Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay trade slow. Demand moderate for dairy and stock cow alfalfa, alfalfa pellets, grinding alfalfa and grass hay. Better weather is helping hay and feed dry down for baling. Western Kansas is expecting wind the next few days which will help drying. Wheat drilling is progressing well. Prospects for wheat pasture look good. The recent Crops report projection shows Kansas alfalfa production up 12 percent from last year and Other Hay down 8 percent. If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange www.kfb.org/hayandpasture/default.htm.

Reality Check.

In recent years many commercial producers have found themselves actually 'linebreeding' to some effect—using basically the same bloodlines and narrowing the genetic diversity within their cow herds. While this adds consistency to some traits, it also opens up potential problems in fertility, vigor, resistance to disease, disposition, structure, performance, etc. Many times this is a slow effect, not immediately noticeable, but bottom-line profit margins can quickly shrink when problem traits are unintentionally multiplied.

Fink Beef Genetics does not single-trait select, but try to balance all traits. We provide options and choices for customers ranging from diversity within our two breeds to planned crossbreeding systems.

Each customer knows their operation better than anyone—we simply provide some of the pieces to help make it more profitable. We do not linebreed our thoughts, rather, we look long-term and 'outside the box' — a mission we are constantly on.

FINK CHAROLAIS BULLS

- Use for terminal cross (pounds, vigor, feedlot & packer friendly)
- Use to make 'smoky' females out of moderate-framed Fink Charolais bulls. Many ranches are.
- Bred for calving ease, pounds & carcass—emphasis on marbling.
- Excellent for improved yield grades & % of lean retail cuts—still with great marbling.

FINK ANGUS BULLS

- Replacement females #1 goal with least amount of problems.
- Recommend for 1st-calf heifers when so designated.
- We avoid terminal-type angus (high $B, excessive yearling weights, large course bone)
- Carcass that cuts with anyone.
- AM, NH-free genetics.

FINK COMPOSITE BULLS

- Increase yield grade, still excellent marbling on high-base Angus cows.
- Ribeye areas improved.
- Use to make replacements also—best of both breeds.
- Great for producers feeding their own cattle for carcass premiums.

Final results from the 2009 Kansas Junior Livestock Show shared

Youth from across the state came to Wichita to compete for auction premiums and scholarships during the 77th Kansas Junior Livestock Show (KJLS), September 25-28. The largest youth livestock show in Kansas featured 744 4-H and FFA members from 83 counties exhibiting 1,268 head of livestock. Major sponsors of the show are the Kansas Livestock Association, Kansas State University and the Agri-Business Council of Wichita.

A 1,350 lb. Charolais shown by Taylor Crumbaker from Beloit bested a field of 120 head to earn grand champion steer honors. Crumbaker's steer was purchased by Carlos O'Kelly's Mexican Café and Cargill Meat Solutions for $12,140 during the Auction of Champions held at the show's conclusion. The reserve grand champion steer, exhibited by Shilo Schaake, was a 1,285 lb. crossbred worth $10,455 to Xtra Factor, Bill

Barr & Co., Watercress Development, Life Products, Frederick Sales, MicroBeef, Coby Tresner, Westway, ViCor, Qualitech, The Hartford Co. and State Farm Insurance/Jim Maddox. The reserve Charolais steer was exhibited by Kyra Skinner of Liberal. Chase Ratliff of Westphalia showed the reserve champion crossbred steer. Sarah Pelton, Paradise, led the champion Angus steer, while the reserve was owned by Garrett Kays, Weir. A steer exhibited by Garrett Ochs, Jetmore, earned the champion Chianina title, while Madylien Kay Voboril, Overland Park, showed the reserve. The champion Hereford steer belonged to Stetson June of Cuba. The reserve Hereford was led by Charlie Craig, Scandia. Cody Hrabe from Stockton owned the champion Maine-Anjou steer, while Madison Ratliff from Westphalia showed the reserve. The champion Shorthorn steer was led by Taylor Nikkel of Maple Hill, and the reserve was an entry exhibited by Haley Lauer of Abilene. Ryan Goetzmann from Gardner exhibited the champion Simmental steer, with Jarrod Beam from Beloit leading the reserve. Brooke Jensen of Courtland showed the all-other-breeds (AOB) champion. Cheyanne Ratliff, Westphalia, owned the reserve AOB steer.

For the second year in a row, Chase Ratliff, 11, of Westphalia exhibited the supreme champion heifer. This year's winning entry was from the AOB division. A Chianina shown by Ashley Olivier from Harper was the reserve supreme champion heifer of the 281-head show. The reserve champion AOB heifer was led by Ashlee Corns of Eureka. Ashlynn Schlochtermeyer from Russell exhibited the reserve Chianina female. The champion Angus heifer was shown by Cody Theis, Leavenworth. Grady Dickerson,

Paradise, exhibited the reserve Angus. A heifer owned by Kendal Clawson of Satanta topped the Charolais division. Reserve Charolais heifer honors were awarded to an entry shown by Calvin Dix from Woodston. The champion Gelbvieh heifer was exhibited by Grace Hammer of Wallace. Callahan Grund, Wallace, led the reserve Gelbvieh. In the Hereford division, champion honors went to a heifer owned by Brady Jensen, Courtland, with reserve going to an entry from Kati Fehlman of Junction City. Maycee Ratliff from Westphalia showed the champion Limousin heifer, with her sister Madison leading the reserve. Lauren Prill, Wichita, exhibited the champion Maine-Anjou heifer. The reserve Maine-Anjou heifer was shown by Madison Vaught, McClouth. The champion MaineTainer heifer was owned by Chance

Draper of Ford, with reserve going to an entry from Trevor Lowell of Agenda. Payton Harms from Lincolnville owned the champion Red Angus heifer. His sister, Taylor, led the reserve. A heifer exhibited by Faye Smith of Walton was named champion Shorthorn, while Cody Webb of Pomona showed the reserve. Addi Marston of Canton led the champion ShorthornPlus female, with Lindsay Bulk of Riley owning the reserve. Reagan Schlochtermeyer, Russell, showed the champion Simmental heifer. Lauren Prill, Wichita, exhibited the reserve. The champion commercial heifer was awarded to an entry from Hannah Talkington, Hays. Casey Craver, Gypsum, led the reserve commercial heifer.

Beef Showmanship
Champion cattle showman in the senior division was AnnHeidi Reed of Winfield, with Casey Craver of Gypsum earning top junior cattle showmanship honors. Senior division winners following Reed, in order of finish, were: Shelby Leonhard, Oskaloosa; Becky Gleason, Maple Hill; Kendal Clawson, Satanta; and Jarrod Beam, Beloit. Rounding out the top five in the junior division were: Hannah Talkington, Hays; Tanner Walden, Tonganoxie; Taylor Nikkel, Maple Hill; and Grady Dickerson, Paradise.

KJLS honors top livestock projects, scholarships awarded

grand commercial ewe. Lance Davis, Yates Center, led the champion yearling commercial ewe. The reserve was shown by Colby Jackson, Wamego.

Sheep Showmanship

Boone Ott from Coffeyville won the senior division of the sheep showmanship contest, while Jansyn Van Horn of Garfield claimed champion junior sheep showman honors. Following Ott, in order of finish, were: Chastin Leggett, Columbus; Monica Ebert, St. George; Lindsey Pease, Chetopa; and Lauren Hoge, Linwood. Exhibitors placing second through fifth in the junior division were: Taylor Coen, Elkhart; Kaylee Houston, Bartlett; Spencer Dennis, Bucyrus; and Chantelle Scott, Ransom.

Meat Goat results

Eleven-year-old Mattie Shafer from Rozel received grand champion honors with her meat goat. The champion goat, besting 157 others to claim the top prize, weighed 94 lbs. and was worth $2,709 to S.O.W. Corporation. Lindsey Pease, from Chetopa, led the reserve, which weighed 104 lbs. Elanco, Agritek and Ted Crist placed a final bid of $1,040 on Pease's goat.

Champion goat showman in the senior division was Cassadie Copeland of Kingsdown, with Tait Johnson of Chetopa earning top junior goat showmanship honors. Senior division winners following Copeland, in order of finish, were: Lindsey Pease, Chetopa; Beth Mercer, Galena; Kyle Darnell, Chetopa; and Andrew Porter, Chetopa. Rounding out the top five in the junior division were: Shynia Peterman, Lyons; Mattie Shafer, Rozel; Sam Davis, Madison; and Jessi Beets, Osawatomie.

Scholarships Awarded

Prior to the Auction of Champions, KJLS presented $18,950 in scholarships to 15 exhibitors. Dustin Aherin from Phillipsburg and Garrett Lister from Marysville both received $2,000 scholarships. Reagan Kays of Weir and Sam Ehrlich of Marion each were awarded a $1,750 scholarship. Those receiving $1,500 scholarships were: Hilary Saathoff, Tonganoxie; Brianna Zimmerman, Sterling; and Kari Thiessen, Whitewater. Courtney Nagel from Wamego was awarded $1,200 to put toward her college education. Jeff Cather of Anthony and Abby Guenther of Ottawa both received $1,000 scholarships. Exhibitors earning $750 stipends were: Elizabeth Forsyth, Abilene; Kasandra Huser, Victoria; Seth Bredemeier, Colby; Cheyenne Wiley, Fort Scott; and Russell Rezac, Onaga.

Since the inception of the KJLS scholarship program 16 years ago, a total of 221 exhibitors have been awarded $264,700. Proceeds from the Beefeater Barbecue, prior to the Auction of Champions, and private contributions are the primary funding sources for the KJLS scholarship pool.

Judging Contest

Teams from 11 states participated in the Mid America Classic Judging Contest held in conjunction with KJLS. The senior college contest was won by a team from Kansas State University, while second place went to Oklahoma State University (OSU). Zachary Butler with OSU was the top scoring senior college individual. He was followed by K-State's Trey Buffington.

In the sophomore division, a team from Redlands Junior College placed first, with Butler Community College coming in second. Garrett Dietz from Hutchinson Community College was the high scoring individual, followed by Marty Gifford of Casper College.

A team from Redlands also topped the junior college freshman team competition, with Coffeyville Community College placing second. Austin Perry with Redlands ranked at the top of the freshman contest, while the second place freshman was Tyler Turnquest with Northeastern Oklahoma.

In addition to the three major sponsors, hundreds of volunteers help organize and put on the show.

Kansas' teachers, students invited to participate in national biofuels experiment

As Kansas State University researchers continue to explore biofuels as renewable energy, sustainable agriculture and a potential source of revenue for Kansas' economy, students in the state also will soon have the opportunity to learn about — and simulate the production of a biofuel.

"Biofuel Blast" is the chosen topic for the 2009 4-H sponsored National Youth Science Experiment, said Gary Gerhard, Kansas State University professor of youth development and a state 4-H specialist. The experiment kicks off on Oct. 7, 2009, and will focus on renewable resources obtained from harvested plant materials — biofuels, he said.

The experiment may be conducted throughout the month and results posted to www.4-h.org/NYSD/index.php. The effort is timed to align with the beginning of the 4-H program year, but students do not need to be 4-H members to participate, said Gerhard, who is anticipating participation from school, after-school programs and community groups. "The push to spark students' interest in science is not new to 4-H," he said. "4-H projects are research- and science-based, yet not always readily identified with science."

"The difference," said Gerhard, "is that 4-H projects take science out of the classroom and emphasize basic principles and practical applications in everyday life. 4-H makes what might, in another setting, be called 'homework' an opportunity."

Providing the leadership for a national experiment that can be completed at the local level is a relatively new idea from National 4-H Headquarters, he said. And, while participation in the national project focuses on scientific principles and outcomes, taking the project to the national level integrates additional technologies. Student scientists will be able to log onto a 4-H website to compare results from others in the nation who are conducting the experiment, he said.

Promoting a national youth science day is part of the 4-H Science, Engineering and Technology program. The goal, said Gerhard, is to build interest in science and technology as careers.

More information about the science project and other 4-H educational programs and opportunities is available on the Kansas 4-H website (www.kansas4-h.org) and at county and district K-State Research and Extension offices.

So, What's a Biofuel Blast?

The national 4-H experiment explores the production of the biofuel, ethanol, which is typically made in the U.S. by converting the starches from corn kernels into the sugars in corn syrup, and then adding yeast to break down the sugars. That releases carbon dioxide and ethanol as byproducts. Ethanol is blended with gasoline and then sold at some gas stations. Drivers may, for example, see a sign (E10) at the pump indicating that the fuel they are purchasing is 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethanol.

Why Biofuels Matter

"Kansas is positioned to succeed in the biofuels marketplace," said Scott Staggenborg, Kansas State University Research and Extension associate professor. With much discussion and debate in the news about using corn as fuel, rather than food, he is part of a K-State team that is researching sorghum and native grasses such as Switchgrass and Big Blue Stem. The scientists are also studying an Asian perennial, Miscanthus-Giantice, which is fast-growing and produces a substantial amount of biomass for potential production of biofuels, said Staggenborg, who is a cropping systems researcher in K-State's Department of Agronomy.

The Asian perennial can grow to the height of 10 feet or more quickly, and has been grown successfully at K-State's North Agronomy Research Farm. Other crops with potential include energy sorghum and sweet sorghum, which also can grow quite tall and produce a large amount of biomass.

The advantage of the Miscanthus and other perennial grasses is that, once established, they require less seed and herbicide, protect the soil from erosion, and increase soil organic matter levels faster than most annual crops. The advantage of energy or sweet sorghum is that, as annual crops, they fit better into crop rotations that are needed to produce other non-biofuel crops such as wheat.

Yard & Garden Tips

By Gregg Eyestone

Saving seeds for later

With seed planting behind us, many of our extra seeds can be held over for next year. The rule of thumb is to store seed in a cool and dry area. The dry seed should be placed in packages and stored in moisture-proof containers. Label your containers and put them in the refrigerator until needed next spring.

You can collect seed from ripe plants to be used next year. All seeds have to be collected to be made available to customers. In our gardens, these seeds need to come from open pollinated plants to have similar attributes as the plant that it came from. Viable seeds come from plants that have been pollinated. There will be some variation. Hybrid seed takes known parents to produce the desired qualities. These won't come true in our garden. You may collect the seed if you like to experiment and see what becomes of them. It might be a good plant or a waste of space.

The seed needs to be dry before putting in storage. Let seeds air dry for several weeks before storing. The relative humidity needs to be low and the air temperature warm. Moisture of 8 percent would be best for long term storage. Seeds exposed to six hours of 100 degrees under low humidity would meet this percent. Seeds that have been stored in the refrigerator and kept dry on average keep three to four years. Onion, Swiss chard and parsnips generally only keep one year after it matures. Muskmelon, cucumbers and radish will keep five years.

Annual flowers keep generally one to three years. Perennials are two to four years. Seed can be tested for viability by place a few seeds in a wet paper towel in a warm room to see if they sprout. The germination tag on purchased seed is only valid for six months.

Treated seed that is either enhanced, pelleted, or with specific chemical treatments can affect the seed vigor and length of viability. Pelleted seed may be carried over for one year. The others are iffy on viability.

Saving seeds is like finding money in the sofa. It is something you already have and works the same as new. You can find out more information on this and other horticulture topics by going to the K-State Research and Extension website at www.ksre.ksu.edu. And you contact Gregg Eyestone at the Riley County office of K-State Research and Extension. Gregg may be contacted by calling (785) 537-6350 or stopping by 110 Courthouse Plaza in Manhattan or e-mail: geyeston@ksu.edu.

The grand champion steer at the 2009 Shawnee County Fair was shown by Lucas Russell from Silver Lake FFA. Lucas is the son of Ray Murdock. The steer was purchased by Northwood Farms.

Sericea can still be treated

It's not too late to treat sericea lespedeza on Kansas farms this fall, but treatments should be applied soon, according to a Kansas State University agronomist.

"Many sericea plants across Kansas are still blooming," said K-State Research and Extension range management specialist Walt Fick of the noxious weed. "Sericea is still susceptible to herbicides if treated at the full bloom stage and for a couple weeks afterward. Spot-spraying with Remedy Ultra and PastureGard can be effective even at a late bloom stage, but products containing metsulfuron, such as Escort XP and Cimarron Plus are often more effective as flowering ends and seed pods appear and begin to fill." Sericea plants can be killed until-frost, but if pod fill has begun, viable seed will still be produced, Fick said. Grasslands with sericea lespedeza infestations should not be grazed or hayed after the sericea has gone to seed.

PRCA announces nominees for year-end rodeo honors

For the fourth time, Kansas' Biggest Rodeo in Phillipsburg has been nominated for Medium Sized Rodeo of the Year in the Pro Rodeo Cowboys Association.

The rodeo is one of five rodeos nationwide that was nominated in the category of medium sized rodeos. Rodeos are designated as medium sized, based on their prize money. This year, Kansas' Biggest Rodeo had an added purse of $63,000 with a total payout of $149,000.

The other four rodeos nominated in the same category are Abilene, Texas, Ogden, Utah, Amarillo, Texas, and Deadwood, S.D.

Eleven categories are awarded honors in the PRCA, and are voted on by all rodeo contestants, contract personnel, and rodeo committees. The winners in all categories will be announced Wed., December 2 during the PRCA Awards Banquet at the South Point Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas.

The ballot is peppered with other nominees who have entertained and worked the Phillipsburg rodeo.

Rodeo announcer Randy Corley, Silverdale, Wash., is nominated for the award of Announcer of the Year for the twelfth time; he has won it ten of those times. Beutler and Son Rodeo Co., Elk City, Okla., who has provided livestock for the Phillipsburg rodeo for 5 decades, is up for Stock Contractor of the Year.

Contract personnel who have performed at Kansas' Biggest Rodeo also are on the ballot. They include trick rider Melissa Navarre, Weatherford, Okla., Priefert Six-horse Hitch driver Jason Goodman, Mt. Pleasant, Texas; barrelmen and clowns Keith Isley, Reidsville, N.C., Lecile Harris, Colliersville, Tenn., and John Harrison, Soper, Okla., and bullfighter Dusty Tuckness, Meteetse, Wyo.

Lindquist receives some national Extension recognition

James L. Lindquist, assistant extension director of field operations, Kansas State University Research and Extension, was named the 2009 Distinguished Ruby Recipient at the Epsilon Sigma Phi National Conference in Fargo N.D.

Lindquist delivered the Ruby Lecture, "Making a Difference," during the Ruby Luncheon on Tuesday, Sept. 15, 2009. The Distinguished Service Ruby is the highest and most prestigious recognition presented by Epsilon Sigma Phi, Extension's professional organization. The award honors outstanding thinking, performance and leadership in Extension and is presented to one Extension professional each year. Lindquist is the first Kansas recipient.

Jim Lindquist has dedicated his career to education and innovative Extension program development and delivery, according to

Margaret Phillips, president of the Kansas Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Phi. "With a personal and professional goal of helping an increasingly diverse constituency learn, grow, and improve their quality of life, and become contributing citizens, he has worked tirelessly to bring the land-grant mission to life. He is passionate about — and a shining example of — leadership, citizenship and service, and is truly dedicated to his profession, family and community."

As assistant director for field operations, Lindquist provides administrative leadership to counties and districts. He has provided leadership, support, vision and strategies for developing districting models and other agreements that enhance cooperation and strengthen the delivery of educational programs across county lines and across the system. To date, 25 of Kansas' 105 counties have moved to form nine districts to enhance educational opportunities, expand delivery of research-based education to a greater number of constituents, and move toward sustainability in varying economic climates.

He has served Epsilon Sigma Phi at the chapter and national levels. In 2001, he served as ESP national president, following a two-year succession on the ESP national board as second vice president and president-elect. He has continued his involvement through leadership in National Epsilon Sigma Phi Endowment efforts, and the Public Issues national committee. In 2003, he was a recipient of the Distinguished Service Recognition.

Rainfall still measured much like 140 years ago

There are plenty of weather watchers out there — farmers, construction workers and mothers wondering how to dress the kids for school, often keep a close eye on the forecast.

But how do weather forecasters gather such data as rainfall totals?

"There a number of different methods," said State of Kansas climatologist, Mary Knapp. "One of the most common is the National Weather Service Cooperative Observation network. This system has been in place since the 1860s."

Under that system, individuals go out daily and measure the rainfall, and in many cases the snowfall, said Knapp, who runs the Kansas Weather Data Library based in Kansas State University Research and Extension. They use a standard 8-inch manual gauge to report and record their observations.

Rainfall data collection has been relatively unchanged for many years, but communications have been updated, she said. In times past, the reports may have been sent by telegraph with a paper copy mailed at the end of the month. Now many observers report online, with some reporting using a cell phone. Forms are stored in electronic format, although paper backups often are still maintained.

Information about Kansas weather is available on the Weather Data Library web site: www.ksre.ksu.edu/wdl/. "Weather Wonders" audio reports are available on the K-State Research and Extension News Media website at <http://www.ksre.ksu.edu/news/>.

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

There was considerable weakness in the stock market last week. The Dow Jones fell to 9430 at one point on Friday, which is the lowest level since the 4th of September. The break in the market is far from catastrophic, but it does look like we are due for an extended correction. Trend line support will come in around the 9200 area, so I would look for a move down to at least that level.

The Dollar Index is also trying to correct. Lately, when the Dollar has been weak, the stock market has been strong, and vice-versa, so seeing a correction in both of these markets at the same time would fit that pattern.

After a firm start to the week, the corn market was weak on Thursday and Friday and ended up being 1/2 a cent lower. The losses could have been bigger considering the size of some of the crop estimates we have seen. Many traders are expecting USDA to raise their record high yield estimate even further in next week's supply and demand report. The chart looks like the corn will trend lower going into next Friday's report, which makes sense considering how bearish the report could be if USDA raises the yield again. A move down to $3.25 or lower looks likely next week.

There are some news stories about poor test weights and disease problems, but the trade doesn't seem to be concerned with those reports. The focus is on harvest activity and the probability of a record yield.

The December KW posted another reversal higher last week, which is the 4th in 16 trading sessions. As with all of the other reversals, there was no follow through buying and the December KW finished the week by making new lows. There is very little positive news to report. Export sales were more than adequate for the second week in a row at 538,200 MT, but that isn't a big enough total to get speculators excited and it isn't enough to use up all of our excess supplies.

The quarterly stocks report showed we had more wheat on hand than expected at 2.215 billion bushels and production was increased in the small grains summary to 2.220, which was also more than expected. Like I said, there isn't much positive to report. The fundamentals are negative and the trend is down. Plan on lower prices.

Soybean production expectations seem to be increasing, which put pressure on the market Friday. For most of the week the market was stuck in a trading range, but the market fell apart on Friday and the November soybeans ended up about 40 cents lower for the week.

The charts look bearish now since the market fell through trend line support and reached the lowest level since mid July. Unfortunately it looks like the November contract will be headed down to the $8.00 area. It probably won't drop that far next week, but it could if USDA raises the yield estimate to 44 like Informa is looking for.

The news is far from all bad in the soybeans. Demand is still outstanding. Export sales this week were huge again at 1.38 MMT. Soybean oil sales were also huge at nearly 200,000 MT for the old crop and new crop combined. With demand like that we could eventually work through a large crop, but in the short run great demand is not enough to offset the harvest pressure.

There is nothing positive to report about the cattle market. Cash cattle were lower and the boxed beef was lower, which meant the futures were lower. The charts look terrible. The December LC are testing the contract low. Perhaps that will hold. If it doesn't, the next downside objective would be $81.25.

Super-sized cows require appropriate management

It is a truth hiding in plain sight: Mature weight and milk production of many commercial beef cows are both greater than they were 30 years to 40 years ago, and that means management considerations must change as well.

Oklahoma State University animal scientists Bob Kropp and Glenn Selk explain that many commercial ranchers underestimate the mature size of their cows simply because they have not weighed the adult cows to know what average mature weight to expect.

"Today's cows are not the type your grandfather was used to raising," said Glenn Selk, OSU Cooperative Extension livestock reproduction specialist. "To expect large, heavy milking cows to be in moderate body condition at calving and maintain condition through breeding, they must receive more feed than smaller lighter-milking cows."

According to the 1996 National Research Council's guidelines for beef cows calving in February and March and weaning in October, heavier milking cows weighing about 1,250 pounds require 34 percent more energy on average for an entire year, compared to 1,100-pound moderately milking cows.

Consequently, an operation that was carrying 100 head of the smaller cows need carry only 66 head of the larger cows to use the same quantity of forage available on a specific farm or ranch.

The larger cows also will require 34 percent more winter hay and supplement to maintain body condition.

Kropp, an OSU professor of animal science, said feed and fertilizer prices highlight the need for producers to consider reducing herd size to better fit required stocking rates.

"Reduced stocking rates will definitely be necessary on improved pastures if lower amounts of fertilizer are applied," he said. "Proper use of pasture forages is the foundation of any cattle ranch."

A larger mature cow size also affects the principle of percent of body weight needed for heifers to reach puberty. For a cow that eventually will weigh 1,000 pounds, the target weight for the heifer would be 650 pounds.

For a cow that eventually will weigh 1,250 pounds, the target weight would be 812 pounds going into the heifer's first breeding season, if the producer is to promote a high cycling and pregnancy rate.

"Many ranchers underestimate the target weight for replacement heifers," Kropp said. "Matching cows to a producer's specific enterprise is one of the topics we will be discussing at the Central Oklahoma Cattle Conference on Oct. 29 in Chandler."

Selk added that cattle producers can pick up a number of valuable tips aimed at increasing operational efficiency at the conference.

"Successful and long-lasting cattle operations are those that maintain efficiency during periods of volatile input costs and roller-coaster cattle markets," he said.

The conference will take place at the Lincoln County Agri-Civic Center, located on the county fairgrounds off State Highway 66, just west of the junction with State Highway 18 south. Cost is $10 per participant if pre-registering and $15 at the door.

Youth shooting event planned

Council Grove area youth are invited to attend a free shotgun, pellet rifle, and archery shooting clinic on Saturday, Oct. 10, at Council Grove Reservoir. Registration is due Oct. 6.

Certified firearm and archery skills instructors will provide safety and live-fire shooting instruction. All gear and supplies, including shotguns, pellet rifles, shells, bows, arrows, targets, and eye and ear protection will be provided by KDWP's "Pass It On" and Hunter Education programs.

Youngsters ages 11 through 16 may participate. Participants are required to pre-register for the event. Students are not required to have completed a hunter education course, but prior completion is preferred. The event will begin at 12 p.m. at the COE area between Marina Cove and Neosho Park, approximately 1/4 mile west of the COE office at the west end of the dam. Check-in and a free lunch will be provided by QU between 12 p.m. and 12:30 p.m. Instruction will then begin at 12:30 p.m. and end at approximately 5 p.m.

Those interested must pre-register before Oct. 6. Persons interested in registering or learning more about this special event may phone Brent Konen, Council Grove Wildlife Area manager, at 620-767-5900.
