

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

We finished the last full week of October on a soft note, but it looks like the corn, wheat, and soybeans will all finish the month of October higher than where they started. The harvest lows came early for the corn and the soybeans and the strength has continued through the first third of the fall. We have plenty of grain on hand, so supplies are not the least bit of a concern, but we are also contending with very good demand, which is one of the key elements keeping the markets supported. The other key is that there seems to be money flowing into some commodity markets because they got too cheap. Money flow can only support the market for so long, but for the time being the trends are generally up for the grains.

On the charts, I am still looking for a move up to $3.67 in the December corn. For the soybeans there are a lot of folks talking about a move up to the $10.60-$10.80 in the January contract, since we cleared the $10.20 resistance for a little bit. As for the wheat, I still don't have much positive to say about the wheat and if we do get some more strength in the corn and beans, I hope the wheat will at least be able to follow along.

Hedgers have to keep in mind that with such large supplies on hand, if the speculative buying/short covering dries up, there won't be anyone to fill the void. As the December of 2017 corn nears the $4.00 level, selling interest will grow and that market will probably have a very hard time clearing that resistance. The same thing applies to the $10.00 level in the November 2017 soybeans and the closer the July 2017 KW gets to $5.00 the more difficult it will be to pass up pricing some wheat.

The cattle market had a decent week. The December live cattle contract closed above the 50-day moving average for the first time since mid-August, which has the chart looking a little better. We still have to see the cash cattle market moving higher every week to keep the futures moving higher and it remains to be seen if that can happen. The increased volume on the Fed Cattle Exchange is encouraging. The cattle need less captive supplies and more free markets.

Grass & Grain, November 1, 2016

The feeder cattle did not look nearly as good as the live cattle this week and Friday's close was pretty poor. Traders keep looking at the live cattle futures and they aren't seeing much hope, especially when you get past the April contract. Next week will be an important test from a technical standpoint. The November feeders need to be able to hold above $120 for the week and a positive close for the week would be very encouraging.

Cover Crop Road Show planned November 17 in southwest Kansas

Agricultural producers can get an up-close look and discussion about cover crops in several southwest Kansas settings at K-State

Research and Extension's Cover Crop Road Show, Nov. 17. The U.S. Department of Agriculture-Natural Resource Conservation Service is the tour's co-sponsor.

The tour starts near Jetmore at the Brit Hayes Farm and ends with lunch and discussion in Ford.

The goal of the program is to foster dialogue between producers, university researchers and specialists, government officials, and industry, said A.J. Foster, K-State Research and Extension southwest area agronomist.

The schedule includes:

8:30-9 a.m. - Registration - Brit Hayes Farm, 22918 N. Hwy 156, Jetmore.

9-10 a.m. - Cover Crop in a Cow-Calf System, including Q&A and presentation on cover crop choices - Brit Hayes Farm.

10:30-11:30 a.m. - Cover Crop in a Stocker System, including Q&A and presentation on maximizing the benefit of cover crops - Dennis Bradford Farm, 28326 S.E. D. Rd., Jetmore.

Noon-1 p.m. - Grazing Cover Crop, including Q&A and presentation on the multiple reasons for using cover crops - 128 Rd. & Warrior Rd., Bucklin.

1-2 p.m. - Lunch and discussion - The Blue Hereford, 807 Main, Ford.

Participants are asked to register by Nov. 11 at www.southwest.k-state.edu or contact Norma Cantu at cantu@ksu.edu or 620-275-9164.

Kansas Rural Center Farm & Food Conference to feature NCR-SARE farmer forum

The Kansas Rural Center's 2016 Farm & Food Conference will offer a wealth of information around the theme of transforming our farm and food system to better meet future environmental, economic and social challenges. With three dynamic keynote presentations and over 25 breakout sessions, the conference promises to appeal to a broad spectrum of attendees. The conference will be held at the Four Points Sheraton Hotel in Manhattan on November 18-19, 2016. A complete agenda and registration information can be found at <http://kansasruralcenter.org/conference-2016>.

This year's conference includes a track sponsored by North Central Region-Sustainable Agriculture Research & Education (NCR-SARE), titled "The Farmer Forum." This track will highlight SARE-funded farmer research projects, with presentations by eight farmers from across Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska.

The farmers will discuss their research projects, which include creating a depository of local honey bee strains from feral hives; the economics of haying/grazing cover crops; economic analysis of cover crops, soil health and livestock; evaluating the roller crimper for cover crop control; mobile processing units for poultry; growing mushrooms with ag byproducts; and reduced tillage. NCR-SARE staff will also offer a workshop on grant writing for farmers who might be interested in applying for a SARE farmer/rancher grant, or other grant proposal.

Other workshops, presentations, and panel discussions will cover a wide range of topics, offering very practical how-to information for farmers and ranchers, community organizing ideas for civic leaders and engaged citizens, and policy analysis, discussion of issues, and inspiring models of paradigm shift around farming and food systems for all who attend.

Topics to be covered include opportunities in organics; pollinator habitat on the farm; specialty crop planning, production and profitability; the state of local foods in Kansas; weathering hard times on the farm; the food safety modernization act; stories of lessons learned and challenges overcome when starting out in farming; adding livestock to small and urban farms; the farm bill; grazing management for all seasons; spray drift impacts and implications; tree and forest management for climate change and biodiversity; farm transitions; food hubs; expanding opportunities for small-scale meat producers in Kansas; soil health and diversity; engaging Kansas policy makers; renewable energy and more.

The conference will feature three keynote speakers who will focus on the importance of pollinators and soil health to diversified farming systems, and the critical role of connections and networks in creating healthy, viable local food systems. Keynote speakers include entomologist and award-winning researcher, Dr. Jonathan Lundgren; author and Stanford University lecturer, Dr. Liz Carlisle; and senior pollinator conservation specialist Jennifer Hopwood.

Duane Goossen and Heidi Holliday, Kansas Center for Economic Growth, will also provide a special overview of the Kansas economy and the issues and challenges that the State Legislature and citizens of Kansas will face in 2017.

Lunch featuring locally sourced ingredients will be provided each day, offering conference attendees a hearty, healthy meal and time for networking and visiting exhibitor booths in order to connect with and learn more about the great people and exciting things happening in farming, food production and the environment, in Kansas and beyond.

A social hour with live music and locally crafted beverages and snacks will immediately follow the final workshop sessions on Friday, November 18. Don't miss this chance to continue the conversations of the day, catch up with old friends or get to know new ones in a relaxed and fun atmosphere.

Cost to attend the conference is $65 per day, or $120 for both days. Registration includes access to all presenters, lunch and snacks both days, and the Friday evening social hour. Student scholarships may be available.

To learn more about becoming a sponsor, registering, or scholarships at this year's conference visit <http://kansasruralcenter.org/conference-2016/>, or call Natalie Fullerton at 866-579-5469 Extension 701, or email info@kansasruralcenter.org.

The mission of KRC, a non-profit research, education and advocacy organization founded in 1979, is to promote the long-term health of the land and its people through research, education and advocacy that advance an economically viable, ecologically sound, and socially just food and farming system. For more information, visit www.kansasruralcenter.org.

Intercropping: intersection of soil health, production

Plant scientist Ann Bybee-Finley says her first field experiment was humbling. "I felt like a very small scientist in a very big world," she said.

Bybee-Finley researches intercropping at Cornell University. Intercropping is a complex practice of farming where different plant species are grown in the same space. Most conventional farmers only plant one crop per field or plot. This practice, called monoculture farming, is more convenient for farmers, but it can make the plants more vulnerable. For example, if one plant gets a disease, the others are likely to catch it. Weeds are more likely to find a home in spaces that are very similar. As a result, monoculture farming can be dependent on expensive synthetic chemicals to ward off weeds and diseases.

Droughts and other weather events can also damage entire monoculture fields. Bybee-Finley says a bad drought in 2012 shaped her vision of agriculture. "The stories of crop failure made me want to understand how to make farming practices more resilient, especially as climate change makes extreme weather events more frequent."

Intercropping gives farmers more options if one of their crops fails. "It's like a diversified stock portfolio," said Bybee-Finley. Plant diversity leads to more diversity below ground too. Plants that add organic matter and nutrients when they decompose replenish the soil.

In her experiment, Bybee-Finley planted four cover crops, which are plants that add fertility to the soil and protect it from erosion. She planted two grasses, pearl millet and sorghum, and two legumes, cowpea and sunn hemp. The grasses are well known for their ability to add organic matter to tired soils whose nutrients have been depleted by years of farming. Legumes are also good for the soil because their roots release nitrogen when they decompose. These cover crops are also a feed source for cows and other livestock, providing farmers another source of income.

In her experiment, Bybee-Finley found the grasses and legumes that grew at the same pace were more productive because they weren't competing for space and resources as much as plants that grew at different rates. On the other hand, she found that some plant combinations grew more, while others had more nitrogen.

"I'm sure there's a sweet spot," said Bybee-Finley, "There's so many unexplored avenues and questions to ask: Which species should I plant together? And how many of each?"

Bybee-Finley said the next step for this experiment is to see which plant combinations were the most nutritious for animals.

For experiments with lots of variables like this one, Bybee-Finley says you end up with a complex set of conclusions. "When you're looking at an entire system it makes it harder to have an immediate take-away," she said. "It takes longer to come up with a definite conclusion."

But Bybee-Finley is comfortable with complexity. "Diversity begets diversity," she said. "Agricultural science is beginning to look beyond the simplified strategy of planting only one crop per rotation."

For Bybee-Finley, intercropping is full of tradeoffs, and the life lesson of agriculture is that plants don't always behave the way you expect them to. "The miracle of biology is that plants, no matter what you do, will do exactly what they want to do."

Cornell University, National Institute of Food and Agriculture, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Hatch Project 2013-14-425: Expanding the role of cover crops in sustainable cropping systems, and NE SARE Graduate Student Project GNE14-073 funded this research.

This farm joins Tract 3 on the east, and the west half of Tract 2 on the north. 2015 property taxes were $1,335.98. Tract 2 is located from Clay Center, Kansas 12 miles west on Highway 24 to Buffalo Rd., then 2.5 miles north to the easement road which runs 1/4 mile east to the southwest corner of the tract.

NOTE: This auction includes good farms which have been in the Dunn and Hosler families for many years. Most of these farms have great habitat and offer great hunting. These farms are in compliance with FSA requirements. These farms are contiguous with only Cherokee Road dividing Tract 1 from the rest of the land. There is no east/west road between sections 20 and 29. 22nd Road runs along the center line of section 20 and along the north side of Tract 2. Part of Cherokee Rd. is not an all weather road. In the event of adverse weather all farms can be best accessed via Buffalo Rd., 22nd Rd., and then south on Cherokee Rd. We plan to sell the farms in the order they are listed unless additional information is brought to bear. If any changes are made it will be posted at our website.

For the sale bill, FSA tract maps and other FSA records, along with any changes, updates, or additional information go to kretzauctions.com or kansasauctions.net.

TERMS: The buyer is to pay 10% down day of sale with the balance due at closing. Title insurance and escrow fees to be paid 1/2 each by the seller and the buyer. Seller will pay 2016 and all prior years property taxes. 2017 property taxes are to be paid by the buyer. The Mark Germann family are the tenants and the farm is sold subject to their rights. All of the cropland will be planted to wheat. The new buyer is to receive the landlords 1/3 share of the wheat crop and will pay the landlords 1/3 share of related expenses incurred after closing. The new buyer will receive possession of the wheat ground at the completion of the 2017 wheat harvest. In order to allow the Germann time to remove hay and other property the buyer of Tract 2 will receive possession of non crop acres on January 1st, 2017 or at closing, whichever is the latter. The buyer of all other tracts will receive possession of non crop acres at closing. The new buyer will receive all mineral rights. The contract, deed and down payment are to be escrowed at Clay County Abstract & Title, 509 Court St., Clay Center, Kansas. Announcements made sale day are to take precedence over printed matter. Sellers and agents are not responsible for accidents. The auction firm is working for the sellers.

THE HEIENS LAND 445 ACRES

Dickinson County Farmland Offered in 3 Tracts

GENERAL INFORMATION:

These farms have been owned by the Heiens family for a number of years and offer the opportunity to purchase good, productive, well-located farmland in areas where land seldom changes hands. Take a Sunday afternoon drive and give these properties a look. Visit www.riordanauction.com for soil maps, FSA photos and other information.

TRACT #1: NE 1/4 of 24-12-1E. 108.58 acres tillable (all open), 2.4 acres CRP, 9.63 acres waterways and approximately 37 acres grass, timber and waste. Predominately Muir Silt Loam, Class I soil. 2015 taxes were $1,937.48 based on 157.6 taxable acres.

FSA INFORMATION:

	Farmland Acres	Cropland Acres	Wheat Base/Yield	Sorghum Base/Yield	Soybean Base/Yield	Corn Base/Yield

Limits? What limits?

By Steve Suther

Your cows may be held in by fences, but there are few limits on where you go or what you can do with the herd. Perceived barriers these days are just untested assumptions where imagination and technology are opening new gates.

Granted, the beef community is not flush with cash as it was a couple of years ago, but markets will emerge from these dark days, still rewarding premium quality, efficiently produced beef.

Your limit could be "knowing" what is not so. Folks in harsh environments often resort to operating herds of "tough" cattle that can take whatever nature dishes out – but also maintain a tough profile when chefs try to create a beef dish for consumers.

Arizona rancher Chuck Backus recently won a national award for challenging conventional wisdom and developing a herd in the high desert that can produce mostly Prime grade beef. Heat synchronization, artificial insemination (AI), genomic testing and good records were his main tools. Feed efficiency is the next target to acquire without backing away from quality. Solely solar powered since the 1970s, the ranch is always weighing new technology.

Genetics have become increasingly predictable, especially within breeds that access millions of data points, bolstered by individual genomic tests. The rest of cattle ranching is about to catch up, starting with high-tech breeding systems.

This year Japan-based Fujitsu unveiled its "Connected Cow" system that uses pedometers and transmitters to determine peak heat and project ideal AI time. Success for one-time breeding has increased from 44% to now 90%, the tures irrigated by sprinklers on biostat switches and "cloud-based systems in the internet of things." That concept spread from its start in "smart homes" and office buildings to micro-electronic machine control all over the world and even into space.

GPS and radio-frequency identification (RFID) tags have paved the way to automatically enhanced beef production. You may reject such high-tech ideas or simply remain on the fence while waiting to see what's next.

"Next" may be now, considering nose prints have been investigated for ID since 1921. We don't yet know of commercially available programs, but they're as unique as fingerprints and machine-learning systems claimed 94% accuracy company says.

If you're into crop farming as well as livestock, you know how global positioning systems (GPS) have increased efficiency in field operations.

in 2014. Now they're learning to include other biometrics like hair whorls further up the muzzle and actual face recognition.

Precision livestock systems that use "conventional" RFID, GPS and transmitters now allow companies to manage cows in rotational grazing cells. They monitor biomass and activate a cake feeder while opening the next gate or advance rolling fences like traveling irrigation pivots.

More than that, they are developing into systems that constantly fine-tune management to optimize health and welfare, pinpointing any problems that require human intervention on location the minute they show up, i.e., "real time." This technology is available today.

Chitale Dairy in India uses it to manage 200,000 cows on 10,000 family farms, matching cows with sires and the best local forages. More efficient grazing has opened thousands of acres for crop farming.

Applied analysis of "big data" from continuously monitored cows can ratchet tomorrow's beef herd toward higher efficiency and marbling while documenting environmental and animal welfare gains.

This isn't a dark future with corporate, robotic cowboys taking over from family ranchers, though we can expect the usual economies of scale. Tech companies will

The project is the first of its kind in the nation with a non-federal entity dredging sediment from a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) reservoir. Three million cubic yards of sediment was removed from the reservoir and placed in confined disposal facilities on USACE land and private property. These disposal sites will be returned to the preferred use of the respective landowners after dewatering.

"In 2012, we started the planning process to conduct this large-scale dredging project to restore water supply storage at John Redmond," said Director of KWO Tracy Streeter. "This project was vital for the area. The reservoir is a supply source to 19 communities and six industrial users, including Wolf Creek Nuclear Operating Station."

The removal of sediment has helped to ensure an adequate water supply to meet our citizens' demand in the future. Unfortunately past drought has shown the removal of three million yards will not solve all of the problems with the aging reservoir to help restore water supply storage lost to sedimentation.

"Completion of Phase I dredging operations at John Redmond does not signify 'mission accomplished' in efforts to restore lost water supply storage to satisfy projected demand into the future," Streeter said. "Additional work in the watershed above John Redmond to reduce the sedimentation rate, evaluation of other waters supplies as well as future restoration work to remove sediment within the reservoir is still necessary to ensure future water supply demand is met through the year 2045 in the Neosho River basin."

More information and details about the project will be shared at the upcoming Governor's Water Conference on November 14-15 in Manhattan, including a panel discussion involving Bryan Taylor, USACE-Tulsa District, Stan Ekren - GLDD and Matt Unruh - KWO Dredging Project manager.

For additional information on the dredging project or the upcoming conference, visit www.kwo.org.

U.S. pork industry seeks the pig farmers of tomorrow

As National Pork Month draws to a close, the Pork Checkoff is launching a new national awards program to recognize, inspire and connect the next generation of American pig farmers. Through Nov. 22, the National Pork Board is seeking applications from young producers to become one of the 2017 Pig Farmers of Tomorrow at www.pigfarmersoftomorrow.com.

The new award will recognize future farm leaders, ages 18-29, who intend to make pig farming their life's work and are committed to the U.S. pork industry and to raising pigs using the We Care<sup>SM</sup> ethical principles.

"One of the National Pork Board's primary responsibilities is to train and motivate future pork industry leaders," said National Pork Board president Jan Archer, a pig farmer from Goldsboro, North Carolina. "The award is designed to recognize and inspire youth who are investing their time and energy into responsible pig farming."

Up to three award recipients will be selected in the program's inaugural year. Winners will be invited to speak at National Pork Board events, including the March 2017 National Pork Industry Forum in Atlanta. They also will be responsible for providing content via the pork industry's social media program #RealPigFarming. To apply, applicants must be actively involved in raising pigs in the U.S. on a full- or part-time basis and be between the ages of 18-29 as of Jan. 1, 2017. Students currently enrolled in a college program also are encouraged to apply.

Applicants must have a completed Common Industry Audit or be willing to have one conducted and paid for by the National Pork Board. Applicants also must submit social media content defining a "day in the life" on their farm and upload up to ten photos with 140 character descriptions. The National Pork Board selection committee will name up to eight semi-finalists who will be interviewed by a panel of judges to select the finalists. Three winners will be chosen based on a combination of all application materials

"It is important for youth in our industry to make the right connections at the right time as they build a career in agriculture," Archer said. "As the winners share their personal stories, the program will not only recognize these future leaders, but will introduce them to experienced producers and networking opportunities."

Federal court dismisses dietary guidelines challenge

The Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine, an animal activist group which promotes a vegan lifestyle, filed a complaint in January against the USDA and Department of Health and Human Services saying that the groups allowed too much food industry influence on the Dietary Guidelines Advisory Committee's crafting of the 2015 Dietary Guidelines. The lawsuit has been dismissed by a federal court on the grounds that the complaint was non-justiciable and that there are no existing guidelines for determining how much industry influence is too much in circumstances such as this.

Kansas milk production sees 6 percent increase

Milk production in Kansas during September 2016 totaled 268 million pounds, up 6 percent from September 2015, according to the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service. The average number of milk cows was 146,000 head, 3,000 head more than September 2015. Milk production per cow averaged 1,835 pounds.

Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay trade continues to be slow. Demand moderate for alfalfa pellets, light for all other classes of hay, prices steady. Harvest continues to be a warm and dry one. Above normal temperatures have been felt across the state and several areas have not seen rain in almost two months. Some southwestern area producers are dusting in winter wheat, while others are holding off on sowing due to a lack of soil moisture. The dry and warm conditions have rapidly pushed the western half of the state into either abnormally dry or drought conditions once again.

According to the U.S. Drought Monitor, the abnormally dry (D0) category increased to 29.35 pct and moderate drought (D1) is at 3.07 pct. The NASS Kansas Crop Progress and Condition report for the week ending October 23, 2016 stated that pasture and range conditions rated 1 pct very poor, 4 pct poor, 25 pct fair, 58 pct good and 12 pct excellent. If you have hay for sale, pasture to rent or need hay and/or grazing, use the services of the Hay and Pasture Exchange: www.kfb.org/commodities/haypasture/index.html

Kansas cattle on feed up 10 percent

Kansas feedlots, with capacities of 1,000 or more head, contained 2.22 million cattle on feed on October 1, according to the USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service. This inventory was up 10 percent from last year.

Placements during September totaled 420,000 head, up 5 percent from 2015. Fed cattle marketings for the month of September totaled 360,000 head, up 13 percent from last year. Other disappearance during September totaled 10,000 head, unchanged from last year.

Allison Whitebread, Holland Sunflowers, led the reserve champion breeding doe at the Central Kansas Free Fair. She is shown with judge Rocky Swearingen.

USDA issues safety-net payments to Kansas farmers in response to 2015 market downturn

USDA Kansas Farm Service Agency (FSA) executive director, Adrian Polansky announced that many Kansas farms that enrolled in safety-net programs established by the 2014 Farm Bill will receive financial assistance for the 2015 crop year. The programs, known as Agriculture Risk Coverage (ARC) and Price Loss Coverage (PLC), are designed to protect against unexpected drops in crop prices or revenues due to market downturns.

"These safety-net programs provide help when price and revenues fall below normal, unlike the previous direct payments program that provided funds even in good years," said Polansky. "These payments will help provide re-assurance to Kansas farm families, who are standing strong against low commodity prices compounded by unfavorable growing conditions.

Statewide, about 101,000 farms enrolled in the 2015 ARC-County and PLC programs. Total dollars issued so far to Kansas producers through these contracts is more than $341 million.

"ARC-County payments can vary county to county because average county yields will differ," said Polansky. "PLC payments are determined nationwide based on the difference between a commodity's market year average price and the USDA-established reference price. This resulted in PLC payment rates per bushel of .09 for corn and .64 for grain sorghum."

More details on the price and yield information used to calculate the financing assistance from the safety-net programs is available on the FSA website at www.fsa.usda.gov/arc-plc and www.fsa.usda.gov/ks.

To the Summit(s)

I have been to the summit. Actually, two of them. Fortunately for me, these were not the kind which required mountain climbing gear or high altitude oxygen packs. These were summits of a different kind: One was the Governor's Summit on Agricultural Growth, coordinated by the Kansas Department of Agriculture, and the second was the K-State Ranching Summit conducted by the K-State Department of Animal Sciences and Industry. Both were excellent recent events.

The Ag Growth summit was kicked off by remarks from Gov. Sam Brownback and Secretary of Agriculture Jackie McClaskey. One of the things I liked about the organization of this meeting was the way that the planners organized the breakout sessions. First of all, there were lots of breakout sessions so we could weigh in on various topics. In the morning, there were sessions on the topics that one might expect such as wheat, beef, pork, sorghum, dairy, corn, soybeans and other oilseeds, feed and forage. There were also sessions on cotton, poultry, specialty crops, specialty livestock, equipment and technology, food processing, pet food, and Unmanned Aerial Systems (That speaker did not drone on...).

In the afternoon were what they called crossover topics. I liked this too, because so many modern issues don't fit in a little box. They transcend commodities and locations. These over-arching sessions included minor little issues (!) like water, consumer awareness and acceptance, workforce, transportation and logistics, barriers to entry, and global opportunities.

The breakout discussions were facilitated by the excellent staff of the Kansas Department of Agriculture, but the best thing is that they were just that: Discussions. They were not boring lectures. Each session had some informative documents for background, but most of the time was spent discussing the issues among ourselves. The department was really looking for ideas, input, dialogue, and prioritization from the Kansas citizens who participated. Ultimately, we suggested action steps in each area. I thought it was extremely well done.

The other summit I attended was a first for K-State: its first-ever ranching summit. K-State has offered other events such as Cattleman's Day and Beef Stocker Field Day for decades, but this was a first-time event to focus specifically on ranching. It too was quite well done. The purpose of this summit was somewhat different than the ag growth one, beyond the obvious difference that this one was about ranching specifically. This summit was not about gathering public input, it was more about profit for the individual producer.

Speakers included K-State ag economists as well as ranchers and other experts. One thought-provoking comment was about considering profit per acre, not production per cow. Essentially, this speaker's point was that smaller-framed, easier-carrying cows might generate less pounds per animal but net out at more profit per acre.

At the Ag Growth summit, the best comments I heard came from rancher Matt Perrier of Eureka. In the beef breakout session, he noted that Kansas has every segment of the beef industry, from purebred seedstock to cow-calf production to backgrounders to feedyards. He also made a comment that was a fitting and well-deserved compliment to farm and ranch families. It has to do with the skills, work ethic, and independent problem-solving which farm kids have to learn, growing up on a farm or ranch. Matt said, "Besides protein, we raise something else that the world needs: Kids who can think critically."

That was a mountaintop experience for me.

Letter to the Editor

I am writing this letter to recommend the re-election of Ron Highland as our State Representative of the 51st District. Ron Highland is a Republican and proud of his Kansas Republican values. I have noticed that his opponent's signs do not even mention that she is a Democrat.

Ron Highland is a gentle man. He makes himself available to listen to the positions and beliefs of his constituents and those appearing before the House Education Committee of which he is the chairman. He is not obligated to follow the dogma of any "special interest" group. But Ron is interested in providing the best possible education for the children of this state. He is not a KNEA member; he is not a school board member, he is not the wife or child of any of those persons and he is not under their control. Therefore he is in a position to evaluate and with objectivity weigh the decisions necessary for the improvement of the Kansas educational system.

Representative Highland understands public education in this state. He grew up the son of a mail carrier in Brewster, Kansas, population under 200 people. For twelve years in that small town he attended grade school and high school in the same building. Then he went to Kansas State University as an undergraduate obtaining a science degree followed by graduation from the School of Veterinary Medicine. He then practiced veterinary medicine and returned to K-State and received a doctorate degree in Veterinary Pharmacology. He served as an officer in the United States Army and was wounded in Korea. He worked for many years in research, development and marketing of veterinary drugs.

He probably won't tell you all of this but I can because it reflects upon the knowledge and experience that this man brings to the decision-making process presented in the Kansas Legislature. At age 69 he remains pro-life, a supporter of the second amendment and an advocate for his district. He wants results and achievement in the state's education endeavors which receive over 60% of the state budget. On average the state spends more than $13,000 per pupil per year in K-12 education. I submit that Ron Highland and his like should make the decision of how much is enough and not legislators beholden to the special interests that already receive 60% of the budget and are using our tax dollars to sue us for more tax dollars. Please join me in voting to re-elect Ron Highland on November 8, 2016.

Respectfully Submitted
Ed Pugh

Climbing the Summit

By Ron Wilson, Poet Lariat

I figured going to the summit meant climbing a mountaintop, Till you reach the highest point and you finally get to stop. Here in Kansas, we don't have any mountains all around, So climbing up the Flint Hills is the best that I have found. But we do have summit meetings – it's not a mountain climb, But a chance to come together in a concentrated time. We can focus on things like growing our ag economy, Or helping ranches operate with more profitability. We might get some new ideas or a different point of view, Greet old friends or have the chance to meet someone brand new. It's a chance to learn with others who share our strong beliefs On the importance of farming and those who're raising beef. So I made it to these summits, and like mountain climbers somehow, I've found that from these summits, I can see farther now. Happy Trails!
