Kansas Hay Market Report

For the week ending March 27, hay market prices were mostly steady to 10.00 higher for alfalfa in the southwest and south-central regions. Alfalfa in the southwest is very difficult to find, and although you can still find loads here and there in the central region, barns are emptying out. Demand was light to moderate and deliveries slowed the past week due to the mud. According to the U.S. Drought Monitor for the week of March 25th, frequent precipitation during the past two weeks continues to result in additional improvements to parts of the central Plains and central Rockies. Seven-day total amounts (March 16-22) ranged from one to three inches, locally more, across a broad region including south-central Nebraska and much of Kansas. Abnormal dryness (D0) decreased to 11.5 %, moderate drought (D1) increased to 10%, severe drought (D2) decreased to 2%, and extreme drought (D3) was eliminated. If you have any extra hay to sell and/or need hay here in Kansas, use the services of the Internet Hay Exchange: www.hayexchange.com/ks.php.

No RFID ear tag mandate implemented from APHIS

USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) announced it would not implement its July 5, 2020, Federal Register Notice that would require the use of radio frequency identification (RFID) ear tags on all adult cattle and bison moved in interstate commerce beginning Jan. 1, 2023. While the agency begins official rulemaking, cattle producers can utilize traditional ear tags and brands as well as RFID tags.

More than a neighbor – Randall Debler, vice chairman KBC exec committee

“Decisions are made by the people who show up,” Randall Debler repeated. As a full-time cattleman in Alma, his personal philosophy of giving back and showing up for the important decisions means he whole-heartedly represents beef producers on the Kansas Beef Council (KBC) in his current role as vice chairman of the KBC Executive Committee.

Debler will take the reins as chairman in 2022. “I really wanted to sit with people who care as much about the beef industry and want to see it prosper as much as I do,” he said.

Serving the Industry
In his five years on KBC, Debler has seen how the Beef Checkoff Dollar is spent, how it's evaluated and how it has impacted our industry. He's encouraged by Check-off-funded projects which include supporting family and consumer science teachers using beef in the classroom, working with dietitians to promote the health benefits of beef, developing value-added cuts of beef from in-house development, as well as offering the Beef Quality Assurance program.

“The people on the executive committee are the same people who are paying the checkoff,” Debler said. “It is in our best interest to see the dollars get handled in the best way.” Cow-calf produc-

ever, KBC is strictly prohibited from spending its funds on policy. KBC must set and maintain firewalls from KLA to ensure check-off dollars are managed separately, preserving the efficacy of the program.

Maximizing Producer Impact

Debler likes to specifically mention the impact the Checkoff has on the export market. “More than 300 dollars for every finished steer is attributed to the export market,” he said. He points to a recent campaign funded by the Cattlemen's Beef Board (CBB) in Japan to increase the growing demand for American cuts as a successful example.

While the dollar-per-head checkoff prioritizes promoting beef to consumers, Debler recognizes producers do not always realize the impact of their dollars. To address producer communication, KBC created the Kansas Beef Producer Hub at KansasBeef.org, which offers continuing education, annual reporting, program updates and more. Debler said they also compile research about misconceptions of the beef industry producers can utilize in conversations with consumers. He recommends producers sign up for publications like CBB's The Drive and KBC's newsletter to see the impact of their dollars in Kansas and worldwide.

Participation is key for producers. Debler encourages those interested to volunteer for leadership roles in any of the ag groups across the state and notes the highlight of his tenure has been the people. “Meeting producers all over the country, we see how so many of our problems are different, yet so many of them are the same.”

As a Flint Hills rancher raising the next generation of kids and calves, Debler firmly believes the Beef Checkoff, at both the national and state levels, is critical to our future. “It's such a great industry and we are trying to move it forward the best we can,” Debler said. “You just need to show up to have input and an impact.”

Former House ag chairman talks farm bill, climate

Collin Peterson, former Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, recently retired from Congress after thirty years of service to America's farmers and ranchers.

His retirement was short-lived.

"I'm not very good at being retired," he quipped on the most recent episode of Farm Policy Fact's Groundwork podcast.

Collin Peterson is utilizing his decades of farm policy expertise to once again tackle the challenges facing rural America.

"One of the biggest challenges continues to be getting people from urban areas and suburban areas to better understand what we do in agriculture and to better understand the rural areas," Peterson said.

Farming and ranching are not only a critical part of our nation's economy but maintaining a strong ag sector and an affordable and abundant supply of food is key to national security as well.

With less than two million farmers in a nation of 330 million people, Peterson understands that there is a lot to do to ensure the everyday American understands the importance of ag. Importantly, he's willing to do the work to lay that groundwork to support strong farm policies.

And that starts with Congress - particularly, the House Agriculture Committee.

"We have a lot of new people on the (House Agriculture) Committee, and we have a lot of them that don't have that much farm background," Peterson said. "We just have a lot of education and a lot of work we have to do."

Peterson pointed to agriculture's unique ability to unite people from opposing sides of the aisle. No matter whether you're a Democrat or a Republican, we all need to eat. It's farmers and ranchers that feed, fuel and clothe our nation.

And there are a number of key issues affecting ag that will come up this Congress, starting with the implementation of the latest COVID-19 relief bill. Congress may also begin considering the next Farm Bill, a critical legislative vehicle for strengthening the farm safety net.

Rural America will also play a role in the ongoing conversation about climate change. As dedicated stewards of the land, our farmers and ranchers have already spent decades investing in ways to make their operations more efficient and more sustainable.

Any climate-smart policies proposed by Congress need to be backed up by science and need to be economically sustainable as well.

Peterson says that it is critical that rural America's voice is heard in this debate. "We need to get in front of that and make sure that whatever (Congress and the Administration) end up coming up with is something that producers can actually work into their operations," Peterson said. "I think people are willing to do their part, but it has to be something that is practical... It's something that's workable. It's something that's sensible."

I've been on the road and in the air!

It's been two years since I've seen Number One Daughter and Number One Granddaughter who live in Boston. It was the perfect opportunity to combine work and pleasure as I have been researching the eastern port cities and the Santa Fe Trail. I arrived on St. Patty's Day and headed straight to Union Oyster House, but alas, COVID had kept the usual revelry down to a minimum. The streets were not jammed with boisterous Irishmen and Irish-Wannabes. The Irish flag was flying, however, and green was everywhere to be seen. And, the oysters on the half shell were as delicious as ever!

I won't bore you with the travel details except I did get to Mount Auburn Cemetery - twice - and visited the grave of United States Senator Charles Sumner, for whom Sumner School in Topeka and Sumner County are named. I left a stone in remembrance and took a photo. Even though he is perhaps the biggest snob this country ever produced, he effected great good from time to time. I'll write more on him later. He is worthy of a column or two.

I flew down to Philly for a couple of days, visited my dear friends Andy and Carol Waskie, and researched there as well. I also ate more seafood.

My time is short today because I have a plane to catch, but I promise you many stories to come and no vacation slides.

It will also be very good to get home! If only I could click my heels...

Kansas Horse Council announces Equine Economic Impact survey

The Kansas Horse Council, with support from the Kansas Department of Agriculture, is seeking equine owners across Kansas to participate in an Equine Economic Impact survey to generate data and information regarding this segment of the Kansas livestock industry.

The equine industry in Kansas is relatively small, compared to production livestock; however, equine ownership positively impacts the Kansas economy and should be recognized for its contributions. The equine sector in Kansas is an evolving sector that typically includes all forms of Equidae (sometimes known as the horse family) and may include educational, artistic, sport, leisure, therapeutic, and working classes of equines.

As part of the Kansas Ag Growth Strategy, leaders from throughout the Kansas equine industry collaborated in the development and implementation of long-term strategic growth goals with input and discussion among key stakeholders. One published outcome includes completing an economic impact study which led to development of the Equine Economic Impact survey.

The purpose of this survey is to assess the current economic contributions of the equine sector to Kansas. The equine sector is an economically diverse industry, and this survey will include all horse ownership regardless of use. Direct ownership provides a ripple effect supporting sales and service industries by virtue of adjunct needs, such as grain, hay, transport services, real estate, fuel, truck/trailer/tires service and sale, veterinary, farrier and so forth. Information may help identify opportunities for new niche markets or expansion of existing business and services where needs might be identified. Data should reveal relevant information to help update labor statistics in the equine industry.

The Equine Economic Impact survey is voluntary. The survey will be open through December. To take the survey, please visit www.tinyurl.com/equineks. If you have a disability and are unable to complete the survey, but wish to participate, please contact Justine Staten at 785-776-0662 or director@kansashorsecouncil.com to receive a written survey or to take the survey over the telephone.

Sen. Moran opposes any effort to undermine private property rights in 30 by 30 Initiative

U.S. Sen. Jerry Moran (R-Kan.) expressed his opposition to U.S. Department of Interior Secretary Deb Haaland to any plan that would undermine private property rights under the Biden administration's 30 by 30 initiative to conserve at least 30 percent of U.S. lands and 30 percent of U.S. waters by 2030. Moran called on Haaland to consider how this initiative could impact Kansans as recommendations are developed, and urged the Biden administration to provide Congress with additional details on how it plans to pursue the 30 by 30 initiative. "Kansans are rightfully alarmed about possible implications for private property owners of any federal mandate to set aside vast swaths of land in response to this executive order," Moran wrote. "In addition to being troubled about diminishing private property rights, I am concerned taking farm and ranch land out of production will damage local and regional economies across Kansas. Agricultural and energy production is the most common use of private lands in Kansas, driving the state's economy and providing jobs and economic opportunities in rural communities. It is critical for the Biden administration to uphold the integrity of private property rights and recognize the important economic contributions of agricultural and energy production on our lands."

The full letter can be found below.

Dear Secretary Haaland,

President Biden signed an executive order on January 27, 2021 directing the Secretary of Interior, along with other relevant agencies, to submit a report within 90 days recommending steps to conserve at least 30 percent of our lands and 30 percent of our waters by 2030, commonly referred to as the "30 by 30 initiative." As you work to provide these recommendations to the newly-formed National Climate Task Force, I write to express my strong opposition to any effort that would undermine private property rights, significantly increase federally owned lands, or circumvent multiple-use requirements on public lands.

To reach the 30 by 30 target, an additional 440 million acres of land would have to be set aside in the next ten years. Over 98 percent of the land in Kansas is privately owned. Kansans are rightfully alarmed about possible implications for private property owners of any federal mandate to set aside vast swaths of land in response to this executive order. In addition to being troubled about diminishing private property rights, I am concerned taking farm and ranch land out of production will damage local and regional economies across Kansas. Agricultural and energy production is the most common use of private lands in Kansas, driving the state's economy and providing jobs and economic opportunities in rural communities. It is critical for the Biden administration to uphold the integrity of private property rights and recognize the important economic contributions of agricultural and energy production on our lands.

I support conservation efforts that improve our land, air and water while maintaining land use and production. Through working lands programs such as the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Environmental Quality Incentives Program and Conservation Stewardship Program, farmers and ranchers in Kansas are addressing natural resource concerns by investing in new technologies, improving land management practices and adopting new conservation activities. Further, the USDA Conservation Reserve Program and Agricultural Conservation Easements Program provide incentives for landowners to set aside the most sensitive lands not suitable for agricultural production. As Secretary of Interior, you oversee the Fish and Wildlife Service North American Wetlands Conservation Act grant program for landowners to help protect our nation's wetlands. These voluntary, incentive-based conservation programs have resulted in hundreds of millions of acres of land being restored, conserved and improved across the United States. Our nation ought to focus on bolstering these proven efforts to conserve land and water rather than embarking on the radical course of setting aside an additional 440 million acres of land as implied by the executive order.

The federal government already owns approximately 28 percent of the land in the United States, primarily located in the West. There is currently almost $20 billion in deferred maintenance on the land owned by the federal government, which is managed primarily by the Department of Interior (DOI). This backlog in deferred maintenance has resulted in Congress passing legislation as recently as last year providing billions of additional dollars for DOI to care for the land it currently holds. It would be irresponsible for the federal government to acquire large amounts of new land to achieve the 30 by 30 initiative when it has proven itself incapable of effectively managing the land it currently owns. Additionally, a central tenant of public lands policy is allowing a variety of uses on those lands, such as livestock grazing, energy production and recreation. These activities can help achieve greater conservation of our nation's land and water, making efforts to reduce multiple-use practices on public lands contrary to the stated goals of the executive order.

I am concerned the 30 by 30 initiative is a catchy slogan that threatens to have real consequences on Kansans. Without additional details on how the Biden administration plans to achieve this goal, Kansans are left with extreme uncertainty and deep concerns. It is incumbent on the administration to provide Congress additional details on its plans to enact the 30 by 30 initiative. As you develop recommendations to fulfill the executive order, I strongly urge you to consider the impact the policies, regulations and mandates that will be required to set aside 30 percent of our lands and 30 percent of our waters will have on Kansans.
