

Young Stockmen’s Academy members graduate at KLA convention

The fifth class of the KLA Young Stockmen’s Academy (YSA) officially graduated at the close of the KLA Convention in Wichita. Resflor Gold from Intervet/Schering-Plough partnered with KLA to host 20 young members for a series of four seminars throughout the year. This class brings the total number of YSA graduates to 99. Attending the KLA Convention, the final session of the year, YSA members received their Masters of Beef Advocacy following an in-depth training session led by NCBA Executive Director of Communications Daren Williams. After the “commencement” exercise,

YSA members took part in the policy process by participating in committee and council meetings, where members discuss issues affecting their business interests. During the first session in February, attendees were exposed to the legislative process, advocacy training and KLA services. The second installment took the group to western Kansas in July, where they toured beef operations to gain a better understanding of various industry segments. YSA members went to the Kansas City area in October to learn more about the agribusiness and retail beef industries during the third tour of the year. The 2010 class includes Alex Acheson, Woodbine; Jason Brown, Dwight; Trista Brown, Santa; Glen Collinge, Hamilton; Kelly DeDonder, Reading; Rebecca Farha, Yates Center; Brandon Harder, Haven; Drew Hedges, Burden; Dirck Hoagland, Leavenworth; Kory Josefiak, Rozel; Brady Larson, Sharon Springs; Ryan Locke, El Dorado; Trevor Lundberg, Frankfort; Trey Miser, Wichita; Brandon Oleen, Falun; Wrenn Pacheco, Manhattan; Austin Rathbun, Lorraine; D. J. Rezac, Rossville; Tera Rooney, Santa; and Rylan Woolfolk, Protection.

Watershed Association to hold 60th annual meeting

“Making a Difference for Sixty Years” is the theme for the 60th Annual Meeting of the State Association of Kansas Watersheds (SAKW). This year's meeting is to be held in the Holiday Inn Holidome in Topeka on January 20-21, 2011. Barb Oltjen, SAKW president from Robinson, will preside over the meeting that will bring together representatives of the 85 watershed districts in Kansas, many state and federal agencies, organizations, and individuals. The annual meeting will kick off by having Governor-elect Sam Brownback give the keynote address titled “Kansas The Next Generation.”

Additional topics of the first day will cover such things as: “Private Dam Owners, Concerns and Needs” and “WRAPS, Now and Into the Future.” Four different agencies (DWR, KWO, SCC, and NRCS) will give update reports covering current and future program challenges. The SAKW business meeting will look at several resolutions to support legislative and program funding initiatives. The final session for the afternoon will be a legislative update by state representative Tom Moxley and state senator Jay Emler.

The evening session of the first days activities will be the annual Legislative Banquet where watershed district representatives can dine and converse with legislators as they begin their challenging task of creating policy to guide Kansas through the next political year.

Day two of the annual meeting will begin by hearing from Col. Anthony Hofmann, Commander Kansas City District of the US Army Corps of Engineers. Topics covered during the second day will be; “Emergency Action Plans, What Comes “Watershed Districts, Getting it Right with the IRS;” and “Tort Claims and other Watershed Liability Issues.”

Information on annual meeting registration, motel reservations, resolutions listings, and the meeting agenda can be found on the SAKW website at www.sakw.org. Additional questions about the annual meeting can be directed to Herbert R. Graves Jr., SAKW Executive Director, Phone: 785-922-6664, Fax: 785-922-6080 or by e-mail at sakwwatersheds@sbcglob al.net.

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

It is less than a week until Christmas, but it appears that holiday trade is in full force. Trade volume and trading activity was definitely down this week.

There was some good news from the government last week with the passage of the ethanol and biodiesel blender's credits. With ethanol production generally profitable and at record levels, it probably won't have much impact on the corn, but it should be a big boost for the biodiesel industry and for soybean oil demand.

Natural gas had a big break, but it appears that the March contract has, once again, avoided making a new low. I call it a moral victory for the bulls and look for higher prices over the next couple of weeks.

The March corn gained 22½ cents for the week, thanks to solid gains on last Monday and Friday. Friday's close was the fourth best of the year and the market is now within striking distance of the contract high. Technical indicators show the market is overbought, but they can stay that way for a long time. This market will at least test the $6.17½ high at some point next week.

Export sales were better at 810,900 MT for the old crop. That is still not great, but it is a step in the right direction. A couple more good weeks will keep USDA from cutting the export estimate. One of the reasons for the slow corn exports is that DDG exports are replacing some of the corn exports, so "corn" is leaving the country; it is just in another form. With weekly ethanol production setting new records on a regular basis, this trend is going to continue for awhile. There are some analysts that believe USDA is underestimating corn usage by the ethanol industry by 400 million bushels. If that is correct, there is going to be a lot more DDG's on the market and our ending stocks are going to be much tighter than the current estimate of 832 million.

It is not too late to buy call options against grain you have already sold or contracted. By the time we get to the June supply and demand report, the stocks to use ratio could easily be at a level that, in the past, has resulted in new all time high prices. Buy the July corn $6.50 - $7.50 bull call spread for 25 cents or less.

The wheat market was the short leg of the spread trade two weeks ago, due in part to drier weather and improved harvest activity in Australia. For the week, the March KW lost 20½ cents. Last week's correction took the March KW down to $7.98 1/2, which is just above the 38% retracement for the last leg up. Since the market tested that support two days in a row, and since it held both times and was able to make a strong close on Friday, that tells me that the correction in the wheat is probably over. The overbought condition of the market has been relieved, and the market is now set to make another run higher.

The technical setup of the market isn't the only reason for strength in the wheat. Exports are strong and improving. Last week's total of 899,300 MT was impressive and should encourage USDA to increase the export estimate in the January supply and demand report. The other important factor in the market is that worldwide weather issues are still wreaking havoc on the wheat. It is drier in Australia, but how much damage has already been done? And more importantly, when will we get moisture in the HRW Belt? The wheat market fundamentals are getting more bullish, so we have to prepare for the coming move higher. At the moment my favorite trade is buying the July KW $9.00 - $10.50 Bull call spread and selling the $7.00 put.

The March soybeans gained 28 cents last week, virtually all of which came on Monday. Some better weather in S. America and some slower exports contributed to the weakness we saw most of the week. When it comes down to it though, one week of poor exports like this week's 84,600 MT, really don't matter. Even a month of numbers like that wouldn't be all that bad. The recent export sales pace was unsustainable and all we really need each week is about 200,000 MT. What we really have to pay attention to now is the crush rate and soybean oil exports. The passage of the bio-diesel blender's credit will create competition for our soybean oil, which may be one of the reasons we have been seeing such large soybean oil sales. In the big picture, the world demand for vegetable oil has not slowed, and is not going to slow, at the current price level. Setbacks are for buying, and plan on higher prices.

The 50-day moving average held on a closing basis in the February live cattle and we had an outside day higher on the charts Friday. Technical indicators are oversold and the market is due for a bounce anyway. Follow through strength on Monday has to be bought. The cattle on feed report came out as expected with 103% on feed, 106% placed, and 109% marketed. We can't keep placing more cattle than a year ago on feed when the cow herd is shrinking and we can't keep killing cows at the rate we are for much longer. The fundamentals for the 2nd half of 2011 will be very, very bullish and they aren't bad right now either.

Since the February LC held where they had to and got a bounce, plan on seeing new contract highs soon. Be very patient with hedges. As for the feeder cattle, I understand that nobody wants to buy calls when the market is near $120, but you should at least think about it and if you can't avoid the temptation of getting short, at least do it with a put option.

By Justin Knopf, Salina

I hope you find yourself in the midst of a joyful Christmas season. Of course, the day to day activities and chores on the farm continue, but during this week of Christmas, it seems many farms also serve as host for family gatherings. Perhaps the family farm is the gathering spot of choice because of the sentimental "journey home" for generations who no longer find themselves nearby on a day to day basis, or perhaps it's simply because Grandpa, Dad, or whichever family member is on the farm just can't get away from doing the chores to go anywhere else. Whatever the reason, it's always special to see the extra bustle of activity and carloads of family and friends back on farms in rural communities everywhere.

The heart of this season is the celebration of the birth of Jesus and one of the ways we celebrate His eternal gift to us is giving to others. Gift exchange is often a tradition at Christmas family gatherings, but the spirit of giving takes other forms as well. Local charities such as food banks, the Salvation Army, and all the many other organizations that care for those in need are in need themselves, perhaps more than ever.

It is a common tradition for businesses to give "appreciation gifts" to customers this time of year, and, being farmers, we are fortunate to do business with many fine organizations. One of the companies we do business with took a unique approach to their appreciation gift this year that I feel compelled to share. In my opinion, they completely captured the Christmas spirit of giving and matched it with an opportunity to help those in need. Rather than sending us a pen, clock, or some sort of object, they sent a letter expressing the true spirit of Christmas along with an opportunity to have a donation given by them on our behalf to a local charity. It was a meaningful gift to me and an excellent reminder of the eternal vision we need to always have.

Whether you find yourself on the farm or in the city, I hope you are surrounded by family and friends who embrace with you the true celebration of Christmas. I hope each of us can find opportunities this season and in the coming year to give in meaningful ways and may it be a reminder that while we put a lot of ourselves into our farming operations, the only things in life that are truly eternal are the invisible things.

I wish you a Merry Christmas as you spend time celebrating and investing with your loved ones in some of the invisible things of life.

Cattlemen look for lessons in $130 million swindle

The collapse of a mid-west cattle brokerage company that owes hundreds of ranchers as much as $130 million could result in some going under and has others wondering if regulatory changes are needed to prevent similar swindles in the future.

Federal agriculture officials filed a complaint last month against Indiana-based Eastern Livestock Co., LLC, accusing it of bouncing checks for livestock purchases and failing to maintain an adequate bond to cover its debts. The company owes money to about 740 ranchers in 30 states, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Three of those owed money have filed a lawsuit to try to force Eastern into involuntary bankruptcy.

The average loss of about $175,000 per rancher is enough to put some out of business, said David Scott, president of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association. Many ranchers, unaware that Eastern's checks were no good, tried to pay bills and ended up writing bad checks themselves, ranchers said.

Eastern made money mainly by buying calves throughout the South and selling them to feed lots in big cattle states, including Texas and Oklahoma, where they were fattened for slaughter. Federal regulations require such companies to have sufficient bond to cover two days of business activity, although the bond can be less if the two-day amount is more than $75,000.

Eastern's bond was only $875,000 even though it was buying what Lane Broadbent of KIS Futures in Oklahoma City described as "monstrous amounts" of cattle each week. Broadbent is among those who advocate an escrow system in which money from cattle buyers would be held in an account until the animals were delivered, and then ranchers would be paid. Now, Broadbent said, some ranchers deliver animals before a buyer's check has cleared. They should be more careful, he said.

"Something's got to change or this is going to be a problem for a long time," Broadbent said. "There's too many rotten people for it still be dealt with on a handshake. We've trusted too much."

The USDA ordered Eastern to increase its bond from $875,000 to $1.15 million earlier this year, but the company ignored the order and the agency doesn't have the authority to suspend companies' operations when they don't have adequate bonds. Scott said the government needs greater enforcement power, but others said they didn't think that was the answer in a fast-moving business like cattle trading.

"It's just impractical," Texas rancher John Welch said. "When you're in business there's not enough time — too many deals to try to keep up with it."

Welch said he sold a couple of hundred head of cattle to Eastern about a month before it collapsed. His check, unlike scores of others, didn't bounce.

Many cattle producers still make deals using "faith and a handshake," just like they've done for decades, said Welch, who manages up to 10,000 head of cattle on Spade Ranches across West Texas. The key, he said, is "try to know who you're doing business with."

That didn't help Lynn Hirsch, of Shelbyville, Ky., who never got paid for 51 Holstein steers that Eastern bought from him. Hirsch wouldn't say how much he lost but said the animals "were worth a lot." He described Eastern as "a large, reputable company" and said he didn't know how future fraud could be prevented.

"I wish to hell I knew," Hirsch said. "Livestock people have worked on a handshake. We deliver cattle and trust that we'll get payment in the next two to three days by mail. I just don't know what could be done."

But, he also said a stockyard in Lexington,

Ky., has a new policy requiring that all cattle be paid for before they leave the yard. He suspected it was a result of the trouble at Eastern.

As of Nov. 22, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Grain Inspection, Packers and Stockyards Administration had documented $81 million in returned checks that Eastern issued between Nov. 3 and Nov. 9. It had received 250 claims totaling $7.4 million against the company's bond. The Justice Department is investigating.

But while ideas are being tossed about, those in the industry said they have no sure-fire answers on how to prevent similar problems in the future.

"I don't think anyone knows enough yet to say, 'Where do we go from here?'" said Ross Wilson, president and chief executive officer of Texas Cattle Feeders Association.

"There are a lot of people asking similar questions, and I have not heard any good answers yet."

American Gelbvieh Association to celebrate 40th anniversary

The American Gelbvieh Association (AGA) is making plans to celebrate its 40th anniversary during their upcoming annual convention January 5-10, in conjunction with the National Western Stock Show in Denver, Colo. Gelbvieh members will have a full schedule of activities including committee and annual meetings, election of board of directors, a special 40th anniversary celebration, NWSS activities and will conclude with the national Gelbvieh and Balancer® show. All convention activities and meetings will be held at the AGA headquarters hotel – Red Lion Hotel on Quebec Street in Denver.

The theme chosen for this year's event is "The Passion Lives On." As the traditional 40th wedding anniversary gift is a ruby and the ruby symbolizes passion, this theme is fitting for the AGA's celebration.

"This theme represents the passion and dedication of the AGA, the generosity and commitment of members throughout the past 40 years, and will ignite our passion for the next 40 years and beyond," commented Al Knapp, American Gelbvieh Association president.

A special 40th anniversary celebration and social will be held on Saturday, January 8 starting at 6:30 p.m. During this event, the AGA will recognize the 35- to 40-year members of the association.

"The American Gelbvieh Association is honored to recognize 48 breeders who have been active members for at least 35 years. These members have served and continue to serve the breed through untiring efforts and dedication," said Frank Padilla, AGA director of breed promotion. In addition, the American Gelbvieh Foundation will unveil a new Gelbvieh print, commissioned by renowned livestock artist C.J. Brown, Lindenwood, Ill. The original print, as well as the first three artist proofs, will be auctioned off as part of the anniversary celebration and social.

The AGA will also honor two outstanding members who have contributed greatly to the AGA – 2011 Member of the Year Bob Hart, of Hart Farm Gelbvieh in Kansas City, Kan., and 2011 Hall of Fame inductee Bill Clark of Post Rock Cattle Company in Barnard. One of the primary purposes of the annual convention is to conduct business and plan for the direction of the AGA and the Gelbvieh breed. The majority of the AGA committee meetings will be held on Friday, January 7. The AGA annual meeting is set for Saturday, January 8 at 3:00 p.m. During the annual meeting, association members will elect the Board of Directors. The following six candidates have been nominated to fill five open positions on the AGA Board of Directors: Ken Flikkema, Bozeman, Mont.; Bob Hart, Kansas City, Kan.; John Huston, New Carlisle, Ohio; David Martin, Judsonia, Ark.; Butch Stucky, Salina; and Grant Thayer, Ramah, Colo. The Saturday evening social will culminate with the Breeder's Choice Gelbvieh Bull Futurity "Bulls in the Ballroom" event. The champion Gelbvieh futurity bull will be selected from the three finalists, with the initial futurity voting taking place earlier that day, starting at 10:00 a.m. in the Stadium Arena at the NWSS.

New this year is the People's Choice Balancer Bull Futurity. The initial voting and final selection of the champion Balancer futurity bull will also be held on Saturday, January 8 at 10:00 a.m. in the NWSS Stadium Arena.

The 2011 National Gelbvieh Sale will be held on Sunday, January 9 at 1:00 p.m. at the Livestock Center at the NWSS. The sale features 25 elite Gelbvieh and Balancer lots including open heifers, bred heifers, herd sire prospects, flush opportunities, and pick of the herds.

Additional NWSS activities include several national shows. The national junior Gelbvieh show will be held on January 8 starting at 7:30 a.m. in the Stadium Arena with Doug Satree, Montague, Texas, slated to judge. The national pen bull show is set for Sunday, January 9 at 8:00 a.m., judged by Bob Tiedman, North Platte, Neb. Gelbvieh activities conclude with the national Gelbvieh and Balancer Ring of Gold show on Monday, January 10 at 8:00 a.m. and evaluated by Chris Mullinix, El Dorado.

For more information or convention registration for the American Gelbvieh Association annual convention and 40th anniversary celebration, or the Gelbvieh activities during the National Western Stock Show, please visit www.gelbvieh.org or call 303-465-2333.

New field guide to help farmers manage insects

Crop growers and consultants now have a new tool at their disposal for managing insects.

Crop Insects of Kansas is a field guide released this fall by Kansas State University Research and Extension's Department of Entomology. "It's a good reference for integrated management of insect pests in all the major crops across Kansas," said Jeff Whitworth, crop entomologist with K-State Research and Extension. The guide contains full-color pictures and descriptions of both insect pests and beneficial insects at different stages of development. The field guide focuses on the identification and management of crop insects, but not on insecticide use since recommendations for insecticides change frequently. The insects are categorized by the crops they affect for easy reference.

Whitworth said the goal in creating this field guide was to modify the popular Insects in Kansas guide specifically for crop producers and consultants. He hopes this new field guide will be something they can keep in their truck for a quick and handy reference.

Copies of Crop Insects of Kansas cost $11.40 and can be previewed at local county Extension offices. They can be ordered by going to www.ksre.ksu.edu/library or by e-mailing orderpub@ksre.ksu.edu.

Kansas Graziers Winter Conference January 15

The Kansas Grazier's Association (KGA) will hold its Winter Conference on Saturday January 15, 2011 at the Geary County 4-H/Senior Citizen's Center at 1025 South Spring Valley Road in Junction City.

The primary topic of the day will be Mob Grazing, and the keynote speaker will be Greg Judy of Clark, Missouri. Greg and Jan Judy run a grazing operation on 1400 acres of leased land using Holistic High Density Planned Grazing to graze cows, cow/calf pairs, bred heifers, horses, hair sheep, and goats.

The Judys have developed a successful system to get into the grazing business by leasing land, employing high density grazing, and grazing other people's livestock. In 2001, Judy wrote a book titled, No Risk Ranching: Custom Grazing on Leased Land, which gives a complete breakdown of the methods they used to build their own operation from scratch. In 2008, he wrote a second book, Comeback Farms: Rejuvenating Soils, Pastures, and Profits with Livestock Grazing Management. In addition to "Introduction to Mob Grazing", Judy will discuss animal performance and multi-species grazing with cattle and sheep.

Registration begins at 8:30 a.m.; and costs $35 for the day which includes lunch. The conference flyer, a mail-in registration form and driving directions can be downloaded and printed from the Kansas Rural Center website at www.kansasruralcenter.org.

For more information contact Mary Howell at 785-292-4955, or (cell) 785-562-8726; or the KRC office at 785-873-3431 can help with registration questions.

Sponsors include the Kansas Rural Center, Kansas Farmers Union, Kansas Center for Sustainable Agriculture and Alternative Crops, and Kansas Grazing Lands Coalition.

On Jan. 1, 2011, the tax would have escalated to pre-2001 levels at 55% and an exemption level of $1 million. According to Foglesong, this would have caused many family-owned operations to sell off portions or all of their assets to pay for the tax. For example, Scott Bennett, a junior at Virginia Tech University and an active participant in his family's Virginia cattle operation, Knoll Crest Farm, said the uncertainty of the death tax has made it nearly impossible for his grandfather to make plans for their farm's future. "With a $1 million exemption and a 55% tax, we would need to sell most of our assets just to keep part of the operation in the family," Bennett said. "This would be a death sentence to family farms, ranches and small businesses. Thank goodness the Senate passed some relief for family farms and ranches like Knoll Crest Farm. Now, I just hope the House follows suit and passes the Senate's bill." The Senate passed the amendment with an 81-19 vote. It will now move to the House for consideration before being sent to President Obama to be signed into law. Foglesong said the "ball is in their court" referring to the House. He said a "speedy" vote is necessary to prevent an undeserved death sentence to many family-owned farms and ranches.
