

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

The October supply and demand numbers were largely as expected with a cut in corn production and ending stocks, an increase in soybean production and ending stocks, and no major changes for the wheat. What was interesting about the report was the reaction. The initial reaction was positive, but Wednesday close looked quite ugly. It really looked to me like we had every excuse to go and make new lows in the corn, wheat, and soybeans. That, however, is not what happened. Instead we saw solid gains on Thursday and follow through buying on Friday. The December KW traded above, and the December Chicago wheat closed above the 50-day moving average for the first time since June. The December corn traded at the highest level since July and the November soybeans traded above the 50-day moving average briefly and nearly made multi-month

There is nothing supportive about any of the supply and demand numbers. Ending stocks projections call for over 2 billion bushels of corn, over 1 billion bushels of wheat, and nearly 400 million bushels of soybeans. Supplies are far from being tight, but we have seen early harvest lows in both the corn and soybeans and the trend in the wheat is trying to turn up. It seems that we are seeing some money flow into some commodities regardless of the supply fundamentals. Trading funds are still short in both corn and wheat and with so many of those short positions now wrong we can see short covering extend the recent gains.

In the short run I am looking for the December corn to move up to $3.67. The December KW looks like it may head for $4.40 and if the November soybeans can ever crack the $9.75 level and close above the 50-day moving average, we will see a move up to $10.20. To do more than that we will have to see our strong demand pace continue, which will make the bears nervous.

The cattle market had another terrible week. There were new contract

Grass & Grain, October 18, 2016

lows in both the live cattle and feeder cattle futures and cash cattle traded below $100. All of the live cattle contracts are below the current cash price and all of the feeder cattle futures are below the current cash price. If the futures markets are correct, then we have more weakness ahead of us.

So far we have absolutely no indication of a change in trend. We have to sell bounces until we get some kind of a technical buy signal.

Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay trade continues to be slow. Demand light for all classes of hay, prices steady to weak. Several rounds of severe weather occurred in the eastern half of the state, with at least 8 tornadoes touching down Thursday afternoon, bringing a damper to the corn and milo harvest. Wheat planting continues, although some in western Kansas are dusting it in and additional moisture is needed to get it up and going. According to the U.S. Drought Monitor, abnormally dry conditions (D0) have crept back into approximately 20 counties in the southwest region of the state. If you have hay for sale, pasture to rent or need hay and/or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange: www.kfb.org/commodities/haypasture/index.html

Top Dollar Angus announces Seedstock Partnership Program for improved marketing

Top Dollar Angus, Inc. is pleased to announce its new Seedstock Partnership Program. With the fall sale season going strong, now is the perfect time to take advantage of this new opportunity. The Seedstock Partnership Program allows seedstock providers to elevate their Angus and Red Angus bulls and females that genetically excel in growth and carcass value potential. It will also allow seedstock breeders to offer their bull customers a value-added marketing opportunity through Top Dollar Angus.

Kenny Stauffer, Top Dollar Angus general manager, noted that this is a tremendous opportunity for program differentiation. "There is no better way for high-end Angus and Red Angus breeders to stand out from the crowd and to thank their customers for continuing to buy their bulls. This program will allow genetic providers to identify their elite growth and carcass animals, and bring added value to their bull customers by helping them become involved in Top Dollar Angus."

For a modest fee, seedstock suppliers who participate in the partnership program can incorporate the Top Dollar Angus logo into their sale catalogs, identifying each bull or female that meets required genetic specifications (top 25% growth and carcass traits.) The certification process is simple and involves providing the list of sale animals for review. Top Dollar Angus will then promptly return the list to the breeder, indicating which animals will qualify for the Top Dollar designation. In addition to the use of the Top Dollar Angus brand and logo, each breeder will receive credits to offset the herd enrollment fees for two to four of their top bull customers. It's a great way to reach out to customers and demonstrate how much you care about their calf crop marketing success.

"We have already signed up more than a dozen Angus and Red Angus seedstock breeders, and are seeing them use the enrollment credits to benefit their customers," said Stauffer. The Seedstock Partnership Program will allow a "top dollar" seedstock operation to stand out from the competition. By becoming a Top Dollar Angus Seedstock Partner and directly supporting your customers' involvement in Top Dollar Angus, you will be offering them a marketing advantage in today's challenging calf market. Top Dollar Angus has numerous buyers and feedlots that are willing to pay premium prices for high-end Angus and Red Angus feeder calves, but we need more qualified cattle every day to meet this demand. Top Dollar Angus will provide your customers with a better way to market their calves at market-topping prices, helping them attain a stronger return on investment with bulls they buy from you. This will keep them coming back to you — their seedstock supplier — for more Top Dollar Angus certified genetics.

Taking wheat out of the rotation? Think twice!

By Dale Strickler

I have been hearing a lot of people say how low wheat prices have them so discouraged that they plan to take wheat out of their rotations. Although that decision might appear to make economic sense, I would encourage you to take a second look at wheat. In fact, I am so sold on the virtues of wheat in a crop rotation that I would encourage those of you currently in a corn-soybean rotation to give it a try. A corn-soybean rotation honestly scares me. We are starting to see disease, weed, insect and nematode pressures (like Goss's wilt, sudden death syndrome, cyst nematodes, Palmer amaranth, etc) increasing in that short rotation and I am afraid this country is setting itself up for a disastrous epidemic. We didn't worry about Palmer amaranth until it was too late, now we have a mess. I agree that the economics of a wheat crop by itself look pretty bleak, if you utilize wheat as part of a whole system it can more than pay its way. So here are some ideas on making that wheat crop pay:

1. Plant wheat anyhow; if the price goes up this spring, you have the option of harvesting for grain. If the price remains low, consider the wheat as a cover crop and spray it out and plant your next crop. If you are in a corn-soybean rotation, wheat may be an excellent choice as a cover crop species after soybean and prior to corn or sorghum.

2. Manage wheat with the same management intensity as you do corn, and be pleasantly surprised at the results. Modern wheat varieties have a lot of yield punch if the management is present. Every year I hear of someone who exceeds 100-bushel wheat in my area of Kansas, even in years and areas where the local coffee shop agronomy experts say it is too dry (or too something) in that area to ever achieve those yields. Anyone in a 20-inch average rainfall area or better should be shooting for at least 80 bushel, if not 100. Confucius says, one who says it is not possible should quit annoying those who are doing it. Planting high populations (1.5 million seeds per acre) after the Hessian fly-free date for your area, giving it enough fertilizer

(P, K etc. to soil test recommendations, and yield goal x 1.5 to get a realistic nitrogen rate) and treating with a foliar fungicide are probably the biggest keys to wheat yield. If you pencil out the economics of 100-bushel wheat, it sure looks better than 40-bushel wheat.

3. Plant a double crop. While to many the standard double crop after wheat harvest is soybeans, this is actually one of the least agronomically sound options. Late planted soybeans make very little vegetative growth, and their harvest leaves little residue for soil protection. Also, if this is a corn-soybean-wheat rotation, adding in a double crop of soybeans after wheat means there is two soybean crops in three years. This is just asking for trouble with soybean insects, diseases and nematodes. Grain sorghum is an option that is much more tolerant of heat and drought than soybeans, and if it fails to make grain it can make for a good winter grazing. However, sorghum is susceptible to early frost and tends to deplete nitrogen availability, which can be an issue if the next crop is a nitrogen demanding crop like corn. Sunflowers are more drought tolerant than soybeans, and can tolerate early frosts much better than most warm-season crops. Sunflowers also have another huge advantage. It has been shown that it is quite feasible to grow a nice cover crop blend underneath a sunflower cash crop. Since only the tops of the sunflower plants are harvested, the cover crop (preferably shorter-statured species that do not interfere with harvest) is left standing after harvest. Cover crop species that have been used as a sunflower companion include legumes like sweetclover, cowpeas, and spring peas as a source of nitrogen, deep-rooted brassicas like Nitro radishes or Impact forage collards to break up compaction, spring oats or spring barley to create mulch, and buckwheat and mustards to attract beneficial insects and repel head moths. After harvest, the entire mix can be grazed if desired.

The sunflower/companion crop combination has been proven not only to be quite profitable as a cash crop, but the benefits to the next crop have also been quite impressive. Even more impressively, we have only just begun to scratch the surface of all the possible combinations of cover crops grown as companions to sunflowers and their effects on sunflower yield as well as impact on the succeeding crop.

4. Plant a forage after wheat. The options for planting after wheat are almost limitless. The most efficient plants at converting moisture into biomass are warm-season grasses. The highest biomass (and grazing yield) per inch of moisture are probably the sorghums, including forage sorghum and sorghum-sudan hybrids. Sorghum-sudan hybrids are the better choice for "green season" grazing where regrowth is desired. The best summer forage yield and quality is achieved with a BMR brachytic dwarf, which is much leafier and features faster regrowth compared to tall, stemmy hybrids. For a single grazing at the end of the growing season or for dormant season grazing, select a BMR photoperiod sensitive or BMR male sterile hybrid. Sorghums do have a risk of prussic acid poisoning, particularly immediately after a frost. BMR corn is probably the most palatable summer annual and has the best forage quality. It is rapidly becoming a favorite for grass finishing operations when grazed at tassel stage or before, because it can put on gain almost as fast as a grain diet. It does not regrow well after grazing, but has more cold tolerance than other summer annual grasses so it can greatly outyield other summer annuals when planting late in the summer. Pearl millet offers yield almost as good as sorghum-sudan, and has no prussic acid risk. Foxtail millet (German or White Wonder) is lower yielding than pearl millet but makes a rapid drying hay crop.

Japanese millet is very flood tolerant, making it a good choice for low-lying areas like terrace channels that tend to flood out other summer annuals. Teff can often be established by broadcasting, and also dries rapidly. Warm-season legumes can provide not only pasture but also nitrogen for the following crop. Since nitrogen-hungry corn is often the crop following wheat in the rotation, this can be significant. Sunn hemp produces more nitrogen and more biomass than any other annual legume, although it is less palatable for grazing than other legumes, and the fibrous stems can create planting difficulties. Cowpeas and mung beans offer high quality, drought-tolerant grazing. Guar is exceptional quality, highly tolerant to drought and is perhaps the most salt tolerant summer annual legume. Fenugreek also has exceptional forage quality and, curiously, has an odor similar to maple syrup. Okra is not a legume but a broadleaf that can still make excellent grazing. Cool-season forages can also be planted after wheat harvest. While traditional wisdom has told us these forages (like cereals, brassicas, and cool-season legumes) should be planted in August or September as they cannot tolerate summer heat, we have found that these species can survive July planting in a blend with warm-season species as an overstory, contrary to what we would assume about the nature of competition. Adding cool-season species to a warm-season blend can greatly extend the grazing season.

5. Cash in on the rotation effect. Numerous studies have shown that corn and soybeans yield much better in a three-year rotation including wheat than in a two-year corn-soybean rotation, leading to higher profit in the long term despite the lower return to the wheat crop itself. When cover crops have been included in this research, it has been even more profitable, even though most of these studies did not even include grazing as an income source. Including wheat in the rotation reduces problems like sudden death syndrome in soybeans (both corn and soybeans are hosts for the causal organism), soybean cyst nematode, Goss's wilt, gray leaf spot, charcoal rot (both corn and soybeans are hosts) and the list goes on and on. Although wheat is pretty ugly on the banker's spread sheet, it looks pretty good when it comes to boosting the yields of subsequent crops.

6. Plant "wheat plus". Just because you want the option of keeping wheat for grain doesn't mean you can't benefit from the power of diversity in your planting. You can add species that winterkill (like oats) or species that are easy to spray out later (like broadleaf crops) if you decide to keep the wheat for grain. This can greatly increase the grazing value of the mix, and improve the effect on the next crop. For example, you could add legumes such as crimson clover or balansa clover for nitrogen, or flax for snow-catch, or brassicas to break up compaction. While these will have limited growth compared to what they might do when planted earlier as usual, they can still improve on wheat by itself for a number of purposes.

7. Zig when they zag. If all the people who tell me they are not planting wheat this year carry out that intention, then the price of wheat may just go through the roof next year, because I assume every wheat farmer around the world is saying the same thing. Apparently some futures traders are thinking the same thing; take note of how much better 2017 new crop wheat prices are compared to 2016 old crop. All it takes is another drought in the Southern Plains to ratchet wheat prices back up.

The bottom line here, is that wheat can still improve your bottom line! Don't paint yourself in a corner by taking wheat out of your rotation in response to what may be a short term price situation.

Pig farmers connect farm to fork during October Pork Month

October became known as Pork Month because it marked the time of year when hogs were traditionally marketed. Today, it serves as a celebration to thank pork producers and share their stories with consumers.

"If you eat, you have a connection to a farmer every day," said Tim Stroda, KPA president-CEO. "October Pork Month is an opportunity to refresh the connection consumers have with farmers. Our mission is to produce safe, nutritious food in a responsible manner for families across the United States and around the world."

In 2008, pork producers adopted six We Care ethical principles at the National Pork Industry Forum. The pork industry follows the six guiding ethical principles of the We Care initiative to maintain a safe, high-quality pork supply.

Producers are committed to:

- Producing safe food;
- Safeguarding natural resources in all industry practices;
- Providing a work environment that is safe and consistent with the industry's other ethical principles;
- Contributing to a better quality of life in communities;

- Protecting and promoting animal well-being; and
- Ensuring practices to protect public health.

"The ethical principles define our values and who we are," Stroda said. "Consumers can be confident that the pork they eat was raised using these ethical principles."

Pork is the world's most widely eaten meat, representing 36 percent of all meat consumed, according to the USDA Foreign Agricultural Service.

According to Nielsen Perishable Group retail sales data for 52 weeks ending May 28, 2016, the top five most popular cuts sold are Center cut chops, Assorted Chops, Back Ribs, Spare Ribs and Tenderloins.

In terms of dollar sales, Center Cut Chops accounted for more than $1,002 billion, Assorted Chops $525 million, Back Ribs $411 million, Spare Ribs $237 million and Tenderloins at $177 million.

"Consumers recognize the versatility of serving pork in their homes," Stroda said. "Cook pork until the internal temperature reaches between 145 degrees and 160 degrees Fahrenheit, followed by a three-minute rest, this will ensure flavorful and tender pork on the plate."

Testing hay can save supplement dollars

Forage analysis can be a useful tool to determine the nutrient value of hay fed to animals this winter. Knowing the protein and energy content of harvested forages enables cattlemen to better match their purchased supplements with what is needed to meet the nutritional needs of the cows being fed.

Forages that are higher in quality as measured by crude protein also have higher energy levels. Just as important, higher quality forages are more rapidly digested in the rumen and as a result intake is greater when forage quality increases. For example expected consumption by a beef cow of low quality forages (below about 6% crude protein) will be about 1.5% of body weight (on a dry matter basis) per day. Medium quality grass hays (above 8% crude protein) may be consumed at about 2.0% of body weight. Excellent forages, such as good alfalfa, silages, or green pasture may be consumed at the rate of 2.5% of body weight per day. The combination of increased nutrient content AND increased forage intake makes high quality forage very valuable to the animal and the producer.

The value of forage testing can best be illustrated by comparing the supplement needed to meet the nutrient needs of cows in the winter. A 1,200-pound spring-calving cow in late gestation needs 1.9 pounds of crude protein in her diet each day to meet her needs and that of the growing fetus. If only offered hay that is 5% crude protein on a dry matter basis, her expected intake would be 1.5% of body weight or 18 pounds of dry matter, resulting in a crude protein intake of .9 pounds per day leaving the cow deficient one pound of crude protein daily. In the same situation if the cow was offered 10% crude protein hay her expected intake would increase to 2% of body weight or 24 pounds, resulting in daily crude protein intake of 2.4 pounds which meets her protein requirement. A protein supplement would be needed for the cow on 5% protein forage, while no supplement is needed on the cow receiving 10% protein forage.

The only way to accurately determine the protein and energy content of harvested forages is through forage sampling. For forage sample results be useful a representative sample of the forage lot must be submitted. As a rule of thumb collect core samples from 20% of the bales in a lot. A forage sampler is available to be checked out from all three Wildcat District offices in Altamont, Girard, and Independence.

For more information about forage sampling and/or supplementation contact me at the Altamont office at (620) 784-5337 or email me at rkmartin@ksu.edu For other resources available through our staff check out www.wildcatdistrict.ksu.edu, www.facebook.com/Wildcat, Extension.District.org or twitter.com/wed_livestock

25th Wabaunsee County Ranch and Range Tour deemed a success

In its twenty-fifth year now, the Wabaunsee County Ranch and Range Tour continues its successful run of presenting practical agricultural topics to area landowners and producers.

Wabaunsee County Cattlemen's Association and K-State Research & Extension - Wabaunsee County held the Ranch and Range Tour on Saturday, October 1st, a sunny and unseasonably warm day. The tour took place in pastures near Voland, southwest of Alma. Event emcee Erik Atkinson (host of Agriculture Today) and site hosts Drs. Ann Birney and Joyce Thierer welcomed the 74 tour attendees to their land.

Attendees rode flatbed trailers up to the first pasture where minimal maintenance has occurred. The ladies described how the land had been passed down through Thierer's family, and then detailed the extensive work they took on to clear invasive trees and brush through both mechanical and chemical means. In addition to pasture clearing, miles of new fence were built to divide pastures and replace existing perimeter fencing.

At the next stop, attendees viewed the fence line dividing two pastures; one pasture is primarily invasive woody species while the second pasture has undergone extensive efforts to remove those invasive species. The contrast in landscapes provided a suitable means to comprehend the widespread efforts by Birney, Thierer, and their contractors.

During this stop, District Conservationist Tracy Freeman from the Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) spoke on how Birney and Thierer utilized the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) to aid in their reclamation efforts. These landowners worked closely with Freeman to build a grazing plan and program of work that blended well with their goals to rejuvenate the native grasses while providing adequate habitat for several wildlife species. Birney reported their satisfaction with increased populations of deer, turkeys, quail, and prairie chickens.

Freeman also outlined additional ways the EQIP grant, a cost-share agreement, may assist landowners with natural resource concerns. Funding requests for the 2017 program are due to Freeman's office by November 18th, 2016.

K-State Range Management Specialist Walt Fick spoke at the tour's final stop. Dr. Fick is well versed in controlling invasive species in native grasslands. Fick provided the group ways to effectively control brush and tree species. He discussed various grazing systems, and provided insight for attendees on what to expect as they reclaim their own grasslands from invasive species.

Tour attendees then traveled in to the Wabaunsee County Fairgrounds for a brisket lunch served by SmokinG's Catering of Lake Wabaunsee. Morning refreshments were provided by Bank of the Flint Hills and Stockgrowers State Bank.

The tour was provided free of charge to all attendees on behalf of these gracious sponsors: Alma Co-op, Bank of the Flint Hills,

Buchanan & Company, Flint Hills Bank of Eskridge, Flint Hills Stone, Frontier Farm Credit, Harveyville Seed Co., J.B. Pearl Sales & Service, Kaw Valley State Bank & Trust, Manhattan Commission Co., Miller Ranch Equipment, Rezac Livestock Commission Co., Stockgrowers State Bank, Valley Vet Supply, Wabaunsee Co. Conservation District, Wabaunsee Co. Signal-Enterprise.

Education materials provided to tour attendees are available to the public by visiting the Extension Office (first floor of Courthouse in Alma, 215 Kansas Ave).

District Conservationist Tracy Freeman discussed the EQIP program at the 25th Wabaunsee County Ranch and Range Tour.

Area ranches earn wins at Mill Creek Ranch Rodeo

Sixteen ranch teams from across the region competed in the 29th annual Mill Creek Ranch Rodeo hosted by the Mill Creek Cowboy's Association October 1 in Alma. Teams of four cowboys and/or cowgirls competed for the fastest times in four events: cattle sorting, calf branding, cattle doctoring and trailer loading. Proper technique and animal welfare is also required; a judge can disqualify a team not following the event rules. Teams are awarded cash prizes for winning individual events and performance-based points are accumulated throughout the competition to determine the overall rodeo winners. Overall winners were also awarded prizes sponsored by Zoetis Animal Health and Cargill Animal Nutrition.

Winning the cattle sorting event was Bar JL &

Rockin' MK Ranches of Dwight and Paxico. Arndt & Bailey Ranches of Emporia and Cottonwood Falls finished in second place. Rockin' S of Riley finished third.

Nelson Angus Farms of Leonardville claimed first place in calf branding. A team from Stuewe Ranch of Paxico earned second place. Rezac Land & Livestock of Onaga finished in third place.

The cattle doctoring event was won by Rockin' C Ranch from St. Marys. Rezac Land & Livestock won second place and Arndt & Bailey Ranches placed third.

The fastest team in trailer loading was Rezac Land & Livestock. JC Livestock & Lyons Ranch from Junction City and Alta Vista claimed second place and Bailey Ranch from Cottonwood Falls captured third place.

Claiming the overall title was Arndt & Bailey Ranches. Second place overall was awarded to Nelson Angus Farms. Earning the third place overall spot was JC Livestock & Lyons Ranch.

Ranch teams placing in the overall competition are eligible for an invitation to the Flint Hills Beef Fest Ranch Rodeo held next August in Emporia.

Since 1986 the Mill Creek Cowboy's Association has provided equine and agricultural-based learning and recreational activities for families in Wabaunsee and surrounding counties. Membership is open to any interested family or individual with a one-time fee of $100. More information about the association can be found on the association's Facebook page, www.facebook.com/MillCreekCowboys, or by calling association president Earl Stuewe, Paxico.

K-State specialist gives tips to improve feed consumption by newly weaned calves

As spring beef calves are beginning to be weaned, it is the producer's responsibility to help make that transition as smooth as possible. Improper weaning can result in poor growth, which may stay with the animal through its life, according to Kansas State University animal scientist Justin Waggoner.

"I break down the weaning process into three stresses the calf is dealing with," said Waggoner, who is a beef systems specialist with K-State Research and Extension. The first and most obvious is maternal separation; the second is moving to a new environment and social structure; the third is the need for a calf to become accustomed to new and unfamiliar feedstuffs as it's transitioned from a diet of grass and milk to a total mix ration or starter pellet in a different environment.

He provided tips to help ease the transition.

* Many calves are raised in a grassland environment. Getting them adjusted to a feed bunk is one of the most important things a producer can do in the weaning process. If they do not eat properly there's an increased risk of disease.

* Feeding both cows and calves a small amount of a supplement or the weaning ration out of a bunk prior to weaning when the calves are with the cows can be a good way to acclimate them to those feeds. The cows may consume most of the feed, but the calves are up there getting exposed to the bunk.

A study at the K-State Agricultural Research Center at Hays showed that where calves had exposure to a feed bunk, either through a dry lot or pasture method, a higher percentage of them approached and ate from the bunk in the critical first week of weaning than calves that had never been exposed to a feed bunk before, Waggoner said.

"The results tell us previous exposure to the feed bunk really matters," he added. "This is especially important as newly weaned calves are brought into a typical feedlot environment or even a set of pens. Just that adjustment can help in making that successful transition from being at their mother's side to being in a different environment."

The ration

Waggoner referenced a series of studies called the K-State Hays weaning feed management protocol, a step-by-step process used to wean calves so it would be standardized across different treatment groups. It transitioned the calves from a grass and milk diet to some sort of a total mix ration.

Weanlings are often used to feedstuffs such as grass and hay, which are not rich in nutrients, so producers must find a way to balance the familiar feedstuff with new, nutrient-rich feeds.

The dry matter intake on calves is often about 1 percent of body weight, Waggoner said. The Hays protocol suggests that producers offer the calf 0.5 percent of its body weight of concentrate-based 75 to 85 percent total digestible nutrients or TDN ration. Try to limit silage and other familiar feeds. So, the calf is offered half of 1.0 or 0.5 percent of body weight of a weaning ration or pellet and half of 1 percent of body weight of good quality grass hay.

Positioning the feed is as important as the feed itself. Put the hay the calves are most familiar with on top of the feed ration on the first day.

The second day the ration should be increased to around 0.7 percent of the body weight and keep the hay the same. Put the hay on top of the ration.

On the third or fourth day, increase the amount of feed, but not the hay. At this time, put the ration on top of

Days seven through ten of weaning, the goal is to have a calf eating 2 percent to 2.2 percent of its body weight – maybe even 2.5 percent."

"We are trying to build a transition into the calves as they move into new feeding rations in a stabilized way," said Waggoner, noting that this regimen balances the need to transition the calves and ensure they have enough nutrition. Often weanling calves are fed as much as they will eat which can lead to problems later.

"It is important to keep the calves eating because there are many times where we create more problems for ourselves in a weaning program by getting ahead of the calves and offering them too much feed," Waggoner said. "The calves eat really strong one day and then the next day they back off and the intakes go up and down."

Make sure calves are effectively prepared for the weaning transition, he said. Adequately preparing them to make that transition should pay back in terms of health and the ultimate lifetime performance of that calf as it moves to the next phase of the production cycle.

USDA issues safety-net payments to farmers in response to 2015 market downturn

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced that many of the 1.7 million farms that enrolled in either the Agriculture Risk Coverage (ARC) or Price Loss Coverage (PLC) programs will receive safety-net payments due to market downturns during the 2015 crop year.

"This fall, USDA will be making more than $7 billion in payments under the ARC-County and PLC programs to assist participating producers, which will account for over 10 percent of USDA's projected 2016 net farm income. These payments will help provide reassurance to America's farm families, who are standing strong against low commodity prices compounded by unfavorable growing conditions in many parts of the country," said Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack. "At USDA, we are standing strong behind them, tapping in to every resource that we have to help. So far in 2016, this has included creating a one-time cost share program for cotton ginning, purchasing about $800 million in excess commodities to be redirected to food banks and those in need, making $11 million in payments to America's dairy farmers through the Dairy Margin Protection Program, and reprogramming Farm Service Agency funds to expand credit options for farmers and ranchers in need of extra capital. As always, we continue to watch market conditions and will explore opportunities for further assistance in the coming months. For producers challenged by weather, disease and falling prices, we will continue to ensure the availability of a strong safety net to keep them farming or ranching."

Unlike the old direct payment program, which issued payments during both weak and strong market conditions, the 2014 Farm Bill authorized the ARC-PLC safety net to trigger and provide financial assistance only when decreases in revenues or crop prices, respectively, occur. The ARC and PLC programs primarily allow producers to continue to produce for the market by making payments on a percentage of historical base production, limiting the impact on production decisions.

Nationwide, producers enrolled 96 percent of soybean base acres, 91 percent of corn base acres and 66 percent of wheat base acres in the ARC-County coverage option. Producers enrolled 99 percent of long grain rice and peanut base acres and 94 percent of medium grain rice base acres in the PLC option. Overall, 76 percent of participating farm base acres are enrolled in ARC-County, 23 percent in PLC and one percent in ARC-Individual. For other program information including frequently asked questions, visit www.fsa.usda.gov/arc-plc.

Payments are made to producers who enrolled base acres of barley, corn, grain sorghum, lentils, oats, peanuts, dry peas, soybeans, wheat and canola. In the upcoming months, payments will be announced after marketing year average prices are published by USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service for the remaining covered commodities. These include long and medium grain rice

(except for temperate Japonica rice), which will be announced in November, remaining oilseeds and chickpeas, which will be announced in December, and temperate Japonica rice, which will be announced in early February 2017. Up-land cotton is no longer a covered commodity.

The Budget Control Act of 2011, passed by Congress, requires USDA to reduce 2015 ARC and PLC payments by 6.8 percent. For more information, producers are encouraged to visit their local Farm Service Agency (FSA) office. To find a local FSA office, visit <http://offices.usda.gov>.

USDA works to strengthen and support American agriculture, an industry that supports one in 11 American jobs, provides American consumers with more than 80 percent of the food we consume, ensures that Americans spend less of their paychecks at the grocery store than most people in other countries, and supports markets for home-grown renewable energy and materials. Since 2009, USDA has provided $5.6 billion in disaster relief to farmers and ranchers; expanded risk management tools with products like Whole Farm Revenue Protection; and helped farm businesses grow with $36 billion in farm credit. The Department has engaged its resources to support a strong next generation of farmers and ranchers by improving access to land and capital; building new markets and market opportunities; and extending new conservation opportunities. USDA has developed new markets for rural-made products, including more than 2,500 biobased products through USDA's Bio-Preferred program; and invested $64 billion in infrastructure and community facilities to help improve the quality of life in rural America.
