Kansas Hay Market Report

The hay trade surged ahead again last week, with producers continuing to use up hay supplies. Grinder and dairy hay seem to be the preferred commodity. Prices remained steady for most classes of hay; however, the increase in the southwest grinder hay price we saw last week has been followed by higher prices for the grinder and pellet markets. The warm weather puts us in mind of spring planting and many are taking advantage to get field prep work completed. Drought conditions were unchanged for a third straight week. The abnormally dry (D0) category remained at 64.91 pct, moderate drought (D1) remained at 26.02 pct and the severe drought (D2) category remained at 6.68 pct. If you have hay for sale, and/or need hay, use the services of the Internet Hay Exchange: <http://www.hayexchange.com/ks.php>.

Grass & Grain Community Obituary

WENDELL "STEPHEN" ANDERSON

Wendell "Stephen" Anderson, 76, of Alma, Kansas died Tuesday, January 31, 2017, on his son's ranch, due to an accident while cutting down trees. He was a life-long resident of the Alma community.

Stephen was born on October 25, 1940, in the family's farm home near Alma, the youngest child of Oliver Andrew and Minnie Weber Anderson. He attended local schools and graduated from Alma High School in 1958. He joined the Army Reserves for a short time when he was 17. He was baptized as an infant in Immaculate Conception Catholic church in Burns, Kansas. Stephen accepted Jesus Christ as his Lord and Savior and cherished the biblical promise, "Whosoever believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

Stephen was a lifelong rancher and he had a passion for taking care of Anderson Ranch. He spent many hours every year cleaning up the ranch, cutting down trees and clearing out overgrown brush. He was very passionate about protecting American family farms. He attended, and organized, several picket lines and protests to protect farm and ranch life. Stephen was the keynote speaker during the 1980's farm crisis at a massive farm rally at the state capitol in Topeka. He served two terms as state spokesman for the Kansas American Agriculture Movement. He also assisted in stopping imports of livestock and grain from Canada.

Stephen was elected and served four years as a Wabaunsee County Commissioner and was selected by Kansas Governor, Joan Finney, to serve as her agricultural liaison in the state capitol from 1991 until January 9, 1995. He also served as the Governor's appointee on the State of Kansas Emergency Management Commission, Kansas Value Added Center, Kansas Rural Development Council and trade missions to Japan, Finland and Mexico. Stephen had many awards including the "Meritorious Service to Agriculture" by the Kansas Farmers Union and the "Preservation of Family Farm" by the Kansas National Farmers Organization.

Aside from ranching Stephen loved his family and he loved dancing. He danced the Polka, Two-step and Waltz with anyone who needed a partner and traveled all over the country to kick up his heels.

Stephen married Nancy Hubert on June 3, 1962. Together they raised their four children while farming west of Alma. They were later divorced.

He is survived by his children, Andrew Anderson, Matthew (Julia) Anderson, Nathan (Suzy) Anderson all of Alma and Catherine Anderson, Boynton Beach, Florida; twelve grandchildren and ten great-grandchildren; his siblings Lou Cromer, Mary Moege, both of Wamego, Larry (Ann) Anderson and sister-in-law Mary Elizabeth Anderson, both of Alma; and his special friend, Linda Orschel. He was preceded in death by his parents, one great-grand child, Aiden Manor; one brother, Donald Anderson and two brothers-in-law, Dale Cromer and Warren Moege.

A funeral service was held Saturday, Feb. 4 at the Sacred Heart Hall in Newbury. Burial followed at the Swedish Cemetery, south of Alma. Stephen was a strong believer and financial supporter of the Salvation Army so the family suggests memorial contributions to the Salvation Army or St. John Lutheran School and those may be sent in care of the funeral home. Online condolences may be made at www.campanelafuneral.com.

U.S. House votes to repeal BLM rule
The U.S. House of Representatives passed a resolution recently that would repeal the Bureau of Land Management's (BLM) Planning 2.0 Rule. This rule would prioritize social and environmental change over ensuring multiple use of public lands and eliminate stakeholder and local input into planning processes. The rule was finalized in December, after which the U.S. House and Senate have 60 days to approve a joint resolution of disapproval to fully repeal the rule before it becomes law.

National Cattlemen's CEO, 'Chef Alli' and others will speak in Cowley County

National Cattlemen's Beef Association CEO Kendal Frazier will headline the program at the Cowley County Livestock Association's annual meeting and dinner on Tuesday, Feb. 28. The event will take place in Arkansas City, at Camp Horizon, 30811 Horizon Dr.

Also on the program are Kansas beef producer and advocate Debbie Lyons-Blythe, Winter of "Chef Alli's Farm Fresh Kitchen" and Kansas Livestock Association CEO Matt Teagarden.

The evening starts with registration and networking at 5 p.m. At 5:30 p.m., attendees will be treated to a high-energy presentation in which Chef Winter and Lyons-Blythe will discuss cooking techniques and enhancing advocacy skills. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m., and Teagarden and Frazier will present after dinner.

"We are very excited about the evening we have planned on the 28th," said Jill Zimmerman, Cowley County Extension agent. "All the presenters have a tremendous amount of knowledge and will bring a highly relevant message for cattle producers."

There is no cost to attend, but conference organizers ask that attendees pre-register by Feb. 24 by contacting the Cowley County Extension office at 620-221-5450 or jazimmer@ksu.edu. Online registration is available at <http://contacc2j9K3K3>.

The event is sponsored by K-State Research and Extension, the Kansas Livestock Association, Cowley

County and the Cowley County Livestock Association. Additional sponsors are Merial Animal Health, MidContinent Livestock Supplements, American AgCredit, Cargill Animal Nutrition, Triple S Ranch Supply, Blackwell Livestock Auction, Merck Animal Health, Western Feed Mills, Creekstone Farms, RCB Bank, Community National Bank, Winfield Livestock Auction, Bryant's Ag Services, Two Rivers Co-op, Union State Bank, and Select Sires.

Fescue Renovation School set for March 6 in Mound Valley

Tall fescue makes excellent perennial forage that can be used to fill the forage gap when warm-season grasses go dormant. Tall fescue is well adapted to regions of greater rainfall such as eastern Kansas and Oklahoma as well as states to the east in the transition zone.

Unfortunately, the dominant tall fescue variety (Kentucky 31) commonly grown across the United States comes with one major problem: fescue toxicosis. Livestock grazing toxic tall fescue have lowered animal production through reduced weight gain, poor body condition, lowered reproductive rates and lowered milk production. These problems aren't caused by the grass itself, instead they are brought about by a fungus (endophyte) which lives inside the grass, that produces ergot alkaloids which are toxic to grazing livestock.

Over the years, producers have tried to dilute the effects of these alkaloids by integrating other forages, monitoring grazing and supplemental feeding as well as trying many other "remedies" with mixed results. A proven method to reduce fescue toxicosis problems is to replace your current tall fescue with a new variety infected with a strain of endophyte called nontoxic or "novel" endophyte that is unable to produce ergot alkaloids or only produces low levels. An example of some of the varieties with a novel endophyte are Jesup MaxQ®, Texoma MaxQ II®, Estancia with ArkShield®, Martin 2Protek® and BarOptima PLUS E34.

If you want to know more about replacing your toxic tall fescue, help is at hand. The Alliance for Grassland Renewal will host a novel tall fescue renovation school from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., March 6 at in Mound Valley. Novel tall fescue renovation schools offer a great way to find out how you can overcome animal productivity issues that come with grazing toxic tall fescue and learn about the benefits of replacing your pastures with one of the new varieties even if you think you are managing your toxic tall fescue.

The school will cover topics including fescue toxicosis, new pasture establishment, seed quality, seed drill calibration, management, products and incentives. Cost for the school is $60 per person or $110 for couples. Enrollment is limited and must be made by March 1. Walk-ins will pay $15 extra. Registration for the schools and other information can be found at grasslandrenewal.org/education.htm If you can't make it to this event, there will be similar school the next day at the Southwest Research Center in Mount Vernon, Mo. For more information about the Mound Valley School contact the Southeast Extension and Research Center office at (620) 421-4826 or go to www.wildcatdistrict.ksu.edu.

Guest Editorial: A Farm Crisis in the High Plains

By U.S. Sen. Jerry Moran (R-Kan.)

As a resident of the community, I was pleased to learn that Manhattan, is set to host the first Senate Agriculture Committee farm bill hearing – a fitting location chosen by my colleague Chairman Pat Roberts to kick off formal discussions on the challenges and opportunities in authorizing our next farm bill.

The hearing will offer an opportunity for farmers and ranchers to voice the concerns I heard during my town hall meetings in each of Kansas' 105 counties during the last Congress. It's clear that producers are hurting and the downturn in the farm economy is impacting rural America. Overall farm income has been cut in half since 2013 and is likely to continue to decline this year, making it one of the worst economic times in farm country since the Great Depression.

So far, the farm bill discussion has largely been focused on the unique challenges facing dairy and cotton producers. These farmers are important to Kansas and the country, and I am eager to be an ally in working toward solutions for these producers. But, let us not forget the farm crisis in the High Plains that has hit wheat and sorghum farmers especially hard. Acres planted to hard red winter wheat in Kansas are at the second lowest level in the past 100 years, reflecting the economic reality currently facing wheat producers. The threat of the sugarcane aphid to sorghum is making it harder to make a profit on the traditionally low-input crop, meaning acres may fall by another 30 percent this year.

The 2014 Farm Bill has been successful on many fronts by protecting crop insurance and renewing our commitment to agriculture research, conservation and rural development programs. However, economic stress in farm country has also exposed weaknesses in the current legislation. The next farm bill must address inequities between counties in the Agricultural Risk Coverage (ARC) program, provide stronger protection in Title I farm programs against extended periods of low prices, and reduce the threat of burdensome regulations that harm livestock producers.

While major revisions in farm policy are most appropriately addressed in the context of a farm bill, I've used my role on the Senate Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee to build on the successes of the 2014 Farm Bill, as well as attempt to address its shortcomings. The fiscal year 2017 Agriculture Appropriations bill increases agriculture research funding, expands food aid programs that export American commodities, and helps to avoid a credit crisis by making certain demand for USDA farm loans is satisfied. The bill also includes a pilot program aimed at reducing inequities in ARC payments and provides resources for USDA to establish a presence in Cuba to facilitate farmers' ability to sell more food and agriculture products to the island nation.

There is no silver bullet to solve the High Plains farm crisis. Farmers have always dealt with changes in weather and volatile swings in commodity markets. However, if farmers from across the nation – cotton, livestock, wheat and rice producers included – stand shoulder-to-shoulder during the next farm bill, I'm confident we can work together to address the critical issues facing growers of every commodity.

More stored grain increases potential for accidents

The perfect storm exists for more grain bin accidents in 2017 since farmers are storing more grain on-farm than ever before, says University of Missouri Extension natural resources engineer Charles Ellis.

Low prices and surplus grain motivate farmers to store grain longer in hopes for higher prices. Ellis spoke recently at the Audrain County Soils and Crop Conference in Mexico.

"We've got a lot of grain sitting on the farm that we need to check on," he says.

The U.S. Grains Council reported that the 2016 corn crop contained a higher moisture content and required more drying than the previous year's crop.

Wet grain causes farmers to enter bins more often to check for crusting, spoilage and other issues. Ellis reminds farmers to brush up on grain bin safety during Grain Bin Safety Week, Feb.

19-25. "It's a good time to review safety practices for farmworkers, family members and farm visitors. Never go in a bin alone or without safety equipment," he says.

Fluctuating temperatures in February also cause concern. Major temperature changes result in condensation inside the bin. To keep grain in condition, Ellis recommends bin aeration when air temperatures change rapidly.

Ellis suggests that farmers sample the temperature of bin-stored corn in layers. Odors indicate out-of-condition grain, insect infestation, mold and fungi. All reduce grain quality and market value. Also, check for melting snow on the grain bin roof. Lack of snow on the roof when it is snowing indicates out-of-condition grain. Probing resistance, sprouting, color and bridging tell of moisture problems.

A Day of Garden Learning

Mark Saturday, February 25 on your calendar to spend some time with fellow gardeners. There will be hourly seminars held in the Clover room of Pottorf Hall in CiCo Park. This replaces the former Manhattan Area Garden Show. The winter farmers' market and a few additional vendors will be set up in the large room.

Mike Haddock will kick the learning off at 9 am. His presentation is on Kansas flora of the state. There will be lots of pictures of native wildflowers. He has written several books with another coming out in the near future. Check out his website at <http://www.kswildflower.org>.

The 10 o'clock hour will feature Derek deBoer from Blueville Nursery. When you own your dream house, you will need the dream landscape. Join Derek as he guides you to achieving your dream landscape.

New introductions to the "Prairie Star" annual flowers for 2017 is at 11 a.m. Dr Cheryl Boyer with K-State Research and Extension will lead the program. Look for these annuals to put on a full season of display in your flower beds.

Noon finds the topic of new and underutilized vegetables. Chuck Marr, professor emeritus in vegetable production, is the perfect presenter on the topic. He always presents interesting and useful information.

At 1 p.m., learn about watering wisely. Master Gardener Sabine Martin will lead the program. An average lawn will likely cost $20 to irrigate. Water once a week and you will have spent around $500.

Perennial plants will add another dimension to the landscape. Nancy Moore with Blueville Nursery will discuss new perennials at 2 p.m. Before too long, we can start planting.

Gardening in small spaces is popular and rewarding. Join Master Gardener Colleen Hampton in this discussion. This includes container gardening.

Check out our website for details at www.riley.ksu.edu.

You can find out more information on this and other horticulture topics by going to the K-State Research and Extension website at www.ksre.ksu.edu. And you contact Gregg Eystone at the Riley County office of K-State Research and Extension. Gregg may be contacted by calling 537-6350 or stopping by 110 Courthouse Plaza in Manhattan or e-mail: geyeston@ksu.edu

Fighting world hunger: researchers discover new link to fight billion-dollar threat to soybean production

Invisible to the naked eye, cyst nematodes are a major threat to agriculture, causing billions of dollars in global crop losses every year. A group of plant scientists, led by University of Missouri researchers, recently found one of the mechanisms cyst nematodes use to invade and drain life-sustaining nutrients from soybean plants. Understanding the molecular basis of interactions between plants and nematodes could lead to the development of new strategies to control these major agricultural pests and help feed a growing global population.

Soybeans are a major component for two-thirds of the world's animal feed and more than half the edible oil consumed in the United States, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). Cyst nematodes jeopardize the healthy production of this critical global food source by "hijacking" the soybean plants' biology.

"Cyst nematodes are one of the most economically devastating groups of plant-parasitic nematodes worldwide," said Melissa Goellner Mitchum, a researcher in the Bond Life Sciences Center and an associate professor in the Division of Plant Sciences at MU. "These parasites damage root systems by creating a unique feeding cell within the roots of their hosts and leeching nutrients out of the soybean plant. This can lead to stunting, wilting and yield loss for the plant. We wanted to explore the pathways and mechanisms cyst nematodes use to commandeer soybean plants."

About 15 years ago, Mitchum and colleagues unlocked clues into how nematodes use small chains of amino acids, or peptides, to feed on soybean roots.

Using next-generation sequencing technologies that were previously unavailable, Michael Gardner, a graduate research assistant, and Jianying Wang, a senior research associate in Mitchum's lab, made a remarkable new discovery—nematodes possess the ability to produce a second type of peptide that can effectively "take over" plant stem cells that are used to create vital pathways for the delivery of nutrients throughout the plant. Researchers compared these peptides with those produced by plants and found that they were identical to the ones the plants use to maintain vascular stem cells, known as CLE-B peptides.

"Plants send out these chemical signals to its stem cells to begin various functions of growth, including the vascular pathway that plants use to transport nutrients," Mitchum said. "Advanced sequencing showed us that nematodes use identical peptides to activate the same process. This 'molecular mimicry' helps nematodes produce the feeding sites from which they drain plant nutrients."

To test their theory, Xiaoli Guo, a post-doctoral researcher in Mitchum's lab and first author of the study, synthesized the CLE-B nematode peptide and applied it to the vascular cells of Arabidopsis, a model plant system used in plant research. They found that the nematode peptides triggered a growth response in Arabidopsis much in the same way as the plants' own peptides affected development.

Next, the team "knocked out" the genes Arabidopsis plants use to signal to their own stem cells. Here, the nematodes didn't do as well because the parasites were unable to signal to the plant and the nematode's feeding site was compromised, Guo says.

"When a nematode attacks the root, it selects vascular stem cells that are located along the root," Mitchum said. "By knocking out that pathway, we reduced the size of the feeding site that nematodes use to control the plant. This is the first time we've been able to show that the nematode is modulating or controlling the vascular plant pathway. Understanding how plant-parasitic nematodes modulate host plants to their own benefit is a crucial step in helping to create pest-resistant plants. If we can block those peptides and the pathways nematodes use to overtake the soybean plant, then we can enhance resistance for this very valuable global food source."

The study "Identification of cyst nematode B-type CLE peptides and modulation of the vascular stem cell pathway for feeding cell formation," recently was published by PLOS Pathogens. This work was supported by grants from the National Science Foundation (IOS-1456047), the U.S. Department of Agriculture (2012-67013-19345) and Huazhong Agricultural University Scientific and Technological Self-Innovation Foundation (Program No. 2016RC004). More beef in 2017, less pork and poultry than expected

Estimated red meat and poultry production for 2016 was adjusted to reflect December slaughter data. Total red meat and poultry production for 2017 is lowered, largely reflecting decreased pork and poultry forecasts. Beef production is raised. Placements and marketings for the year are raised, resulting in higher cattle slaughter.

The January Cattle inventory report estimated that total cattle and calf numbers on January 1, 2017 increased for the third consecutive year. Beef cow numbers were above 2016, and producers indicated they were holding more heifers for addition to the breeding herd. The report also indicated a year-over-year increase in the number of cattle outside feedlots.

The January Cattle on Feed report showed higher than expected placement numbers in December, implying that larger numbers of fed cattle will be marketed during the spring quarter. Cattle weights are reduced for 2017 as producers are expected to remain current in feedlot marketings.

Pork production in the first quarter is reduced on the current pace of slaughter and slightly lighter carcass weights.

Broiler production is lowered as increases in production in the first quarter are more than offset by reductions in the second half of the year. Table egg production is increased on hatchery data and expectations of relatively favorable returns, but this is more than offset by a lowered hatching egg production forecast. No changes were made to turkey production.

Livestock trade estimates for 2016 are adjusted to reflect December data. For 2017, forecast beef imports are raised on expectations of higher shipments of processing beef from Oceania. Robust demand for U.S. beef supports higher forecast beef exports for the year. No changes are made to pork, poultry and egg trade forecasts.

Cattle, hog, and broiler price forecasts are raised to reflect demand strength. Turkey prices are forecast lower on current prices. Egg prices are increased on current price strength.

K-State Sheep Producer Day scheduled for March 4

The 2017 Kansas State University Sheep Producer Day is planned for Saturday, March 4. This year's event will be hosted at K-State's Sheep and Goat Center, 2117 Denison Avenue in Manhattan.

The program will feature Phil Berg, sheep producer from Minnesota; Jaymelynn Farney, K-State Research and Extension specialist; Dale Thorne, producer from Michigan and member of the American Lamb Board; and Katie Olagaray, Tri-Lamb Exchange Member and a K-State graduate student.

The event will begin at 8:15 a.m. with registration and coffee and donuts, courtesy of Mid-States Wool Growers, South Hutchinson. The Kansas Sheep Association will hold its annual business meeting following the educational programs. For a schedule, visit www.asi.ksu.edu and click on Events.

Pre-registration is not necessary. Registration fees (paid at the door) are $15 for Kansas Sheep Association members and $25 for non-members. Lunch is included with registration.

The K-State Sheep Producer Day is sponsored by the Kansas Sheep Association and the K-State Department of Animal Sciences and Industry. For more information about the event, contact Deb Simon, Kansas Sheep Association at kssheep@ruraltel.net.

J&N Ranch hosts America's largest Black Hereford Bull Sale

Buyers from 12 states assembled on February 11th in Leavenworth, for J&N Ranch's 26th Annual Production Sale on one of the warmest February days on record. The standing-room-only crowd in shirt sleeves with ceiling fans blowing overhead warmed the crowded arena as 80 big, stout Black Hereford bulls were paraded across the block to active bidding. The sale averaged $3345 per head. The highlight of the sale was Lot 23, now known as JN Bullseye JO D411. A 3/4 interest and full possession sold for $19,000 to Jo Bulls in Castle Dale, Utah - setting a new record price for a Black Hereford. He will join a stable of bulls in this internet-based semen distributor. This young stand-out bull combined a 72 lb. BW with a 727 lb. WW. A son of JN Balder B251 out of the JN Baldee A411 ET cow was the first purebred ho-mozygous black bull to ever sell at J&N Ranch, the birthplace of Black Herefords. He displayed tremendous thickness and length. This high marbling yearling was the top bull in ribeye size.

J&N retained a 1/4 semen interest for their in-herd use only. Jo Bulls will handle all semen sales. J&N's next sale is scheduled for October 14, 2017.
