

Newly formed program up and running

The new United Sorghum Checkoff Program has a plate full of plans to improve grain sorghum production and profitability. But first on its agenda is letting sorghum growers know the checkoff exists.

"Some growers have looked at the budget and asked why we have communications in there already," said Billy Bob Brown, one of 13 members of the USCP board of directors and a sorghum, cotton and corn grower from Panhandle, Texas. "Communications, at this point, is really about education. We need to let growers know that we're here and what we're doing."

The national sorghum checkoff, which was approved by USDA in July 2008, is assessed as a percentage of the crop's value at the first point of sale. Grain is assessed a 0.6 percent fee, which, depending on crop price, has been between 1 cent and 2 cents per bushel. Forage sorghum is assessed at 0.35 percent of value at the feedlot or other sale point. USCP officials say that generated some $6.25 million in 2008, with an expectation of close to $7 million for 2009.

Those fees have, to date, funded about $1.25 million in research projects on sorghum issues, and have put another $750,000 into market development efforts, both domestically and internationally, according to USCP materials.

Key research initiatives include supporting weed control research, developing better cold tolerance and improving drought resistance, Brown said.

"The weed control issue is really important in terms of growers being able to grow the amount of grain sorghum they want to," Brown said. Controlling grasses, especially wild relatives of the crop and off-types found in the planted seed itself has long been an issue in the crop. Developing herbicides for grain sorghum has typically been only of secondary interest to chemical companies.

Better drought resistance also is critical. "Much of the grain sorghum is grown in arid areas, we have sorghum because it is the crop that can be grown there. Improving water usage and having a crop that is even more productive under those conditions is important to keeping our producers profitable," Brown said.

He said it is also important for sorghum growers to pick up the tab in supporting such research. "There's not a lot of interest in it," from major seed companies, which are focused on corn, soybeans, and just lately, wheat, in terms of research effort.

Research also is being directed at working with animal nutritionists to learn more about how to use grain and forage sorghum in feed rations, and in developing sorghum types better suited for ethanol production.

"We don't have a good number yet of how many bushels of grain sorghum are going into ethanol plants," said Sue Ann Claudon, compliance director for USCP. "Many plants are listed as 100 percent corn, but we know there is sorghum going into some of those, in addition to plants that mainly use sorghum."

The program will spend $750,000 on market development efforts, focused on regrowing sorghum exports to Mexico, plus efforts focused on Japan, Spain and France. Mexico has been the largest buyer of U.S. grain sorghum, though sales lessened after that country approved the importation of genetically engineered corn.

A first step in marketing was to provide funding for a grain sorghum-specific market development position within the U.S. Grains Council.

There are 24 states contributing to the checkoff program, with 2008-crop funds providing some $6.25 million dollars. A referendum, which is required by USDA to give continued status to the checkoff, is planned for early 2011.

Champion Jersey at the Riley County Fair was an entry shown by Sarah Featherstone. She was also the top junior showman.

A larger run of cattle for our sale Friday, August 14 found very good interest from a good attendance of local and out of state buyers. Light steer and heifer calves were in short supply and were selling at stronger prices with a very good demand. Stocker feeder steers up to 750 lbs. and heifers up to 650 lbs. were also selling at strong prices with a good demand. Heavier cattle were selling on a lower trend especially the cattle carrying extra flesh and fill. Cull cows and bulls sold at fully steady prices on a light test.

Kansas Hay Market Report

Ground alfalfa movement: Southwest/South Central Tonnage: 11,439/4,250 Last week: 11,677/3,543 Last year: 11,754/4,397

Hay trade slow. Demand moderate for dairy and stock cow alfalfa, alfalfa pellets, grinding alfalfa and grass hay. Good movement of alfalfa continues to the drought areas of Texas and to supplement grass hay supplies in Oklahoma. A plentiful supply of grinding quality alfalfa, slow movement and willing sellers combined are putting pressure on the market. A Tour of the Prairie Fire bio-energy pellet plant, Sharp Brothers Seed plots and Royal Dairy is being planned by the Kansas Forage and Grassland Council on Aug. 26 for more information call 620 431-1530.

If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange www.kfb.org/hayandpasture/default.htm

Experts give insight into preventing heat stress in cattle

Cattle lack the ability to sweat, so it is critical that steps be taken to reduce heat stress before conditions become dangerous. High day-time temperature by itself rarely causes problems — it is the combination of humidity with heat that creates the maximum heat load on cattle. These primary factors are compounded by secondary environmental factors, including multi-day duration of high temperatures, lack of night time cooling, lack of shade, lack of cloud cover, lack of wind, lack of air movement within pens, or grazing endophyte-infested fescue pastures. Combined with animal-related factors such as dark hides, heavy body weights, or advanced pregnancy, the situation can rapidly become deadly.

Producers should watch for signs of heat-related distress during hot humid weather, including off feed, standing with their head over the water source, panting, excessive salivation, or open-mouth breathing. Postponing any gathering or handling procedures until after the critical heat period passes, or working cattle so that all handling is completed by mid-morning, are critical management strategies. Ready access to abundant cold water is essential. Access to shade and the ability to move away from structures that reduce air flow are also tools to consider. Sprinklers that provide enough cold water can also be used, but will only add to the humidity side of the heat stress problem if they do not provide enough large drops of water to wet the cattle's skin thoroughly.

Researchers at the University of Nebraska have developed a Temperature-Humidity Index that will help producers anticipate when heat stress will become a problem (see Livestock Weather Hazard Guide). When there is no day time wind and/or night time temperatures do not drop below 75°, and conditions reach an index score of 75, producers should be on the alert for heat stress problems. When the index reaches 79, the danger point has been reached. When the index reaches 84, emergency conditions exist. If the index stays above 84 for 3 days in a row, death losses usually start to occur, especially if the wind suddenly stops blowing.

Panting scores probably give the best visual method to estimate the severity of heat stress on cattle: 80-120 breaths/minute = moderate; 120-160 = danger; and over 160 = emergency. If signs of moderate heat stress are seen, producers may have a very short time to provide a mechanism for cooling the cattle before the situation becomes life-threatening. Meat Hall of Fame inductees announced

The inaugural class of the newly formed Meat Industry Hall of Fame includes 21 scientists, executives, marketers and beef producers. Founders said the Hall of Fame is dedicated to honoring distinguished individuals in the meat, poultry and livestock business; preserving the history of 150 years of meat industry progress; and educating the consuming public about the contributions of meat industry leadership.

Members were elected by a board of trustees, comprised of individuals with expertise and years of meat industry service. Meat Industry Hall of Fame Executive Director and Co-Founder Dan Murphy said the 2009 honorees are credited with fostering much of the change, progress and success of the industry.

The 2009 class includes: Dell Allen, former Kansas State University professor and vice president for Cargill Meat Solutions; Paul Engler, founder, Cactus Feeders; Mel Coleman, founder, Coleman Natural Meats; Louis “Mick” Colvin, chief executive officer (CEO), Certified Angus Beef; Phillip Seng, president and CEO, U.S. Meat Export Federation; Temple Grandin, professor of animal science, Colorado State University; Rosemary Mucklow, former executive director, National Meat Association; Robert Peterson, former chairman, IBP; Richard Knowlton, former chairman, president and CEO, Hormel Foods; Russell Cross, professor and administrator, Texas A&M University; Richard Lyng, former U.S. secretary of agriculture and American Meat Institute chairman; Gary Smith, professor, Colorado State University; Don Tyson, former senior chairman, Tyson Foods, Frank Perdue, former chairman, Perdue Farms; Kenneth Monfort, former chairman and CEO, Monfort, Inc.; Joseph Luter III, former chairman and CEO, Smithfield Foods, Donald Houston, former administrator, Food Safety and Inspection Service; Earl Olsen, former chairman, Jennie-O Turkey Company; Jimmy Dean, founder, Jimmy Dean Sausage Company; Lawrence Starr, former CEO, Koch Equipment; and Ray Townsend, founder and former chairman, Townsend Engineering.

Customer service is critical to long-term market share

America’s wheat farmers are the world leaders in producing high-quality, affordable wheat. Vince Peterson, vice president of overseas operations for U.S. Wheat Associates asserts that his organization works non-stop to ensure U.S.-grown wheat maintains a competitive edge over that of other countries.

Peterson, who addressed the audience at the Kansas Wheat Conference in Wichita in July, says U.S. farmers grow the world’s best wheat, regardless of classification. Hard Red Winter and Hard White Winter wheat classes are the two most common in Kansas.

“U.S. wheat rises above a bulk commodity, frankly. In all classes of wheat, it is known for high quality. It is known for its usefulness of purpose. It fits into a class that rises above Russian or Ukraine wheat, or any low level common denominator of wheat,” Peterson says.

U.S. Wheat Associates is a grower-funded organization that provides assistance to buyers, millers, processors and government officials worldwide — all of whom are interested in buying and using U.S. grown wheat. Our nation’s status as the world leader in wheat production, coupled with U.S. Wheat’s expertise, has given the United States a competitive edge, even in politically volatile regions such as the Middle East, where we enjoy a 25% market share.

The Middle East countries consume more wheat than any other region in the world. Peterson adds that the U.S. is poised for export growth in another key region.

“If you look at the U.S. down through Central America, Mexico and South America, we have an advantage in logistics and price. And they have a preference for our wheat. Peru and Colombia are the guts of a lot of effort and frankly, we should be there,” he says. While U.S. wheat stands alone as the go-to market for wheat, however, the competition for wheat exports is stiff.

The best Argentine wheat is on par with average U.S. Hard Red Winter; while the best Russian wheat, despite lower protein and gluten characteristics than that of the U.S., is competitively priced.

“Kazakhstan has high-quality Spring Wheat, but the country is land-locked. It is very expensive to get wheat out of there, so most of it is consumed within the former Soviet Union and surrounding countries,” Peterson says. The continued increase in wheat quality coming from competing countries, therefore, reemphasizes the importance of an organization like U.S. Wheat Associates.

“World consumption for wheat is rising all the time. What we need to do is out-compete our competitors. We have to have a better product and we’ve made great strides in that. We must continue to offer better service after the sale, and provide technical service, which is one thing we do that no one else does,” he explains. “That’s the role of U.S. Wheat. We have 16 offices that span the globe and we really are at it 24 hours a day, nearly every day of the week in some corner of the world.”

Power Cards

By Steve Suther

If you make a living on a ranch, that's a success. Just living on a ranch is a success. Heck, just taking one more breath can be a victory.

Everybody is a winner, at least in some small way. Success does not always manifest itself with visual clues, but you often see the trappings of new equipment, well-cared-for property and cattle that could win a stock show. Perhaps they did win.

Those things mean success in at least a material way, and they imply things are going well.

It's a very broad term, though. Everyone has personal definitions that may change over time, yet you can always succeed in helping each other where there is common ground.

Winning starts with an attitude and priority-defining goals. The highly organized have written mission statements; in any case, you know who you are and what you stand for.

Organizations, interest groups, neighbors and the media provide influence. That's a great help when the communication they foster adds focus and insight, logic and how-to-do-it advice.

Without the exchange of ideas, you can plod along or even race toward apparent failure based on questionable priorities – or an observer's off-target assumptions. Maybe what looks wrong was the result of your careful planning and execution, outside of the box. Let people know what you're up to, your successes and not-yet successes.

Challenges make up a big part of ranching, with weather, markets and disease dealing the cards you must play while other urgent but unrelated challenges vie for your attention. Who has time to do everything right?

Success takes planning. Knowing what you stand for and where you are going is a key to making quick decisions that remain on target. But it helps to know others have made similar decisions with known results that spell success.

The inspiration can be divine, as in the Christian key-chain slogan that reminds believers to ask WWJD. For more secular challenges, the inspiration can come from "success stories," such as magazine articles about producers like you who have traveled the same path.

In the world of special education, the concept of "Power Cards" builds on a child's ability to identify with a hero who faces and overcomes everyday challenges. When the child encounters those challenges, a teacher or parent shows them a Power Card. Results are encouraging and sometimes amazing.

Ranchers have triumphed over blizzards and drought, solved health problems at weaning and bred better cattle to please feeders, packers and consumers so that their cattle command top bids. You may not have all of those challenges under control yet, but your focused effort can inspire.

Many successful ranchers question their status as role model and balk at being seen as anybody's hero. But producers learn from each other much more readily than from instruction manuals or directions from a technical expert. The neighbors' success points to greater potential on your side of the fence because it's the result of their having applied those how-to concepts.

From print publications to broadcast media and the Internet's World Wide Web, the opportunities to share have grown even as the number of producers has declined. That means the producer "community" should be getting more close-knit, more able and willing to help each other. You may be somebody's Power Card.

Next time in Black Ink @ Miranda Reiman will look at what comes after weaning. Questions? Call toll-free at 877-241-0717 or e-mail steve@certifiedangusbeef.com.

'Signs' not typically accurate weather forecasters, says Knapp

It may be human nature to look for signs of what the weather will be like in the upcoming season. But looking to folklore is not usually an accurate way to predict the weather, according to State of Kansas Climatologist Mary Knapp.

"Somehow winter has ended up with the most related folklore such as 'When the woolly bears' coats are black, we're going to have a hard winter' or 'if the squirrels are burying lots of nuts, we'll have a hard winter,'" said Knapp, who oversees the Kansas Weather Data Library based in Kansas State University Research and Extension. "Then there's 'You can judge how soon winter will arrive by when cows get their winter coat,' or, my personal favorite, 'When the surprise lilies start to fade, the first frost is in 60 days.'" Such predictions are sometimes right, Knapp said, but science has found that they're just as likely to be wrong, because all they reflect is what's happening right now. "If the squirrels are burying a lot of nuts this year, that's because we've having a really good nut crop," she said.

Information about Kansas weather is available on the Weather Data Library website: <http://www.ksre.ksu.edu/wdl/>.

"Weather Wonders" audio reports are available on the K-State Research and Extension/Kansas Radio Network site at <http://www.ksre.ksu.edu/radio/>.

Limousin releases EPDs from multibreed evaluation

Expected progeny differences (EPDs) from the fall 2009 international Limousin genetic evaluation now are available through various features of the North American Limousin Foundation (NALF) website (www.nalf.org). Pedigree and performance records for more than 2 million Limousin-based cattle in the United States and Canada underpin the latest sire summary, which includes more than 1,800 bulls.

That is the third semianual analysis for which Angus Genetics Inc. (AGI) has calculated the Limousin breed's EPDs and accuracies for birth, weaning and yearling weights; milking ability; and scrotal circumference.

"Working with AGI offers some distinct advantages, especially for breeders and commercial users of Lim-Flex® genetics," said Lauren Hyde, Ph.D., director of performance programs for NALF. "The improved hereditary ties to Angus seedstock make genetic predictions for Lim-Flex animals the most timely and reliable of any for Angus-influenced hybrid seedstock."

During its 40-year history in North America, upgrading of Limousin breed composition chiefly has occurred from Angus-based animals, Hyde added; therefore, more accurate accounting for past and present-day Angus genetics also enhances predictions for purebred and fullblood Limousin animals.

"No other multibreed genetic evaluation in the world more thoroughly incorporates performance information from two populations of animals as does AGI's work for NALF," she said.

In addition to EPDs for 13 economically relevant traits, NALF's evaluation includes its 4-year-old Mainstream Terminal Index ($MTI), which simplifies mating decisions by ranking animals for expected net economic merit through simultaneous consideration of many traits. $MTI combines information about calf survival, weaning and yearling weights, average daily gain (ADG) in the feedyard, feed intake, dressing percentage, yield grade, and marbling.

"The EPDs and index predict genetic rankings among animals, and they are the most accurate predictors of genetic merit," Hyde explained. "Our genetic evaluation provides Limousin breeders and their commercial customers with helpful selection tools for genetic improvement."

Tools on the NALF website that interface with the genetic evaluation include the Sire Selector, pedigree and EPD lookup, and the Limousin Exchange's Bull Listing Service and Females for Sale components. The site's "Genetic Evaluation" section includes the latest EPD statistics, percentiles and trends; sire-summary qualifications; general-sire listing; proven and young trait leaders; and downloadable sire summary.

The fall edition also includes the breed's list of Focus Dams, which are females with proven reproductive performance and producing ability.

Nebraska tractor collector strives for original look

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP) — Like Adams County Fair-Fest entertainer Rodney Atkins, farmer Steve Plambeck of Kenesaw has friends with tractors. Plambeck, 36, has been collecting tractors since before it was cool to do so. He and his father, Duane, who died in 1994, amassed a handsome collection of about 30 tractors through the years, many of which have since been sold and replaced by even rarer models. His current collection, which is still about 30 tractors strong, is almost exclusively composed of John Deere tractors, though a few sentimental favorites have been added to the fleet over the years.

He stores his carefully preserved collection, which includes about a dozen fully restored tractors and others in various stages of restoration, in a warehouse about a mile and a half west of the family farm.

"I've been into this hobby since I was 3 years old," he said during a recent interview in the Activities Center at Adams County Fairgrounds.

"I didn't have any brothers or sisters, so I was with my dad a lot, and this was something we were into."

His exhibit at this year's county fair was one of his prized tractors: a 1959 John Deere 730 diesel electric start high crop model. Purchased in Mexico in 2004, the import model tractor took plenty of elbow grease to restore.

"That tractor took me quite a while longer than some," he said. "That one's probably got close to three years of work in it. It was the most wore out tractor I've ever worked on."

"A friend of mine found this one in a salvage yard in Mexico. As we tore it down, it was just worn out from one end to the other. It was a mess, but it turned out pretty good."

Plambeck counts on friends from around the country to help him find potential buys. His searches take him from coast to coast each winter, with varying levels of success.

Because the hobby has become so popular in recent years, he has had little problem finding tractors of interest in trade magazines, auctions and Web sites.

Finding them at affordable prices is another matter altogether. "They can be costly," he said. "I'm not trying to put out huge dollars for them. I've had to spend for a few that have been kind of costly, but you go around and buy them from different people as reasonably as you can."

Though his most valuable and favorite tractors are usually crop or orchard models, Plambeck's sentimental favorite is an International tractor he purchased about 10 years ago from a neighbor. It was the first new tractor ever owned by his father and had been on his want list for some time.

"I always told that guy, 'If you ever want to sell it,' and he told me one day they were going to have an auction," he said. "I went down there, bought it, and drove it home."

He takes deliberate steps to be sure his restorations are accurate, relying on stock photos of tractors he's collected for visual aid. His aim is to use genuine brand-name parts whenever possible.

"Originality is my top priority," he said.

Yard & Garden Tips

By Gregg Eyestone

Wanted: Extension Master Gardeners

Riley County Extension Master Gardeners assist with many gardening educational projects in the community. They organize the area garden tour, assist with the garden show, work with the butterfly garden at the Sunset Zoo, are involved with area fourth graders in their salad gardens, develop educational materials such as the city park rose garden and much more.

To get involved in the program, you need to go through the training. It will begin on September 4th. Master Gardener trainees go through a series of classroom information on gardening. This basic training covers botany, fruit and vegetable gardening, flower gardening, soils, insects and diseases, landscaping and more. During and following this training, the trainee gives back by assisting our in sharing their gained knowledge and abilities through the various projects.

The participant is encouraged to attend all of the classroom sessions. They are offered on Fridays only, beginning September 4th through November 13th. Class is from 9 am to 4 pm. One subject will be discussed in the morning with a new one in the afternoon. There is a cost of $100 for materials to support the training.

You don't really need to know anything about gardening to become an Extension Master Gardener. The successful Master Gardener has an interest in learning about horticulture, and just as important, the willingness to get involved in the community. The requirement of the program is to give a minimum of 40 hours helping the community.

If interested, you will need to fill out an application. It is available from the office or on our website at www.riley.ksu.edu. Give me a call if you would like some more information at 785-537-6350. Since the first class held in the fall of 1988, more than 250 persons have completed the training to become Master Gardeners of Riley County. Several of these Master Gardeners have come from the surrounding counties. There is usually room to include others besides Riley County residents as long as they volunteer in the Riley County community.

If you would like additional information on the Master Gardener Program or on a horticulture topic, please contact Gregg Eyestone at the Riley County office of K-State Research and Extension. Gregg may be contacted by calling 537-6350 or stopping by 110 Courthouse Plaza in Manhattan or e-mail: geyeston@ksu.edu

Fall field day scheduled Aug. 26 at Hays Research Center

Kansas State University's Agricultural Research Center at Hays will host a Fall Field Day on Wednesday, Aug. 26, at the center, located at 1232 240th Ave. in Hays.

Registration starts at 8:30 a.m., and the program begins at 9 a.m. Complimentary coffee and donuts, as well as a barbecue lunch later in the day, will be provided.

Field tours and presentations led by K-State Research and Extension specialists start at 9:10 a.m. and will include:

Value of Crop Residues for Soil Conservation — Humberto Blanco, soil scientist, Hays.

Soil Quality After 34 Years of Tillage Treatments — Humberto Blanco, soil scientist, Hays.

Development of Herbicide-Resistant Grain Sorghum — Phil Stahlman, weed scientist, Hays, and Kassim Al-Khatib, weed scientist, Manhattan.

Biofuel Production From CRP Lands — Keith Harmon, range scientist, Hays.

Challenges in Managing Migratory Insect Pests — J.P. Michaud, entomologist, Hays.

Converting CRP Lands to Crop Production — Alan Schlegel, soil scientist, Tribune.

Volatile Grain Markets: Influence of the General Economy — Dan O'Brien, agricultural economist, Colby.

More information is available by contacting the center at 785-625-3425 or wkarc@ksu.edu. The center's Web address is <http://www.wkarc.org>.

Research shows natural diversity in corn, ability to maximize hybrid vigor

Agricultural Research Service (ARS) scientists have developed a massive genetic resource for geneticists and breeders to unlock the basis of corn diversity. The scientists found that most natural genetic variation in corn is the product of numerous genes working together, each with a small effect that could be manipulated by breeders.

Major funding for the project is provided by the National Science Foundation. The findings were published in two papers in the journal Science. This work also provides major insights into hybrid vigor, a key element of today's high-yielding crops. The scientists' findings will change the way breeders improve crops using today's high-efficiency molecular technologies. These findings by ARS scientists and cooperators may help researchers determine the role of genes in agronomic traits such as yield, fertilizer use efficiency, drought tolerance, and ethanol potential. In their research, the scientists developed and assessed more than 1 million corn plants — the largest published genetic study to date. Corn (maize), one of the world's most important food crops, is also genetically 15 times more diverse than the human genome. So it's important for scientists to learn about key gene variants in the maize genome and the role those variants play in various traits.

The ARS scientists in the project were led by plant geneticist Ed Buckler at the agency's Robert W. Holley Center for Agriculture and Health in Ithaca, N.Y.; plant geneticist Michael McMullen at the ARS Plant Genetics Research Unit in Columbia, Mo.; and plant geneticist Jim Holland at the ARS Plant Science Research Unit in Raleigh, N.C. Joining them were ARS computational biologist Doreen Ware at Ithaca, and ARS plant geneticist Sherry Flint-Garcia at Columbia. The ARS researchers worked with industry and university cooperators in the United States.

Hybrid vigor is responsible for the incredibly productive corn hybrids grown across the United States. These researchers found that hybrid vigor results in part because hybrids bring together optimal gene combinations that are unlikely to occur in current breeding schemes. Novel breeding schemes designed to exploit this new knowledge of gene combinations will accelerate plant breeding worldwide.

The articles are entitled "Genetic Properties of the Maize Nested Association Mapping Population," and "The Genetic Architecture of Maize Flowering Time." They can be viewed at <http://www.sciencemag.org>.

Kansas soybean and corn crops forecast record high production in latest USDA report

The Kansas wheat crop is forecast at 369.8 million bushels, up 2 percent from the July 1 forecast and 4 percent higher than the 2008 crop.

Yield is forecast at 42 bushels per acre, up 2 bushels from a year ago. Acreage harvested for grain, at 8.8 million acres, is unchanged from July 1, but down 100,000 acres, from last year.

Corn for grain production is forecast at 514.8 million bushels, up 6 percent from last year's production of 486.4 million bushels. If realized, this would be the largest Kansas corn crop on record. Planted acreage is 3.8 million acres, down 1 percent from a year ago. Acreage forecast to be harvested for grain is 3.6 million acres, down 30,000 acres from last year.

Corn yield is forecast to average 143 bushels per acre, 9 bushels higher than the 134 bushels per acre in 2008.

Kansas sorghum for grain production is forecast at 213.3 million bushels, down 1 percent from 214.5 million bushels in 2008. Yields are expected to average 79 bushels per acre, up 1 bushel from last year's yield. Planted acreage is 2.9 million acres, unchanged from 2008.

Kansas leads the Nation in sorghum acreage and production. Sorghum acreage to be harvested for grain, at 2.7 million acres, is down 50,000 acres from 2008.

Soybean production is forecast to be a record high 133.0 million bushels, up 11 percent from last year's production of 120.3 million bushels. Yield is forecast at 38 bushels per acre, up 1 bushel from last year's yield and will be the second best yield on record, if realized.

Planted acres are estimated at a record high 3.6 million, up 300,000 from 2008. Harvested acreage is forecast to be a record 3.5 million acres, up 250,000 acres from the acreage harvested last year.

Cotton production is projected at 45,000 bales in 2009. Yield is forecast at 675 pounds of lint per acre. Planted acreage is 35,000 acres, unchanged from last year. Harvested acreage is forecast at 32,000, up 7,000 acres from last year.

U.S. Crop Production Forecast

All wheat production, at 2.18 billion bushels, is up 3 percent from the July forecast but down 13 percent from 2008. Based on August 1 conditions, the U.S. yield is forecast at 43.3 bushels per acre, up 1.4 bushels from last month but 1.6 bushels below last year.

Winter wheat production is forecast at 1.54 billion bushels, up 1 percent from last month but down 18 percent from 2008. The U.S. yield is forecast at 44.2 bushels per acre, up 0.4 bushel from last month but down 3.0 bushels from last year.

The area expected to be harvested for grain totals 34.8 million acres, unchanged from last month but down 12 percent from last year. Corn production is forecast at 12.8 billion bushels, up 5 percent from last year but 2 percent lower 2007.

Based on conditions as of August 1, yields are expected to average 159.5 bushels per acre, up 5.6 bushels from last year. If realized, this yield would be the second highest on record, behind 2004, and production would be the second largest, behind 2007.

Forecasted yields are higher than last year across the central Great Plains and western Corn Belt where mild temperatures and adequate soil moisture supplies provided favorable growing conditions. Expected yields were also higher across much of the Ohio and Tennessee Valleys and Atlantic Coast where beneficial moisture was received this year.

Growers expect to harvest 80.0 million acres for grain, down 100,000 acres from June but up 2 percent from last year. Soybean production is forecast at a record high 3.20 billion bushels, up 8 percent from last year. Based on August 1 conditions, yields are expected to average 41.7 bushels per acre, up 2.1 bushel from 2008. If realized, this will tie for the fourth highest yield on record. Area for harvest in the U.S. is forecast at 76.8 million acres, up slightly from June and up 3 percent from 2008.

Sorghum production is forecast at 381 million bushels, down 19 percent from last year. Expected

Cover crops in no-till field day slated Sept. 9 in Manhattan

KSU's Department of Agronomy will host a Cover Crops in No-Till Cropping Systems Field Day, Sept. 9 at the university's Ashland Bottoms Research Farm near Manhattan.

The field day will begin at 5 p.m. with registration and a demonstration that shows how cover crops can be terminated with a crop roller. Presentations start at 5:40 p.m. A complimentary supper will be served at 7:35 p.m., sponsored by KanEquip, Inc., CTI (Concordia Tractor Inc.) and Kauffman Seeds.

To reach the Ashland Bottoms Research Farm from K-177 Highway (south of the Kansas River Bridge), turn west on McDowell Creek Road and follow it 7.4 miles, turn right (north) on W. 40th Ave. and travel 1.2 miles. From Interstate 70, take Exit 307 and follow McDowell Creek Road 3.6 miles north before turning left (north) on W. 40th Ave and follow it 1.2 miles north.

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

As expected, there were numerous changes to the supply and demand tables in last week's report. Most notable was the increase in the corn yield estimate to 159.5 bu/ac. That would be the second highest yield ever. There are many that think this number is too low, but with the crop still well behind normal, it was unlikely USDA was going to come out with a record high yield estimate at this point. However, a 6.1 bu/ac increase was still very large and it is bearish.

One thing that wasn't changed that many thought would be was the planted acreage estimate. Many traders were looking for a cut in acreage that would partially offset the increase in yield, but that didn't happen and that added to the bearishness of the report.

Despite the higher than expected production figure, new crop ending stocks came in below expectations because of increases in demand. Both old crop and new crop exports were increased as were new crop ethanol usage and new crop feed usage. Not everyone believes the higher usage estimates, so the lower than expected stocks didn't end up being very supportive to the market.

Wheat production and ending stocks were increased, which wasn't a surprise and didn't have any market impact. The one surprise was that new crop exports were increased in spite of the poor exports we have seen. Sales will have to improve soon.

Soybean acreage was increased, but yield was decreased to 41.7 bu/ac, which resulted in lower production. Old crop exports and crush were increased, but that was offset by a cut in residual usage and ending stocks were left unchanged at 110 million. I was surprised by that a little bit, but I knew that there were going to be some strange things happening with the soybean numbers. New crop demand estimates were cut, which partially offset the lower production, but ending stocks were still lower at 210 million.

The corn market opened lower following the bearish crop report, but came back to finish the day with a positive close, which was very friendly from a technical stand point. However, the follow through buying on Thursday didn't last and we ended up with lower closes on both Thursday and Friday. As a result the December corn was only 1 ¼ higher even though the corn had a very good start to the week.

There is trend line support below the market at $3.23, which will probably be tested early next week. The chance of the support holding are not great since the forecasts are not threatening and psychology is still negative. A move down to the $3.00 is still very possible.

Students working on research focusing on two swine diseases

Students at Kansas State University are researching some of the most important infectious diseases in swine to improve the long-term health of pigs.

The K-State students are working in the laboratory of Bob Rowland, K-State professor of diagnostic medicine and pathobiology. Rowland's research focuses on swine virology and studying the inner workings of the porcine reproductive and respiratory syndrome virus and porcine circovirus type 2 virus.

Nicholas Crossland, first-year student in veterinary medicine and graduate student in veterinary biomedical sciences, Overland Park, and Jessica Otradovec, sophomore in animal science and pre-veterinary medicine, Palmyra, Neb., are conducting research this summer in Rowland's lab.

Maureen Kerrigan, Rowland's laboratory manager, said the students have been collecting samples to compare health factors and genetic profiles of swine.

"The big picture here is to improve swine health long-term through vaccination or by understanding which pigs genetically are more resistant to viruses without having to vaccinate them," Kerrigan said.

Porcine reproductive and respiratory syndrome virus is a highly infectious disease that causes a flu-like condition with high fever, loss of appetite and an overall deterioration of health. Porcine circovirus is a disease that compromises a pig's immune system with clinical signs like skin rashes, jaundice, fever, diarrhea, poor growth, weight loss and death.

Kerrigan said the lab research involves work with swine genetics and virus proteins. The researchers are looking at how the proteins differ in infected and noninfected swine to help understand if certain proteins can be used for protection from the viruses.

Crossland worked in Rowland's lab as an undergraduate student in preparation for applying to K-State's College of Veterinary Medicine. He is running enzyme-linked immunosorbent assays, a procedure in which he mixes swine sera with bacterial expressed viral proteins to see how they interact. Kerrigan said this will show if a pig has been exposed to the protein.

Otradovec started working in the lab as a freshman and had no prior experience in research or swine health. She is learning a variety of cloning techniques.

"I want to go to vet school, so working in a lab and learning to do all these procedures will help me immensely, even in the classroom," Otradovec said.

Crossland and Otradovec started working in the lab after they heard about the job opening through a pre-veterinary medicine club listserv. Crossland said Rowland and Kerrigan allow the students in the lab to work on their own with applicable research.

"It's not about being a robot in a lab and reproducing a protocol," Crossland said. "It's about thinking critically and producing something that's useful."

Kerrigan said the lab has had an increase in student help during the last year for the research. She said about five undergraduates will be doing research this fall.

Rowland is continuing swine health research at K-State's Biosecurity Research Institute. Beth Montelone, interim director of the institute, said the facility's first animal health study starts this month. Rowland and Dick Hesse, K-State director of diagnostic virology, will conduct experiments on swine virus vaccination.

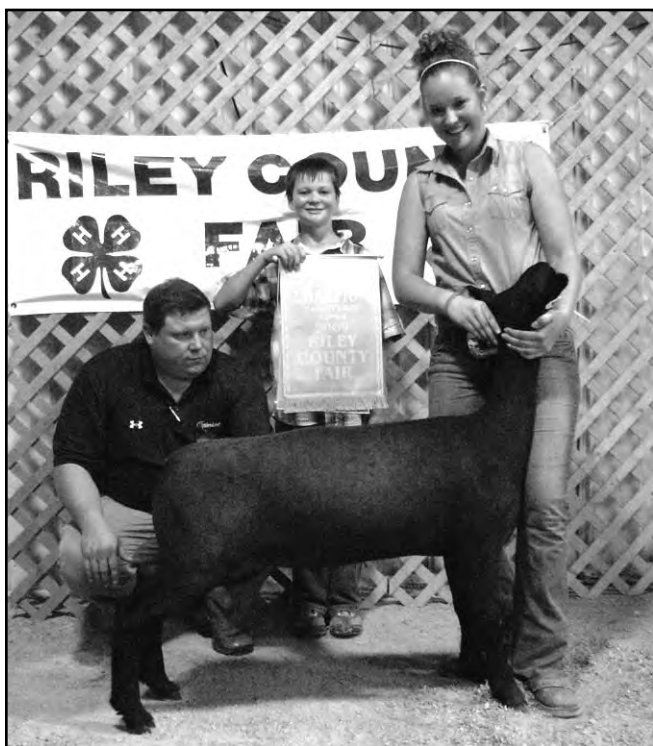

"As we begin to move forward with additional projects, we anticipate that there will be opportunities for veterinary, graduate and undergraduate students to take part in these projects," Montelone said.

The Biosecurity Research Institute is a biocontainment research and education facility at K-State's Pat Roberts Hall. It is designed for biosafety level 3 and biosafety level 3 agriculture research, which includes work on diseases caused by high-consequence pathogens and the development of vaccines for dangerous animal diseases.

The National Bio and Agro-Defense Facility coming to Manhattan also will have biosafety level 3 capabilities where scientists will conduct animal and zoonotic disease research. Additionally it will have biosafety levels 2 and 4 capabilities.

Steers and heifers weighing 399 lbs. and under were up compared to last week. The remaining market was considerably softer. Butcher cows were slightly lower with no market comparison available on butcher bulls. A special cow sale was held this week in connection with our regular cattle sale with good representation. Pairs sold very well with an improved market compared to recent weeks. We do not have a market comparison on bred cows since we did not sell any last week.

Beef Stocker Field Day set for Sept. 24 in Manhattan

Kansas State University will host its 10th annual Beef Stocker Field Day Thursday, Sept. 24 at the university's Beef Stocker Unit located on west Marlatt Ave. in Manhattan.

The day begins with coffee and registration at 9:30 a.m. and the program starting at 10:15 a.m. The program will include a mix of speakers from K-State Research and Extension, as well as beef producers, cattle feeders, agricultural lenders and beef processors. They include:

Buying and Selling Right - Kevin Dhuyvetter, agricultural economist, K-State Research and Extension

Panel: Partnering with Feedlots, Who Brings What to the Table?

Thinking Outside the Shots, Dan Thomson, K-State College of Veterinary Medicine

Panel: Negotiating Custom Grazing Arrangements

Cattle Financing in a Tight Credit Market, Gary Cotterill, Community National Bank, Chanute

Producing Value-Added Cattle, Brian Bertelson, U.S. Premium Beef

Weed and Woody Plant Control in Pastures, Walt Fick, K-State Research and Extension

Utilization of Byproducts on Pasture, Lyle Lomas, K-State Research and Extension

In addition, technological and scientific innovations and applications available from commercial vendors and the K-State Diagnostics Lab will be highlighted during the day, including cattle handling facilities; persistently infected (PI) bovine viral diarrhea virus (BVDV); and record-keeping systems. The field day includes a catered barbecue brisket lunch and to wrap up the day, Moly Manufacturing will sponsor the "Cutting Bull's Lament," a Prairie Oyster Fry, Pitchfork Fondue and Dutch Oven Desserts.

A pre-registration fee of $30 by Sept. 15 is requested for an accurate meal count.

More information is available, including online registration, at the website: <http://www.asi.ksu.edu/> and click on "Beef" or contact Lois Schreiner at (785) 532-1267 or lschrein@ksu.edu.

Judgment can affect pesticides' punch

When pesticides don't do the job, gardeners often want to blame the product.

Unless that product is old or out-of-date, the real reason can be different, said Ward Upham, Master Gardener program coordinator for Kansas State University Research and Extension. The more usual reasons include:

Lack of good foliage penetration - often a problem when spraying for bagworms on junipers. High-pressure commercial sprayers can easily penetrate most dense foliage. But, pump-up sprayers require pushing the wand through to reach the insects toward the inside of the plant.

Not spraying where the insects or mites are - a common mistake when pests are feeding on the underside of leaves. This tends to be why cabbage worm controls are less than effective on cole crops. It can explain why ridding broadleaf plants of spider mites can seem so difficult.

Not acting when pests are young and easier to stop. For example, carbaryl (Sevin) does a good job of controlling young, early instar grasshoppers. But, it's much less effective on adults.

Allowing disease pressure to build up - especially given that most fungicides are better used as preventatives than as curatives. For example, when used as preventive on tomato plants at the first sign of symptoms, chlorothalonil is an effective control for two serious diseases: early blight and Septoria leaf spot. On badly infested tomatoes, however, chlorothalonil can't stop or cure either disease. Using the wrong product - which often translates as homeowners' applying whatever they already have on hand. The right product's label will mention the problem pest, but even labeled products can vary in effectiveness. So, the best will also be on the nearest state land-grant university's "recommended" list. Homeowners can gain easy access to what's current at any of the university's system of county and/or district Extension offices. Mixing the product in water with the wrong pH. Captan's half-life, for example, can vary from three hours (pH 7) to 10 minutes (pH 8). Given the same range in pH, the half-life for carbaryl (Sevin) can range from 24 days to just one. Malathion, on the other hand, rapidly hydrolyzes outside a pH range of 5 to 7, no matter whether the water is more acidic or more alkaline. (In general: "Neutral" is best.)

Riley Co. group has annual tour coming soon

The annual Riley County Livestock Association Summer Tour will be held at 5 p.m. on Sunday, August 30 at the Alan Hubbard ranch near Olsburg. The tour will feature rotational grazing systems and innovative watering systems. Livestock on the tour will include cattle, sheep, goats, and horses. A free meal of burgers, chips, and Call Hall ice cream will be served following the tour.

Reservations to participate in the RCLA Summer Tour may be made before August 26 by calling (785) 537-6350 or by e-mail to gmccclure@ksu.edu.

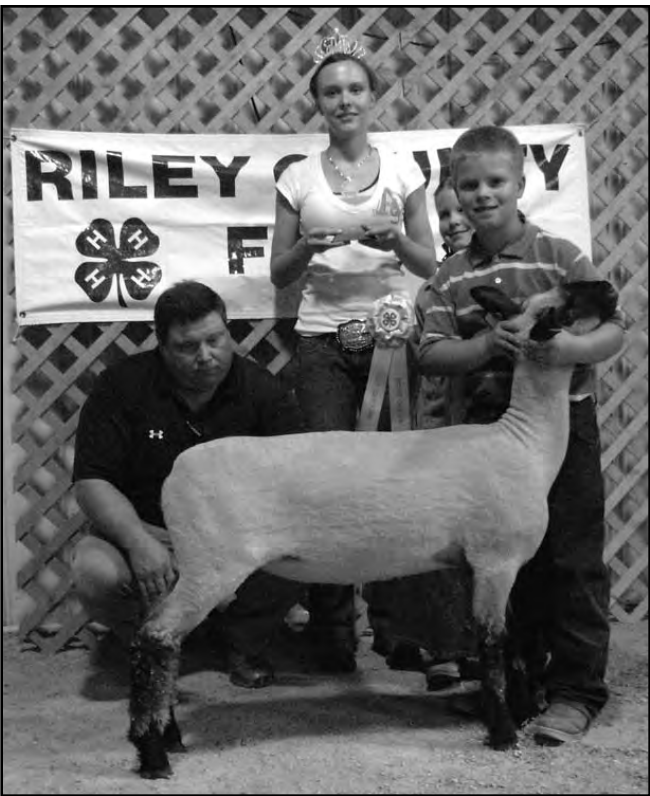

Kansas to host 2010 National Junior Show

The Limousin breed will return to the nation's heartland for its 2010 National Junior Limousin Show and Congress (NJLSC) and All-American Limousin Futurity (AALF).

The Kansas State Fairgrounds and the Grand Prairie Hotel and Convention Center in Hutchinson will host the "Fireworks on the Frontier" NJLSC July 3-10, 2010. The week-long, family-oriented event will include membership meetings, cattle shows, showmanship competitions and a variety of satellite events.

It all helps young Limousin enthusiasts have fun while they learn about the beef industry, public speaking, marketing and leadership.

About 200 exhibitors and their families (600 to 800 people total) will bring about 400 head of cattle to the event. The concluding awards banquet will recognize participants' achievements.
