bird City. Lunch is provided by GreenCover Seed and the program will conclude by 1:30 p.m.

Please RSVP for lunch to the K-State Sunflower District - St. Francis Office at 785-332-3171 or online at www.sunflower.ksu.edu/agronomy by Sept. 7.

Kansas NRCS welcomes new state conservationist

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) in Kansas welcomes new state conservationist Karen A. Woodrich. She will oversee 95 local service centers, four area offices, one plant materials center, and 240 employees who work directly with farmers and landowners.

Woodrich brings a background of diverse experience to the Kansas natural resources conservation partnership. Karen began her career with NRCS in Kalamazoo, Michigan as a soil conservationist in 1998. She has worked in various technical and managerial positions including assistant state conservationist for field operations in Iowa; assistant state conservationist for operations in Illinois; and acting state conservationist in Vermont. Prior to coming to Kansas, she served as state conservationist in Kentucky since 2011.

In 2014, Karen served as the interim central regional conservationist in Washington D.C. and in 2017, she served as a senior policy advisor to the acting deputy undersecretary of the newly formed Farm Production and Conservation (FPAC) Mission Area at USDA in Washington D.C.

She serves as the chair of the NRCS Chief's Advisory Committee, on the USDA Board of Directors for the National Water Quality (NWQI) and Mississippi River Basin (MRBI) Initiatives, and is engaged with several national conservation partnership committees. Karen has been accepted into the Federal Executive Institute Training program for Senior Government Executives.

"I am honored to be the new state conservationist in Kansas," said Woodrich. "I look forward to meeting and working with our customers, partners, and staff in this position to learn about the many great things Kansas is already doing to help conserve natural resources and to continue to move the state forward in agricultural conservation."

She is a north-central Wisconsin native and was raised on a dairy farm and Christmas tree farm. Woodrich graduated from the University of Wisconsin with a bachelor's degree in soil science. Karen and her husband are looking forward to fishing, raising a few cattle, a few chickens, and tending to vegetable and flower gardens, while exploring the beautiful landscape of Kansas.

Haydon Schaaf, Southwind District team win Kansas 4-H Livestock Sweepstakes; top Kansas judging teams now head for nationals

Kansas 4-H'er Haydon Schaaf and the Southwind District team took top honors at the 2018 Kansas 4-H Livestock Sweepstakes, held Aug. 18-19.

Approximately 300 Kansas 4-H members from 56 counties participated in this year's contest, which is hosted by the K-State Department of Animal Sciences and Industry.

Throughout the weekend, 4-H members participated in the state livestock judging contest, meat judging contest, livestock skillathon and livestock quiz bowl. Those who participated in all three activities (livestock and meat judging and skillathon) were entered in the Kansas 4-H Livestock Sweepstakes.

Schaaf, who is from the Southwind District, was named the 2018 Kansas 4-H Livestock Sweepstakes high individual.

Others in the top ten were:

2nd – Tessa Beeman, Greenwood County.

3rd – Cord Dodson, Wildcat District.

4th - Gavin Fry, Southwind District.

5th – Brody Nemecek, Southwind District.

6th - Kinsey Harlan, Greenwood County.

7th - Jade Edwards, Greenwood County.

8th – Clay Brillhart, Southwind District.

9th – Hannah Ballard, Greenwood County.

10th - Eva Hinrichsen,

Pottawatomie County.

Southwind District No. 2 won the livestock sweepstakes champion team award with the best combined team performance in livestock judging, livestock skillathon, livestock quiz bowl and meat judging. Teams in the top five included: Wildcat District No. 1, second; Southwind District No. 1, third; Sunflower District No. 1, fourth; and Pottawatomie County, fifth.

Individual and team

placings are posted to the Kansas State Youth Livestock Program website <http://bit.ly/2vUYV3H> and the Judging Card website www.judgingcard.com.

The team champions for the meat judging, livestock skillathon and livestock quiz bowl will represent Kansas at their respective national 4-H contest, all of which will occur later this fall.

Again this year, Kansas will be represented by an all-star team at the national 4-H livestock judging contest in Louisville. Based on their performance in the state livestock judging contest, a talented group of 16 young people were selected to advance to the team selection process. This will include a series of livestock evaluation workshops and opportunities provided by the K-State Livestock Judging Team.

The Kansas 4-H Livestock Sweepstakes program is also sponsored by the Kansas Pork Association, Kansas Beef Council, AgTech, Farm Talk, Kansas State University College of Agriculture, Frontier Farm Credit, Lyons Ranch and Konz Veterinary Clinic.

Kansas Corn Growers disappointed with penny from USDA Trade Aid

USDA's trade aid package is a disappointment to corn farmers, according to Kansas Corn Growers Association president Ken McCauley, White Cloud. McCauley commented on the one-cent-per-bushel allocation for corn in the Market Facilitation Program announced by USDA last Monday.

"I can't say 'thanks for nothing' but one cent per bushel is close to nothing. In fact, this payment only applies to half of your crop so in reality, that's a half-cent per bushel at this point. A half-cent is no relief from the market destruction we've seen for corn."

Earlier this summer, Kansas Corn leaders told EPA they were "mad as hell" about the more than 2 billion gallons of ethanol waivers handed out to oil refiners, while the agency continues to drag its feet on allowing year-round market access for E15 fuel.

"As a corn farmer, I'm starting to feel picked on by the administration. We've had to fight EPA on ethanol waivers and are seeing no movement in allowing year-round E15 sales," McCauley said. "Now, even though National Corn Growers showed USDA that corn farmers have seen a 44-cent-per-bushel loss due to trade issues, we're getting a half a penny."

When the creation of USDA's Market Facilitation Program was first announced, NCGA commissioned an economic impact analysis from the tariffs on corn farmers and program options for the Market Facilitation Program by Dr. Gary Schnitkey at the University of Illinois. The comprehensive analysis showed a loss of 44 cents per bushel to corn farmers. NCGA shared this analysis with USDA and OMB officials and has aggressively advocated for corn farmers to help the federal officials understand the economic impact to corn prices.

"Corn growers have been proactively working with the administration in many areas, but so far, we have ended up on the short end of the stick," McCauley said. "It's time that corn growers got a win. If the administration would follow up on its promise to allow year-round market access for E15 fuel, that would help corn demand. We simply need market access, for ethanol and for exports."

What little aid is offered to corn will be based on 2018 production, slighting those growers who have been hurt by export market loss plus crop loss due to weather.

"Those folks are suffering a double whammy of low crop production, and lower crop prices due to trade disruption. KCGA CEO Greg Krissek said. "But regardless of where you grow corn, or what kind of crop you produced, the one-cent-bushel payment on half your crop doesn't provide relief."

Although Kansas Corn is disappointed in the rate for corn in the program, one positive is the creation of a Agricultural Trade Program which offers $200 million for overseas market development.

"This will really bolster our efforts to build foreign markets and is needed," McCauley said. "Groups like U.S. Grains Council and U.S. Meat Export Federation are poised to seek out those replacement markets that are needed by agricultural producers. We'd rather have markets than government relief, but we got neither."

vention & Expo.

Beginning Monday, Aug. 27, customers could purchase a limited edition FFA convention-themed shirt for $12.99 (plus tax) at Tractor Supply stores nationwide. Net proceeds from the shirt sale benefit the National FFA platform Living to Serve and Alumni Legacy Grants.

This year the annual fundraiser shirt features the 2018 FFA Convention theme "Just One." According to the National FFA Officer Team, the theme was chosen to recognize the importance of each FFA member and each step they take toward growth—a reflection of the work completed by its members and the organization's vision of developing leaders, building communities and strengthening agriculture.

"Both the Tractor Supply team and our customers are dedicated to investing in the future of agriculture," said Christi Korzekwa, senior vice president of marketing at Tractor Supply. "This annual fundraiser, and the FFA initiatives it supports, provides an opportunity to reinforce our commitment to the future leaders of the industry and the communities we proudly serve."

More than 380 Living to Serve projects in 45 states were funded since last year alone. The initiative provides opportunities for FFA chapters to seek funding to support four types of service projects: community safety; hunger, health and nutrition; environmental responsibility; and community engagements.

Alumni Legacy Grants are fulfilled with the pur-

Bison stampede into the Flint Hills Discovery Center

Ancient. Massive. Wild. The North American bison is a species whose story stretches from Plains Indian hunters to entrepreneurial industrialists to dedicated conservationists to today's producers and enthusiasts. The exhibit, opening to the public on Saturday, September 15, will follow this great American icon through interactive experiences that combine history, artifacts, and hands-on activities at the Flint Hills Discovery Center (FHDC).

Bison celebrates the history and significance of this North American mammal, and highlights the importance of growing the number of local FFA alumni chapters, improving the quality of existing chapters and providing more opportunities for partnership between FFA chapters and chapters for alumni and supporters. Since 2017, more than 60 Alumni Legacy Grants have been awarded to alumni and supporters chapters located in states across the nation.

In 2017, Tractor Supply's annual shirt fundraiser generated more than $215,000 for the National FFA Foundation, which inspires young adults to become active leaders in their communities through participation in agricultural programs and initiatives.

"Living to Serve and Alumni Legacy Grants are two vital platforms to our organization and our mission," said Mark Poeschl, CEO of the National FFA Organization and the National FFA Foundation. "Through this partnership with Tractor Supply Company, we are able to empower more FFA members with opportunities to make a difference in their communities."

In addition to in-store availability, the shirts will be available at the 91st National FFA Convention & Expo, held Oct. 24-27 in Indianapolis, to benefit "Give the Gift of Blue," a National FFA program that awards personalized FFA corduroy jackets — articles of faith, honor and pride — to hard-working FFA youth members with financial hardships.

For more information on the shirt fundraiser, call your local store or visit www.tractorsupply.com/FFA.

Kansas State University and Topcon sign research agreement, start projects

Kansas State University and Topcon Agriculture are collaborating to develop tools and systems to advance precision agriculture and support farmers.

By working with the university, Topcon Agriculture aims to develop product concepts through gathering requirements, drafting specifications and conducting market research, as well as to test products in the lab, on the university farm and around the state using K-State Research and Extension and Agricultural Experiment Station facilities.

“The strategic advantage of using our combined resources for product development and testing is paramount as Topcon Agriculture is squarely focused on creating value for farmers, dealers and original equipment manufacturers. We encourage farmers to ‘Grow without Limits,’ said Brian Sorbe, vice president of sales and marketing for Topcon Agriculture.

“Topcon is globally taking an increasing tactical interest in university partnerships, similar to this great step with K-State. We believe that the intersection between sensors, data and action are within our grasp, and progressive universities like K-State are in a unique position to help us achieve this,”

said Fabio Isaia, CEO of Topcon Agriculture. “For example, we see K-State as one of the most important partners of TAP, our ag platform, and we look forward to developing together value-added services for our customers.”

“Our facilities and research strengths are an excellent fit for Topcon’s business,” said Ernie Minton, interim dean of the College of Agriculture and director of K-State Research and Extension.

Minton said researchers are interested in working with the company because of its broad, interdisciplinary approach and involvement in many areas that are highly relevant to Kansas producers.

“Partnership with Top-

con Agriculture demonstrates our commitment to keeping Kansas producers up to date,” Minton said. “Precision agriculture offers new tools that will help farmers prosper as they work to feed the world’s growing population.”

Kansas State University emphasizes industry collaboration and has seen an 80 percent increase in the number of industry-funded projects in the last five years. The university has successfully pursued master research and service agreements with a number of industry partners.

“Partnership with Topcon Agriculture aligns with our strategy to engage in collaborative research with industry,” said

Peter Dorhout, the university’s vice president for research. “We are committed to strategic, enduring alliances to ensure that some of our applied research results in technology transfer and real-world applications boost the Kansas economy.”

“The research collaborations established with Topcon are the beginning of a mutually beneficial partnership, and we look forward to expanding the relationship to advance innovation in precision agriculture in Kansas and beyond,” said Rebecca Robinson, director of economic development at the Kansas State University Institute for Commercialization.
