Feast of the Fields set for June 5

Eating a meal in a corn field isn't what it used to be. It is no longer only about lunch on a combine during harvest or wildlife snacking on grain at dusk. This meal involves china, white linens, and a chef.

Feast of the Fields is a culinary adventure set in the midst of a ripening field of Kansas corn. Hosted by River Creek Farms, a fourth-generation family farm, the event showcases a gourmet offering of foods and wines produced locally and prepared artistically. This year it is planned for Sunday, June 5, 2011.

Today, 98% of farms in America are family operations. Across our nation, farmers are producing the finest-quality and most abundant foods in the world.

Using meats, produce, and wines from the Flint Hills region of Kansas, Feast of the Fields highlights farm-fresh food in a natural setting. As guests arrive they are welcomed at a reception featuring exquisite hors d'oeuvres and Kansas wines. Soft background music is played by an accomplished musician. Even with the four-star treatment, the attire is casual and the atmosphere is comfortable.

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

The metal markets continue to climb relentlessly. Both the gold and silver markets made new highs last week, and although we are definitely due for some kind of correction, I wouldn't want to try to pick a top in either of those markets. One of the reasons for the strength in the precious metals is the persistent U.S. dollar. Last week the Dollar Index futures took out the 2009 low of 74.27, which leaves the 2008 low of 71.05 as the next downside target. Our government continues to print money as fast as they can and they are now faced with raising the debt ceiling again. With no end in sight to the rapid increase in money supply people are turning to hard assets, which they hope will be a store in value.

Spread traders were active in the grain markets last week. The biggest loser was the old crop corn. The soybean/corn ratio had gotten to a historically wide level and we saw that correct significantly this week. There is also a great deal of concern about corn planting delays and how that might affect acreage and yield, so that generated a lot of buying interest for the December contract and encouraged bear spreading in the corn. So, for the week the July corn lost 5 cents while the December gained 9½. The July soybeans gained 46½ cents and the November gained 42¼. The July KW gained 67 cents while the July Chicago gained 54¼ cents.

One would expect to see the Kansas City wheat gain on the Chicago wheat due to the poor production prospects in the HRW Belt. Insurance adjusters are out in force and it is not a pretty picture. Wild fires in Texas continue to make the news and chances for rains are not very good. I guess the chances for rain are pretty good in some wheat producing areas, like where they are trying to plant spring wheat, but for us in HRW country the chances are slim. The Kansas crop could be as small as 225 million bushels. Of course a lot of that is due to the exceptionally low planted acreage number, but we are going to have a poor yield to go with it.

It will be important to watch the weather in the HRS region because planting problems there will have numerous market affects. First of all lower than expected acreage will make the supplies of quality milling wheat very tight a year from now and any lost acreage will likely be planted to something else, which will affect the price action in the new crop corn and soybean markets. Traders will be watching the rain in the corn belt as well. More wet weather will keep the bear spreads working in the corn, because the loss of a million or two acres and a sub-trend line yield would make the new crop funda-mentals just about as bullish as the old crop. Keep in mind that in 2008 it was the new crop that led the way higher because of the fundamental setup of the market. Lost corn acres would likely go to soybeans, which would in turn make the bull spreads in the soybean work much better since the new crop fundamentals would suddenly be much less worrisome.

The cropland is all gently sloping and easy to farm. This is a productive and attractive farm. There are about 22 acres alfalfa. The rest of the cropland will be planted to soybeans.

1,991 ACRES FLINT HILLS GRASSLAND AUCTION
THURSDAY, MAY 19 — 7:00 PM
Auction Location: Community Building (Swope Park) COTTONWOOD FALLS, KANSAS
(From Hwy 177, turn east at Casey's Store. Swope Park is ½ block east.)

AUCTIONEER'S NOTE: The OK Ranch is steeped in history and tradition. 3 generations of family ownership has its roots in the Arnold Berns family. Change is timeless and the only thing that is constant. Now is the opportunity to begin your chapter of ownership. The opportunity may not present itself for another 3 generations.

This sizable bluestem pasture is the perfect fit for today's beef producer. Run 1000 yearlings for 90 days or 280 cows for 180 days or 200 cows year round! We are privileged to offer this grazing unit! All under one fence, easy access, no improvements to maintain or pay taxes upon. This could really make for a very efficient grazing program.

With record low interest rates, & record high beef prices, take a look at this opportunity. We look forward to showing you this property and having you attend the auction!

PROPERTY LOCATION: From intersection of Hwy 77 and Hwy 50 at Florence, Ks. Continue approximately 1 mile northeast on Hwy 50 to Yarrow Rd, North 4 miles on Yarrow to Rd 160th. The intersection of Yarrow and 160th is the northwest corner of the property. OR from Hwy 77 and Hwy 150 intersection northeast of Marion, Ks east 3 miles on 150 to Yarrow Rd then 4 miles south to Yarrow and 160th. Watch for signage.

LEGAL: All of Sec 21, 28 excepting the SE/4 of the SE/4, and the N/2 and SE/4 of Sec 20, and E/2 of Sec 29 excepting the SW/4 of the SE/4: all in Twp. 20 S, East of the 6th PM Rge 5 Marion Co Ks.

TAXES: $3,789.12 (based on 2010)

MINERALS: Sellers mineral rights transfer to the buyer, no production is on the property.

GENERAL DESCRIPTION: Rolling Flint Hills of Native Bluestem and mixed grasses. There are average to good 4-5 barb wire fences with mostly steel posts. The bluestem is the traditional bronze and burgundy colors this winter, which tells one of its quality and purity. The old homestead quarter in the northwest corner appears to be where there was previously cultivated land, the balance is all native bluestem and mixed grasses. Flowing from north to south a spring fed draw navigates through the middle of the pasture. The current leasee has had the lease for the past 24 years and he states that the spring has flowed every year but one out of those years. There are 3 ponds on the south side and 3 windmills on the north side to top off the watering of this Tall grass pasture. All acreage is under one fence — forget patching or fixing cross fences. This is truly a beautiful part of the Flint Hills.

TERMS: Earnest money deposit day of auction is $200,000.00. Title insurance and title company closing fees shall be split between the buyer and the seller. Property leased for 2011. Lease and 2011 income will transfer with deed to new owner. Buyer will be responsible for 2011 taxes. Windmills and real estate are sold as is with no warranties or guarantees. Looking at the charts, the wheat has the most bullish set up. Many analysts have pointed out the head and shoulders bottom in the December Chicago wheat. That formation suggests a move well above $10.00, so the Kansas City wheat would be looking at a move to at least $11.00 in the long run. In the short run we should look for the July KW to move to at least the $10.10 area and probably to the $10.65 area before harvest. The corn, especially the old crop, suffered some technical damage on Thursday with the big outside day down. There wasn't really much follow through selling on Friday, and the December had a very good close, but the chart formation is still bothersome to me and a move down to the top of the open chart gap in the July contract at $7.31 is still in play. I still like the overall fundamental outlook of the corn market, but the charts bother me a little bit right now. I still think breaks are for buying, but those breaks could take the July contract back to $7.00 at some point.

The technical outlook for the soybean market is improving. The July soybeans closed above the very critical $13.80 resistance on Friday, which opens the door for a move back to the March highs. It helps that exports are still solid despite all the talk of Chinese cancellations. If demand picks up, watch out, prices will shoot higher.

The cattle on feed report was mostly as expected. On feed numbers are at 105%, which is good for corn demand. Placements were a touch lighter than expected at 103% and marketings were a little bigger at 104%. We are basically killing cattle as fast as we can. The export market is on fire and we are becoming a net exporter because we are being out bid on the world market for beef. That is pretty bullish for cattle, but it tells us that our economy is still not what it should be.

Goats visit Anthony Middle School in Manhattan

Carol Bachofer, gifted teacher for Anthony Middle School in Manhattan and Art Howell from Mulberry Meadows in Brookville describe the characteristics of prize-winning goats to the students.

One of the goats delivered twins on the AMS football field during sixth hour. The kids were named Susan B. and Anthony.

By Madeline Marshall,
Anthony Middle School
seventh grade student

On March 31st Ms. Carol Bachofer, Anthony's Gifted Teacher, visited Mr. Myers' and Mr. Pickler's seventh grade science classes to talk to the students about Boer goats. She spoke to them about the genetics used to help breed the best goats possible and the cull (bad) characteristics of a show goat. The students were given packets with more in-depth information about these characteristics and used them to find answers to the questions on their worksheets.

After this, Ms. Bachofer brought out the Mulberry Meadows Hearty Goat Chili, which only some were brave enough to sample. The idea of eating the goats that "weren't good enough" was just too much for some.

The next day Ms. Bachofer and her partner in goat breeding, Mr. Art Howell, from Mulberry Meadows, Brookville, brought in two prize winning goats, along with two pregnant goats that were expecting to deliver that day. The students labeled good characteristics of the goats and asked plenty of questions. During sixth hour, one of the goats had her two babies right on the AMS football field.

Their names were officially Susan B. and Anthony, but they had plenty of secondary names; the girl was also Paco and the boy was also Colin and Touchdown. We are expecting a second visit sometime after May 10th.

Now a couple of weeks old, Anthony is a healthy, growing kid.

National Goat Expo set for fall of 2012

The National Goat Exposition committee has been hard at work and is pleased to announce that the National Goat Expo will take place on October 7-11th, 2012 at the Iowa State Fair Grounds in Des Moines, Iowa. This five-day event will have something for all goat breeders in a one-stop format.

For the dairy goat breeders there will be daily sanctioned shows (some dual) for all breeds of dairy goats. Seminars by Dr. Curtis Young of Iowa State University, will be given on Goat Reproduction and Dr. Noah Litherland from the University of Minnesota, will be presenting feeding information on Dry Doe and Kids in the Nursery.

Demonstrations will also be given on how to use goat milk to make soap, lotion and simple cheeses.

Boer goat breeders will have a sanctioned show and seminars on various topics. The other meat breeds, such as the New Zealand Kiko, Spanish, and Savanna will be showcased and seminars will be held to learn more about these increasingly popular breeds and how to raise them.

The committee hasn't forgotten the fiber goats either. Several breeds of fiber goats such as Angora and Pygora will be at the exposition, along with demonstrations on how to shear and spin goat fiber into yarn will be held during the five-day event. In addition to seminars, demonstrations, shows and showcases there will be vendors such as Hoegger Goat Supply and Sydell, plus many more. You will be able to purchase everything goat-related.

The National Goat Exposition of 2012 will certainly be a huge event for goat breeders and enthusiast that they hope to have year after year. For more information contact Jen Parrish at (515) 402-6124 or email at nationalgoatexpo@yahoo.com.

Wool added to body armor provides greater protection

Wool, that wonder fabric used in the finest of fashions, has a new use – making body armor even more bullet-resistant.

Researchers at the Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology (RMIT) school of fashion and textiles discovered that a blend of wool and Kevlar, the synthetic fiber widely used in body armor, was lighter and cheaper and worked better in some conditions than Kevlar alone.

The RMIT textile technologist, Rajiv Padhye, Ph.D., said the standard bullet-proof vest was generally made of Kevlar, a dense, strong and expensive fiber. For military use, a heavy ceramic plate provides greater protection over vital areas.

A Kevlar vest typically comprises some 36 layers of Kevlar fabric; however, it loses about 20 percent of its effectiveness when wet, requiring an expensive waterproofing process.

“What we did was kept the Kevlar but added a wool yarn into this,” he said.

The increased friction of the wool in a tight weave means a vest comprising 28-30 layers of fabric provides the same level of bullet resistance as 36 layers of Kevlar.

“Because wool fibers expand naturally in water by up to 16 percent, the wool-Kevlar blend actually becomes more effective in wet conditions,” he said. “The result is a cheaper bullet-resistant vest that orks even better when it’s wet.”

That’s a significant matter, considering Kevlar costs about $70 a kilogram compared with about $12 a kilogram for wool.

Bonnie Young tends to her goats at the K-State Youth Meat Goat Producer Day on March 26. Bonnie belongs to the North Osage 4-H Club in Osage County. She and her brother Calvin bottle fed two Boer goats that they plan to take to the Osage County Fair this summer.

Art Howell, Mulberry Meadows, Brookville, was elected president of the KMGa on March 26 at the Annual Kansas Meat Goat Association Meeting, held at Weber Hall, KSU, Manhattan. Mr. Howell is looking forward to working with the many goat producers in Kansas during his tenure. Mr. Howell served as a board member of the Kansas State Department of Agriculture and the Kansas State Fair from 1990 to 1995.

Howell hopes to be able to develop a better working relationship with the Kansas State Extension Service. The 4-H Meat Goat Project is very popular and KMGa will be seeking ways to help the youth of Kansas succeed with their meat goat projects.

KMGa members and other interested goat producers are encouraged to visit the official website kmgonline.net to find out the newest developments in the goat business. Counties and other groups sponsoring youth goat shows are urged to send their information to the KMGa webmaster, Mindy Young, Myoung5@unl.edu, for posting on the KMGa calendar of events.

Recropping decisions to be made on failed wheat acres

A combination of record heat, dry soils, and high winds in March and April has sapped the wheat in many areas of Kansas this year, especially where the wheat emerged late and is very small in the western areas, said Jim Shroyer, K-State Research and Extension crop production specialist.

There is still time for wheat to recover to some extent if rains come in April, Shroyer said, depending on the stage of growth and how severely the wheat has been stressed.

“Maximum head size is already determined where the wheat has jointed, but kernel weight can still respond to good weather and can make up for some of the loss in yield potential,” he explained.

“Even if the main tillers have died, secondary tillers can still begin growing this spring if the crown is still alive and the crop receives some rain and cool weather. In 2007, for example, most or all of the main tillers of wheat in central and eastern Kansas were in early April by a hard freeze. Some of this wheat produced secondary tillers after the main tillers had died, and the wheat yielded 10 to 20 bushels per acre in some cases. But the soil had good moisture and weather conditions for the remainder of the spring were ideal in that case,” Shroyer said.

Where the wheat looks bad, Shroyer said producers have a dilemma. What’s the yield potential of that wheat? Is the damage irreversible, or will improved conditions help? It might be a good idea to start planning now for all possibilities, he said.

Producers who have their wheat crop insured cannot take any action until the insurance company loss adjuster releases it. After that, there are a few options from an agronomic perspective, Shroyer said.

Wheat that has failed could be harvested for forage, he said. However, there is probably not enough forage present on short, drought-stressed wheat to be worth cutting, he said.

If producers plan to plant wheat again in the field this fall, they should just leave the failed crop in place over the summer to prevent blowing, then kill the volunteer wheat in early summer before planting next fall, he added.

If the field has been released by the insurance adjuster and the field dies or is terminated, producers could no-till a summer crop into the wheat residue, assuming there is enough moisture and there are no herbicide carryover problems that would prevent it, Shroyer said.

“Producers may be able to plant grain sorghum, summer annual forages, or possibly soybeans into the residue, depending on moisture availability and any cropping restrictions from herbicides applied to the wheat. Foxtail millet is a short-season, summer annual forage that could work well in this situation,” he explained.

If the stand of wheat is spotty, with part of the field alive and part dead, then it’s probably best to spray the field with glyphosate before planting the summer crop, Shroyer said.

Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay trade moderate. Demand strong for dairy and grinding alfalfa, moderate to strong for alfalfa pellets, moderate for stock cow hay and grass hay. New crop alfalfa demand is strong as buyers and brokers try to contract hay to cover needs locally and are even looking to surrounding states. Corn planting is active across much of the state. Alfalfa producers are watching fields closely for aphids and weevil, spraying is active when the wind lets up over the all but the northwestern counties. If you have hay for sale or pasture to rent or need hay or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange www.kfb.org/hayandpasture/default.htm

Bake and Take Month
participants create
homemade goodwill

Residents in eight Smith County adult care homes were the recipients of baked goodies from the Movers and Shakers Family Community Education, as part of the annual Bake and Take Month, co-sponsored by the Kansas Wheat Commission and Home Baking Association. The Movers and Shakers FCE won first prize in the annual Bake and Take Month giveaway.

"Two members prepared the cookies and four of us assembled cookie packages and made the deliveries," said Edith McClain, president of the Movers and Shakers FCE. McClain, a resident of Gaylord, added: "This is the first year the FCE has prepared and delivered cookies to the care facilities."

Members of the FCE include McClain, Nadine Holmes, Carol Haresnape, Judy Tucker, Norma Larson and Helen Carter. The ladies met at the Smith County Courthouse on March 24 to assemble the packages; delivery took place the same day.

The Movers and Shakers FCE receive a "Book Bundle" from the KWC and HBA. The books include HBA's "Home Baking with Friends," the KWC's "Kansas Gold" 50th Anniversary book and Kansas Farm Bureau's "Celebrate Wheat," the latest of Kailley's Ag Adventures.

Nearly two dozen clubs and individuals shared goodwill and goodies with hundreds of Kansans during Bake and Take Month. Participants shared their stories with the Kansas Wheat Commission. Here are a few:

Linda Beech, Garden City, shared "Whole Wheat Peanut Butter Bars" with her son, John Walter, a student at K-State. "As he headed back to college at the end of spring break I tacked a container of those bars into his basket of clean laundry. A double treat from Mom!"

Several members of the Jayhawkers 4-H Club of St.

Marys made more than 20 plates of cookies to share with members of the community. They made regular and low-sugar cookies to accommodate special diets and give residents a "pick me up."

In Pratt County, 17 4-H members and three adult volunteers gathered for a day of baking activity, first reviewing basic baking protocol, then splitting into groups pairing younger members with more experienced bakers. The participants shared cookies, bars, rolls, pretzels and pizza with businesses and supporters of the Pratt County 4-H program.

Solomon Valley FCE baked and delivered home-baked items to five agriculture businesses, in Smith County, to share with retired farmers and active farmers.

Mary Ellen Howell, McPherson, made cookies for the Monitor FCE meeting and for a regional meeting of her church. "My mother was a WheatHeart when the program began," she writes. "I have been involved most years since then."

Bake and Take Day is a tradition that began more than 40 years ago by the Kansas WheatHearts, as a way for bakers to show goodwill in their communities, encourage community baking, build positive awareness of the wheat industry and promote the nutritional value of wheat.

"Volunteers of all ages are keeping Bake and Take Month a tradition in their communities by showing they care with a baked food and a visit. It is always interesting to read the stories about their activities and the type of wheat food they share with others," says Cindy Falk, nutrition educator for Kansas Wheat and coordinator of Kansas Bake and Take Day. "Many of the young bakers are learning together, from experienced bakers. This activity helps their baking skills 'rise' to a whole new level."

2011 Tree of the Year: Shumard Oak

The last Friday in April is designated as Kansas Arbor Day. At least one day a year is set aside for us to ponder the benefits of trees. Trees provide social, economical, communal and environmental benefits. To learn more about trees, the International Society of Arboriculture has a good website at www.treesaregood.com.

Each year a tree for Kansas is selected to inform the public about its qualities. 2011 is the year of the Shumard oak. It now joins the ranks of Lacebark elm, Chinkapin oak, and Caddo maple to name a few. Go to the Riley County, K-State Research and Extension website to see a list of all the Pride of Kansas selections under the header "Recommended Plants for Kansas."

An example of what a Shumard oak looks like is the Pin oak. Lots of Pin oak trees have been planted. Only, Shumard may be a better choice for our growing conditions. Shumard tolerates a higher soil pH than the Pin. Pin oaks often develop iron chlorosis, making the leaves appear yellow. Iron chlorosis is the condition of a plant not able to take in enough iron for normal growth.

Like a pin oak, Shumard is a pyramidal tree at least in its youth. Leaves are similar with a good russet-red to red in the fall. The leaves stay on longer into the fall continuing the display. This tree can get to a similar height and spread of many oaks. It generally is shorter than a Pin. Shumard ranges from 40 to 60 feet tall and wide. For many landscapes, its best designed location is providing background behind the home.

It is tolerant of soil conditions. Considered a drought-tolerant species, it is also found growing along streams and ponds. Locally, there is one growing in the Manhattan city park. The city park soil doesn't drain real well in that particular tree location. To view the tree, it is located in the northwest corner by the tennis courts along N. 14th street.

You can find out more information on this and other horticulture topics by going to the Riley County, K-State Research and Extension website at www.riley.ksu.edu. Gregg may be contacted by calling 785-537-6350 or stopping by 110 Courthouse Plaza in Manhattan or e-mail: geyeston@ksu.edu.

PEAQ helps alfalfa producers capture top dollars for crop

With high-quality alfalfa capturing premiums of nearly $50 a ton, it's time for producers to start measuring their alfalfa in order to determine the best time to harvest the first cutting, said Mike Hutjens, University of Illinois professor of animal sciences emeritus.

"There is a science to harvesting quality alfalfa hay," Hutjens said. "It starts with a good, old-fashioned yardstick and a trip to the field, and ends with a little work on the Internet."

Once measurements and evaluations are obtained in the field, Hutjens recommends that producers enter this information into the PEAQ (Predictive Equations for Alfalfa Quality) website. This site calculates the relative forage value (RFV).

RFV is similar to relative forage quality (RFQ) for the first cutting of alfalfa of the season, Hutjens said. First-cutting alfalfa needs to be harvested in the bud stage as soon as the RFV/RFQ in the field reaches 180 to 190. Researchers from Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota recommend this should be done in order to achieve high-quality hay and haylage and to set up the cutting schedule for the rest of the growing season.

With corn grain prices over $7 a bushel, high-quality forage can reduce the amount of corn grain and protein supplement needed as a source of rumen fermentable carbohydrates and protein sources. For each one-point increase in RFV/RFQ, the alfalfa hay equivalent may be worth $1 to $1.10 more per ton. For example, an RFQ of 140 could be valued at $154 per ton compared to alfalfa with an RFQ of 180 valued at $198 a ton on a hay equivalent basis.

PEAQ uses plant height (measured in inches) and maturity (pre-bud, bud or flower stage) to estimate the RFV/RFQ. By determining the RFV of standing alfalfa, producers can more accurately gauge when to begin the first crop harvest, he said.

"You have to be ready to roll to most effectively use this method," Hutjens said. "Remember, the RFV drops about five points every day with good growing conditions. If it's 190 today, in 10 days, it could drop 50 points. And once alfalfa is cut, additional loss of points (typically 15 to 20 points) occurs between cutting and storing. Harvesting alfalfa can be an economically more important decision than planting corn when the alfalfa is ready to be harvested."

For more information, visit the PEAQ website at <http://peaq.triail.uiuc.edu/>.

KGLC adult range schools scheduled for August

Agendas and speakers are being firmed up for two adult range management schools organized by the Kansas Grazing Lands Coalition, Inc. (KGLC), said Tim Christian, coordinator for the non-profit group. The schools are located at Camp Wood YMCA, Elmdale, for the tallgrass region of Kansas, and in the mid-/short-grass region Camp Lakeside, Scott County State Lake, and The Nature Conservancy's Smoky Valley Ranch in Logan County. The schools run August 16-18 and August 23-25, respectively.

The theme for 2011 is Looking Past the Fence – rangeland watersheds from top to bottom. The schools are designed to meet the needs of ranchers, landowners, land managers, and anyone interested in understanding Kansas grasslands and how to balance economic viability and resource sustainability, he continued. Costs for the schools is $300 per person and includes course materials, lodging, meals and other incidentals involved while at the schools. Deadline for registration is July 15 – east and July 22 – west. Space is limited to 35 participants, so early registration is advised.

Christian said the fee is a great value when compared to other schooling people might attend, but even so, KGLC tries to offer every eligible rancher, college student, and agency personnel scholarship funds to reduce out-of-pocket costs. Scholarships range from $150 for ranchers and college students to $100 for agency staff. Registration and scholarship forms are available online at www.kglc.org.

2011 Range Schools. KGLC has hosted these two schools in different settings since 2005, so there is a history of providing attendees with high-quality education using a mix of ranchers, organization and agency staffs, and university specialists. They are able to create a real sense of connection with the grazing lands ranchers and others use to extract a living, Christian said.

A great emphasis has always been put on learning native grassland plants and then, to understand how to measure and monitor the seasonal grazing pressure on those plants to be able to predict healthy use and determine forage reserves, all to help the economic bottom line. Our instructors work one-on-one with attendees to answer questions and ensure that learning occurs and is retained. Co-sponsoring entities for the schools at this time include the Natural Resources Conservation Service, Kansas State University Extension, Fort Hays State University, The Nature Conservancy, Playa Lakes Joint Venture, Kansas Rural Center, Kansas Native Plant Society, and the Kansas Section of the Society for Range Management.

KGLC was organized in 1991 and as a non-profit its vision is regenerating Kansas grazing lands. The partnership meets its mission to regenerate Kansas grazing land resources through cooperative management, economics, ecology, production, education, and technical assistance programs through a variety of voluntary methods to reach landowners, ranchers, and other making decisions on grazing lands.

For more information on the 2011 range management schools, contact Tim Christian, KGLC coordinator, at 620-241-3636, e-mail tdchristian@cox.net, or Ken Sherraden, KGLC co-coordinator, at 785-922-7061, e-mail to kennethsherraden@sbcglobal.net.

Haviland Farmers Co-op president elected chairman of Kansas Grain and Feed Assn.

The Kansas Grain and Feed Association (KGFA) elected Stan Stark, president and general manager of the Farmers Cooperative Company in Haviland, as its new chairman last Tuesday during the organization's 115th annual meeting in Manhattan. Stark was appointed by the 16-member board of directors to serve his two-year term as Chairman through April 2013.

Stark is the 83rd industry leader to serve at the helm of KGFA. He also serves on KGFA's Board of Directors and Executive Committee. Stark previously served two-year terms as first and second vice chairman, respectively. "I am honored to serve the grain and feed industry in this role," Stark said. "I view this as a tremendous privilege and look forward to the many opportunities and challenges ahead."

KGFA members also elected Ted Schultz, general manager of Team Marketing Alliance in Moundridge, as their new first vice chairman. Pete Goetzmann, vice president of ADM Grain Group in Overland Park, was elected KGFA's new second vice chairman.

KGFA, established in 1896, consists of more than 900 member companies that include country elevators, subterminal and terminal elevators, feed manufacturers, flour mills, grain merchandisers and allied industries such as grain exchanges, equipment manufacturers, insurance firms and railroads. KGFA is proud to represent 99% of the federally or state licensed grain storage in the state of Kansas.

Governor Sam Brownback presented Gary Mundhenke with the Kansas Feed and Grain Association's Sunflower Award at their 115th annual meeting April 19 in Manhattan. The award is given each year to a member who has made a significant contribution to the industry or the KFGA and the winner is chosen by a committee of members. Mundhenke was instrumental in bringing the first in-house grain accounting software to Kansas. His systems are now used by hundreds of elevators across the region. Assisting with the presentation was Jerald Kemmerer, KGFA nominating committee chairman and immediate past chairman of KGFA.

Kade Funston was named champion junior showman for Dickinson County at the Wild Bill Kick 'Em Up Beef Shootout held on April 2 in Abilene.

Hayden Funston was named Dickinson County's champion intermediate showman at the Wild Bill Kick 'Em Up Beef Shoot-Out.
