National Sunflower Association board members go to Washington, D.C.

Several members of the National Sunflower Association's board of directors spend time recently in Washington, D.C. Members made visits to members of Congress from Kansas, Minnesota, North and South Dakota about Farm Bill implementation, Fiscal Year 2020 appropriations and enactment of the U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement. In addition, the group met with officials from the USDA APHIS/Wildlife Services to discuss blackbird depredation concerns, USDA Risk Management Agency addressing quality adjustments for con-oil sunflower and USDA Agricultural Research Service to support the National Sclerotinia Initiative.

Grass & Grain, March 19, 2019 Weather conditions affect fertility management of cool season forages

mer. Cool season grasses prefer temperatures ranging from the 40s to the mid-70s. Optimum growth occurs in that window. If the time frame for growth in that temperature window is reduced, growth may be compromised as well. When temperatures consistently reach the upper end of that temperature spectrum, cool season species tend to move towards reproduction, reducing the vegetative growth we prefer for higher yields. Fertilizer rate/timing/etc... won't change what conditions our weather from this point provides us. Research in Kansas indicates that good yields can occur from fertilizer applications even in to late March or early April. Again, temperature has a lot to do with how well that holds true, but in general, even later fertilizer applications can result in good yields. That said, the highest yields generally result from fall applications over spring. Fall applications of nitrogen and phosphorous stimulate root growth and produce more tiller buds that result in more stems (and higher yields) the following spring. Spring applications might result in an increased protein level (if harvest is timely), but yields are generally lower when compared to fall applications.

While we're on the topic of fertility, production losses tend to be 'blamed' on the nitrogen component of the fertility program, when other nutrients may well be the culprit. Cool season forages require about 12 pounds of phosphorous and around 40 pounds of potassium per ton of hay per acre. Soil test results would suggest that phosphorous has been deficient in many of our hay stands for years with potassium becoming a greater concern. Don't forget these important nutrients as well.

While there's reason to be concerned about the window of opportunity we have for applying fertilizer to our cool season grass stands, there's no need to panic - yet. Think of your forage production potential as a wooden barrel with every stave of that barrel representing the factors affecting production. Temperature, water, nitrogen, phosphorous, potassium, cutting height, harvest timing, etc... are all staves of that barrel. If any one of them is compromised (and we haven't even discussed pH levels... or weed control... or...), forage production can be sacrificed as well. Our best bet at this point is to do the best we can to continue to implement best management practices so that we can optimize production as we move forward.

Kansas Hay Market Report

Hay market trade activity is light to moderate. Demand remains moderate and prices have remained steady for all hay types. According to NASS, topsoil moisture supplies rated 0 percent very short, 1 short, 55 adequate, and 44 surplus. Subsoil moisture supplies rated 0 percent very short, 1 short, 71 adequate, and 28 surplus. As Mother Nature begins to loosen her grip on winter, there seems to be a hint that some farmers will begin to turn loose of hay they have been keeping back for their own use. If you have any extra hay to sell and/or need hay here in Kansas, use the services of the Internet Hay Exchange: www.hayexchange.com/ks.php.

Grass & Grain, March 19, 2019 Lesser prairie-chicken aerial surveys to document population trends

Aerial surveys will begin March 15 and run through mid-May in five states containing lesser prairie-chicken habitat. The surveys are conducted annually by the Western Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies (WAFWA) to document population trends and how management strategies identified in the Lesser Prairie-Chicken Range-wide Conservation Plan.

The range-wide plan is a collaborative effort of WAFWA and the state wildlife agencies of Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Kansas oped to ensure conservation of the lesser prairie-chicken with voluntary cooperation of landowners and industry. The plan allows agriculture producers and industry to continue operations while reducing impacts to the bird and its grassland habitat.

"This survey provides the data for annual estimates of the lesser prairie-chicken population across the five states," explained Roger Wolfe, WAFWA's Lesser Prairie-chicken program manager. "These population estimates are critical in helping us guide decition efforts targeting lesser prairie-chickens and their habitat."

The surveys will be conducted by helicopter in locations chosen randomly within lesser prairie-chicken range, which is part of the methodology strategy.

the fly paths prompted calls, which is why WAFWA is providing notification about the start of aerial survey Preliminary results from this year's surveys will be available on July 1.

President

U.S. Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry chairman Pat Roberts, R-Kan., and Ranking Member Debbie

Stabenow, D-Mich., said President Trump has signed the Pesticide Registration Improvement Act (PRIA) into law, bringing certainty to the agriculture industry and other stakeholders.

"This law will ensure farmers, consumers and others have an improved process when registering and evaluating the use of pesticides," said Roberts. "The bill was approved by the Senate unanimously and represents the concerns of all stakeholders."

"PRIA means certainty for agriculture, farmworkers, and consumers," said Stabenow. "I'm pleased the President acted to sign this long-overdue legislation into law to help farmers protect their crops while also providing important protections for farmworkers and their families."

PRIA established framework for EPA when registering pesticides. The original intent has been to create a more predictable and effective evaluation process for affected pesticide decisions by coupling the collection of fees with specific decision review periods. This legislation includes technical changes and extends authority for EPA to collect updated pesticide registration and maintenance fees through the 4-H Community Building. The meeting will include BQA Certification with Dr. Dan Thomson and presentations by Dr. Mark Corrigan with Merck and KCA CEO, Tyler Dupy. A USA-Beef meal will be served. The meeting is free and open to the public.

The meeting will kick off with BQA Certification provided by veterinarian, educator, and DocTalk host Dr. Dan Thomson. Dr. Thomson is recognized internationally as a leader in animal welfare, beef cattle production and cattle health management. Dr. Thomson's work has been published hundreds of times, and he has conducted over 60 invited talks internationally on his research and field experience on the interactions between production management, environment and nutrition on the health and well-being of beef cattle. Dr. Thomson's research program has been granted over $35 million with over $15 million of those funds coming with him as the primary investigator.

Beef Quality Assurance is a nationally coordinated, state implemented program that provides systematic information to U.S. beef producers and beef consumers of how common-sense husbandry techniques can be coupled with accepted scientific knowledge to raise cattle under optimum management and environmental conditions. BQA guidelines are designed to make certain all beef consumers can take pride in what they purchase and can trust and have confidence in the entire beef industry.

Dr. Mark Corrigan, a Merck nutritionist, will speak about herd health, strategic de-worming programs, and facts about implants & their value. Dr. Corrigan gained his extensive research experience as the beef technical services manager at Lallemand Animal Nutrition. Corrigan previously managed

Study reveals pigs can transmit FMD prior to signs of sickness By Sandra Avant

Foot-and-mouth disease (FMD) virus spreads much more aggressively in pigs than previous research suggests, according to a new study by U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) sci-

The study, recently published in Scientific Reports, shows that pigs infected with the FMD virus were highly contagious to other pigs just 24 hours after infection—long before showing any clinical signs of infection such as fever and blisters.

Foot-and-mouth disease continues to be the most important foreign disease of livestock worldwide, said Jonathan Arzt, lead investigator and veterinary medical officer with US-DA's Agricultural Research the United States has not had an FMD outbreak since 1929, this highly contagious viral disease, which is sometimes fatal, is still considered a serious threat to U.S. agriculture. If introduced into FMD-free countries like the United States and Europe, it could cost billions of dollars in losses to the economy from trade bans and eradication, which often includes unavoidable euthanasia of a huge number of affected Vaccine protection of pigs is notoriously challenging. Vaccinated pigs still shed infectious virus and potentially transmit infection, according to Arzt, who works in ARS's Foreign Animal Disease Research Unit at the Plum Is-

Service (ARS). Although land Animal Disease Center in Orient Point, New York. Prior to this research, it was believed that transmission of FMD did not occur during the pre-clinical phase — before visible cal for infectious disease experts, who use such information to provide the right data and guide the resources to protect livestock against foreign animal diseases if there is an outbreak. A variety of disease-dynamics models have been developed in recent years to identify critical targets for control efforts, predict impacts and estimate resource requirements for specific outbreak scenarios for FMD, Arzt said. However, none of these models included the impact of preclinical transmission.

Working with scientists at the Center for Epidemiology and Animal Health in USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service. Arzt and his team used a mathematical modeling approach to estimate the occurrence of FMD preclinical transmission amongst pigs. They found that transmission occurred approximately one day prior to development of visible signs

This updated disease data was then incorporated into a second model that The results showed that simulation of FMD outbreaks in the U.S. pig production sector, including a preclinical infectious period of one day, would result in a 40-percent increase in the number of farms affected. That's 166 additional farms and more than 664,000 pigs euthanized compared to the existing scenario of no preclinical transmission, Arzt added.

Failure to account for information like this could make the difference between a limited, well-controlled FMD outbreak in the United States with a cost of $3 million over two months as opposed to a catastrophic nationwide epidemic with a cost of $20 billion over one year, Arzt

The goal is to prevent FMD from invading the United States and to be prepared if it enters the country, Arzt said. Infectious disease modeling is a critical part of preparedness and protection of U.S. livestock. This research provides another tool-vital information—to help build better models to protect pigs, cattle, sheep and in-

Leopold Conservation Award program seeks Kansas nominees

Know a Kansas farmer, rancher or forester who goes above and beyond in the care and management of natural resources? Nominate them for the 2019 Kansas Leopold Conservation Award®.

Sand County Foundation, the nation's leading voice for conservation of private land, presents the Leopold Conservation Award to private landowners in 14 states for extraordinary achievement in voluntary conservation.

In Kansas, the $10,000 award is presented annually by Sand County Foundation, Kansas Association of Conservation Districts, and the Ranchland Trust of Kan-

Given in honor of renowned conservationist Aldo Leopold, the award recognizes those who inspire others with their dedication to land, water and wildlife habitat management on private, working In his influential 1949 book A Sand County Almanac, Leopold called for an ethical relationship between people and the land they own and manage. "The Leopold Conservation Award Program provides a valuable opportunity to recognize the outstanding accomplishments of Kansas agricultural landowners who are committed to strong conservation practices and effective stewardship," said Dan Meyerhoff, executive director of the Kansas Association of Conservation Districts.

"RTK is a proud supporter of the Leopold Conservation Award in Kansas. It is an honor to help recognize those conservationists who go above and beyond in the stewardship of our natural resources," said Cade Rensink, chair of the board of Ranchland Trust of Kansas.

All applications must be or postmarked by June 1, 2019, and mailed to KACD c/o Dan Meyerhoff, 414 Autumn Lane, Hays KS 67601. Nominations may be submitted on behalf of a landowner, or landowners may nominate themselves.

The application can be found at: https://sandcountyfoundation.org/uploads/ KANSAS-CFN-19.pdf

The award will be presented in November at the KACD Annual Convention in Wichita. The Leopold Conservation Award Program in Kansas is made possible thanks to the generous support of Kansas Association of Conservation Districts, Ranchland Trust of Kansas, Sand County Foundation, Ducks Unlimited, ITC Great Plains, Westar Energy, The Farm Credit Associations of Kansas, The Nature Conservancy in Kansas, Clean Line Energy Partners, Kansas Forest Service, Kansas Department of Agriculture's Division of Conservation, Kansas Department of Wild-

Nature did not play nice with us, and our scheduled days kept getting postponed, put off, and rescheduled. I got to the point, that it had to be done in order to have something to show at the meeting. The days of filming were cold, in the 20s, but the wind chills I don't even want to know!

Both of these operations have cow/calves in hoop barns, different companies, different designs, different sizes. It was really quite interesting. I'm always curious about animal behavior. Of course, both claim their animals are more docile. This makes sense, because of the daily interactions with humans and close-up. The animals had plenty of room; they were doing quite well. They have to walk maybe 50 feet to feed and water, no mud, with nice bedding to lay down in. They did note that the calves will "rob" other mothers, so they might "jug" up the pair to get them to bond for a few days.

The cattle in the barns were sorted by age and body condition score. Age is important in limit feeding cows because of the younger cows typically are less aggressive than the older cows. When you sort by body condition score, it enables you to offer different diets based on the goal of increasing, decreasing or maintaining body condition score. Limit feeding makes bunk management easier, because all feed is consumed daily, eliminating the need to clean out bunks. Another ben-2ND ANNUAL DICKINSON COUNTY HISTORICAL SOCIETY

efit is that with less feed consumed and greater feed efficiency, cows produce less manure, which reduces feed and manure handling costs. Lower feed intake also means cows produce less heat, which helps minimize heat stress.

Some disadvantages are weather fluctuations, machine malfunctions and thin cows. Limit fed cows produce less heat, so consider increasing feed by 10% during the winter to provide enough feed. Of course, if you have a feeding equipment breakdown, you need to have a plan B to have feed delivered in a timely manner.

Hoop barns may be a way to retain cows when pasture is depleted, increase feed efficiency and reduce production costs. It still takes considerable land resources to raise the feeds and provide the bedding.

With winters like the current one, the hoop barns seem very attractive!

to select brands made with authentic North American bison, and to avoid deceptively labeled products made with water buffalo labeled only as "buffalo." "As more people discover the great taste and nutritional benefits of bison, they are bringing it to the table for all members of their family, including their companion animals," said Dave Carter, executive director of the National Bison Association. "Our new site, entitled Sniffing Out the Best Bison Brands for Your Companion Animal, will help pet parents find products in the marketplace containing authentic North American

The National Bison Association developed the new website after some companies have refused to fully label or disclose that the "buffalo" in their brands is actually imported water buffalo. 'Several pet food brands have worked with ranchers in recent years to develop products containing authentic North American bison. Many of those products list the ingredient as either bison or buffalo. Unfortunately, other brands are deceiving their customers by simply labeling their products as "buffalo" when in fact, they are using water buffalo, not North American bison. We want to help consumers make an informed choice. The National Bison Association is working with pet food regulators to propose new rules that would require an ingredient currently labeled as buffalo to by fully labeled as either American buffalo or water buffalo. Finalizing any regulatory change, however, is a long-term process. "We want the public to be able to buy honestly labeled products with full confidence that they are providing their companion animals with the best bison products available, Carter said.

February U.S. ag equipment sales remain positive overall, says AEM report U.S. sales of ag tractors and combines remained in the plus column for February, according to the latest sales data from the Association of Equipment Manufacturers (AEM). Total U.S. February 2-wheel-drive tractor sales grew

17.3 percent compared to February 2018, led by under-40-HP machines with a 24.6-percent gain and a 7.1-percent gain for 40-100-HP 2-wheel-drive tractors, while 100-plus-HP 2-wheel-drive-tractors recorded a drop of 2.2 percent. February U.S. sales of 4-wheel-drive tractors gained

29.5 percent compared to last year and U.S. self-propelled combine sales for February grew 21.5 percent. Canada did not fare as well, with February gains only for self-propelled combines (up 25 percent) and for under-40-HP 2-wheel-drive tractors (up 23 percent).

'We're encouraged to hear USDA estimates that net farm income is expected to increase slightly in 2019 after last year's declines; hopefully that signifies some optimism in the U.S. as the year moves forward. And we remain concerned about some of the Canadian numbers in February's report," said Curt Blades, AEM senior vice president, AG "We hope that the new U.S. farm bill will provide more certainty for farmers as they plan ahead. However, we are still facing a lack of real, sustained progress on trade agreements and ending retaliatory tariffs." The full reports can be found in the Market Data section of the AEM website under Ag Tractor and Combine

AEM is the North American-based international trade group representing off-road equipment manufacturers and suppliers, with more than 1,000 companies and more than 200 product lines in the agriculture and construction-related industry sectors worldwide. The equipment manufacturing industry supports 1.3 million jobs in the U.S., and 149,000 more in Canada. Equipment manufacturers also contribute $188 billion combined to the U.S. and Canadian economies. AEM is celebrating its 125th anniversary in

Jack Riley Student Center dedicated

The recently renovated Kansas State University Animal Sciences and Industry (ASI) Department Weber Hall Lounge was named the Jack Riley Student Center on Friday, February 22. The updated area below the famous Weber Arena was renamed in honor of Dr. Jack Riley who served as ASI department head for 17 years.

"Dr. Riley was one of the kindest, caring leaders I've ever met," says Dr. Dave Nichols, K-State ASI teaching coordinator and professor. "He believed in students and working as a team to advance our animal science program."

Dr. Riley was known as an incredible teacher, but more importantly a great friend and advisor to KSU ASI students. He joined the K-State ASI faculty in 1971. During his time at K-State he taught more than 7,000 students in his 35 years of teaching. He served as the Beef Research Unit faculty coordinator for 16 years, and was department head from 1987 to

"He was truly a wonderful man and a wonderful administrator," Curtis Kastner, ASI professor emeritus, says. "What Dr. Riley did as department head has carried on through the years and has set the stage for

The recently renovated Weber Hall Lounge was renamed the Jack Riley Student Center. This area now serves as a reminder of the contributions Dr. Riley made to K-State ASI students. keeping students as the primary focus."

During his 17-year tenure as department head, courses were revised to provide greater "hands-on" experiences, curriculum modifications and innovations were implemented, and undergraduate enrollment more than doubled. He retired from the department in January 2010.

"You can measure one's legacy and the success of a department head by not only the enrollment increase but also by the staff hired," Nichols says. It was Riley's inspiring leadership and story that sparked the idea of the new Jack Riley Student Center.

After his passing in December 2017, the ASI department was eager to honor Dr. Riley's legacy and dedication to K-State. When the Rogler family provided the funding for the renovation of Weber Hall Lounge, it was the prime opportunity to honor Dr. Riley.

Thanks to the teamwork of Sabrina Ault, ASI business manager, and John Wolfe, meat lab manager, the new paint, carpet and seating has provided an improved look and feel to the student center. Yet, more progressive change comes in the form of new technology and features for students to use and collaborate with. White boards for studying, access to meeting rooms and screens for student presentations are just a few examples of the updates found in the new student center. "When I came into the lounge for the first time and saw the renovations, I was excited that the student area of Weber had seen a makeover," says Taylor Belle Matheny, K-State ASI senior. "It is because of people like the Jack Riley family that K-State continues to get improvements that are going to help current students and those who will follow in the coming

The dedication and renaming of the Weber Hall Lounge is a well-earned tribute to Dr. Riley's commitment to K-State. The Jack Riley Student Center will serve as a reminder of the contributions Dr. Riley made to the department, and its students, for years
