

Baxter

Alert readers of Grass & Grain will have seen a recent notice that Baxter Black's weekly column would be his last, due to health reasons. As he retires from doing his column, it seems a fitting time to reflect on Baxter's career and many contributions.

For decades, I read his column in this newspaper. The column was fittingly titled On the Edge of Common Sense, because his way of looking at things bordered between hilarity and lunacy. With all due respect to Waddie Mitchell, Wally McRae, Red Steagall and others, Baxter Black is undoubtedly the most well-known and successful cowboy poet of all time.

Baxter grew up a cowboy, was president of his FFA chapter, and went to veterinary school at Colorado State. He always describes himself as a "former large animal veterinarian" – which made me think that he was a veterinarian for formerly large animals. His experience dealing with agribusiness customers evolved into a public speaking career, and that is when his cowboy poetry came into full bloom.

A long-shot submission of one of his cowboy poems to the National Public Radio office in Washington D.C. led to him becoming an on-air columnist for NPR. He went on to produce a nationally syndicated weekly radio program which has been running since 1989. His newspaper column appeared in more than 150 publications, one of which was Grass & Grain. He gained fame with appearances on the Tonight Show with Johnny Carson. He wrote or co-wrote 35 books. He sold more than two million books, CDs, and DVDs.

He inspired me. I enjoyed reading his columns and books and was honored to get acquainted with Baxter. I recall when he performed before a packed house at K-State's McCain Auditorium for the rodeo club. Years later, he spoke at Kansas Farm Bureau in Manhattan. On the cowboy poetry circuit, I got to meet him again at such places as the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering at Elko, Nevada and the National FFA Convention in Indianapolis. I still recall happening across him in the Denver airport and having a good visit.

What made him so successful? In my opinion, it is three things: He is real, he is gifted, and he is caring. Baxter is an authentic cowboy who could ride, rope, and work with cattle. His poems made old-time cowboys know that he had lived the cowboy life first-hand. Only someone who had lived the day-to-day experience of ranch work and cowboy life would have the depth of his knowledge and understanding.

Secondly, he is gifted. He's a prolific writer with an unparalleled talent for words and stories, with a humorist's eye and a creative mind. He is also a talented stage performer, with a voice and a manner that led hilarity to his spoken word. He had a knack for being able to communicate effectively with an increasingly urbanized public.

Third, he is caring. I always found him to be friendly and approachable. He cared about the people around him and cared deeply about telling agriculture's story.

So as Baxter prepares to ride into the sunset with his columnist pen, I want to thank him for his decades of telling the cowboy story and for brightening the millions of lives he touched. Rest easy, Baxter Black.

Baxter Black
By Ron Wilson, Poet Lariat

Here's to Baxter Black, the very best cowboy poet. He's at the very top, but his ego doesn't show it. He grew up enjoyin' ranch life out New Mexico way, Rode bulls in the rodeo and served in FFA. He went to New Mexico State and CSU, you see, Where he got his doctor of veterinary medicine degree.

He practiced vet medicine on horses and cattle, While livin' the life of a cowboy in the saddle. He has a way with words, in poetry and song, And the way he can bring a story along. So he started performing cowboy poetry, And travels all over for folks to see, From guest appearances on the Tonight Show, To NPR and the National Finals Rodeo.

He spins together hilarious verse: The best-selling cowboy poet in the universe. We love the books which he was able to commence, And his column, On the Edge of Common Sense. Most of all, he knows how true cowboys live. We appreciate the lift his poetry will give. We love Baxter's creative views of the American West: Among cowboy poets, he is truly the best. Happy Trails!

Get your prescriptions for economical and sustainable production of high-quality wheat at Wheat Rx schools

Two seminars in February will deliver the latest research recommendations for high-yielding and high-quality wheat to Kansas wheat farmers. The day-long seminars — one in Wichita and one in Hays — are part of Wheat Rx, a partnership between Kansas Wheat and K-State Research and Extension.

Speakers at the Wheat Rx schools will discuss how to capture value for high-quality wheat, proper fertility to maximize yield and quality, fungicides and wheat health, intensive wheat management and the value of wheat in the production chain. The program will qualify for certified crop advisor (CCA) continuing credit units (CEUs).

“We’re excited to share with Kansas wheat producers what we’ve learned through the Kansas Wheat Commission’s research investments — from the importance of variety selection to the practices and tools farmers can use to improve quality,” said Aaron Harries, vice president of research and operations for Kansas Wheat. “Producers in attendance will leave with knowledge they can put to work to continue their track record of innovation and technology adoption as world leaders in raising high-quality wheat year after year.”

The seminars are scheduled for Feb. 8, 2022, in Wichita, and on Feb. 9, 2022, in Hays. The time for both days is 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

DoubleTree by Hilton
2098 Airport Road

February 9, 2022
Hays

Ft. Hays State University

700 College Drive
“While we cannot change the weather that has a major effect on each year’s crop, Wheat Rx provides actionable research on how to maximize profitability through management of yield and quality,” Harries said. “Data for this project is compiled from small plot research and data from hundreds of commercial wheat fields across Kansas, giving a complete prescription on the genetic potential and management practices to raise the highest-quality winter wheat in the world.”

RSVP by Feb. 2, 2022, for the seminars at <https://kswheat.com/wheatrx>. The cost for the program is $110 per attendee, with lunch and meeting materials included. There is no fee for members of the Kansas Association of Wheat Growers to attend the seminars. To take advantage of this benefit, join or renew your membership today at <https://kswheat.com/join>.

Can’t make it to one of the Wheat Rx schools in February? Stay up-to-date with the latest information from the Wheat Rx website. The site includes a series of Extension publications and other educational outreach materials designed to address key management areas of hard winter wheat, including variety selection, foliar fungicide efficacy ratings, insect pest management, wheat streak mosaic virus and specific publications on wheat diseases that affect wheat heads and grain. These publications contain recent data based on novel research funded in part by wheat farmers through the Kansas Wheat Commission’s two-cent wheat assessment.

Each publication will be two to four pages in length and will focus on a specific wheat production topic. More publications in the series will be released by K-State on an ongoing basis, including updates to existing publications as new research data becomes available.

K-State’s Winter Ranch Management Series scheduled for February

in the state to enhance cow-calf producers’ management strategies.

The meetings will feature a popular town hall, question-and-answer session between Kansas cattle producers and K-State Research and Extension specialists. “The series has a history of being a successful stretch of meetings, which are hosted throughout the state of Kansas,” said Extension specialist Dale Blasi. He added that the topics discussed may include considerations for managing bulls, trends in cattle feeding and strategies for beef cattle implant, though the agenda will vary slightly by location. Blasi said the focus is on enhancing profit in beef production.

The dates and locations planned this year include:

Feb. 8 – Hays. K-State Research and Extension Center (1232 240th Avenue). RSVP by Feb. 1 to Alicia Boor, 620-793-1910, aboor@ksu.edu.

Feb. 10 – Council Grove. Morris County Community Building (612 U.S. Highway 56). RSVP by Feb. 4 to Shannon Spencer, 620-767-5136, sspencer@ksu.edu.

Feb. 15 – Randolph. Blue Valley High School Ag Ed Center (2 Ram Way). RSVP by Feb. 9 to Shannon Blocker, 785-437-3319, sblocker@ksu.edu. More information also is available at www.pottawatomie.ksu.edu.

Feb. 24 – Oakley. Buffalo Bill Cultural Center (3083 U.S. Highway 83). RSVP by Feb. 17 to Kelsi Wertz, 785-673-4805, kjwertz@ksu.edu.

“The Winter Ranch Management Series provides another great opportunity for state and local specialists to take our expertise out in the country for a series of impactful meetings,” Blasi said. “Our Extension team has a breadth of experience in beef cattle management, reproduction, genetics, animal health and nutrition. We’re here to help solve and prevent production problems with reliable information.”

Registration fees vary by location. More information about the series is available at KSUBeef.org.

Country Curiosity and Farm Friendship

There are a lot of amazing things about growing up and living in the country. For me, the best parts about country living is the moments that become life-long stories and the friendships that are made. Some of those stories are happy, loving, sad, infuriating, sympathetic, funny, inspirational, and even unbelievable. The friendships are not much different and are defined by the same categories. This one falls into the unbelievable slot for both the story and friendship.

Now, this story is not mine, but was told to be by a friend, and this friendship I would categorize as loving/sympathetic/infuriating. I can't help but feel sorry for these friends, infuriated by the tricks they play, and love the kind of people they are at their core. I am sure by the end of this story you will be able to deduce that yourself.

Imagine for a second you live in a rural area of Iowa. For someone who's lucky enough to live in the greatest state in America, I personally can't imagine being stuck in a place like that. Somewhere in the middle of this paradise that is Iowa is a farmer and his wife. This story is about both of them, and by the end they will teach you two life lessons.

One day the farmer's wife was driving home from work, and as she turned the corner onto the dirt road she noticed out of the corner of her eye a white TJ Maxx bag was lying on the side of the road. Now, this farmer's wife is honestly just a touch nosy, and at the first sight of the bag she knew she had to look inside. I mean, what if there was something good in there? Maybe it blew out of someone's car and it has a brand-new shirt that was just her size. The curiosity was just too much to bear, and so she pulled over to inspect the bag and claim her reward. Little did she know that she was right, the bag did hold a shirt and a reward, but the shirt wasn't her size, not new, and the reward was not one she wanted. To save the story from being too vulgar I will just say this bag was used as a toilet and the shirt for toilet paper. The farmer's wife quickly dropped the bag and made the couple-mile trip home, gagging all the way.

If you know this farmer and his wife you would know that she should never tell him anything of this nature. After the relentless joking and hazing the farmer finds this as the ultimate opportunity to torture a dear friend. With a beautifully concocted plan this farmer calls a neighbor friend, and tells him that as they were moving creep feeders they saw a car speed by and throw a bag out the window and then heard sirens following behind. They asked if this friend could come down and look, maybe it was full of cash, they told him. Moments later this good friend comes down the road on his four-wheeler with his grandson in tow. He stops and lets his grandson off with the farmer and his wife, because whatever is in this bag could be dangerous. He rolls up to this bag, looks in, drops it, gets on his four-wheeler, and makes his way back to the group, who now are almost rolling on the ground with laughter. This good friend picks up his grandson, sits him on the four-wheeler, points at the farmer, and says, "That is a bad man!"

There are two great lessons in this story.

#1- Do not ever stop and look in a bag on the side of the road, and never trust someone who stops and looks in a bag on the side of the road.

#2- If your farmer friend asks you to come over and check out a dangerous situation, don't, it's probably a trap and they just want to make fun of you.

Hinrichsen joins Red Angus Association of America

The Red Angus Association of America welcomes Cale Hinrichsen to its marketing team as a commercial marketing specialist. Hinrichsen will travel extensively to ranches and sales to promote RAAA marketing programs, conduct audits for the Red Angus Feeder Calf Certification Program and work closely with commercial producers to achieve their individual herd goals.

"We are pleased to add Cale to our team," said Harold Bertz, RAAA director of commercial marketing. "He brings real world knowledge, experience and enthusiasm that Red Angus producers will appreciate. We look forward to Cale's contributions to our commercial producers' marketing efforts."

Originally from Westmoreland, Hinrichsen comes from a cattle industry family. A fourth-generation rancher, he and his family own and operate Hinrichsen Ranch, a registered Angus cow-calf operation. Throughout his youth, Hinrichsen was heavily involved in junior cattle programs at both the state and national levels.

He attended Oklahoma State University and graduated with a bachelor of science in agribusiness with minors in marketing and farm real estate appraisal in May 2021. While at OSU, he was a member of the OSU livestock judging team, Block & Bridle, collegiate Farm Bureau and the Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity.

Outside of his career goals, Hinrichsen plays an active role in his family's operation, enjoys hunting and is an avid golfer.

"I am excited about joining the Red Angus Association of America as it gives me the opportunity to utilize my previous knowledge and experiences to help producers maximize their potential and marketing opportunities. I have always enjoyed great cattle and meeting people in the livestock industry. Working for RAAA allows me to meet with Red Angus producers and I look forward to visiting their ranches throughout the upcoming year," said Hinrichsen.

Hinrichsen started in his new role on Dec. 31 and can be reached at cale@redangus.org or (785) 456-3969.

Argentina limiting beef exports two more years

Argentina will keep in place limits on exports of some beef cuts through the end of 2023 in a bid to curb domestic inflation, Bloomberg reported.

The restrictions cover seven cuts of beef, including flank and short ribs, that are popular with Argentine consumers, the report said. The government is also prohibiting exports from shipping full and half cattle carcasses, it said.

Argentina initiated a temporary ban on all meat exports in May, prompting a strike by producers in the country. It then extended the restrictions on certain beef cuts.

Grass & Grain Letter to the Editor

I've been saddened to learn about the devastating fires that occurred in several western Kansas counties last month. So much loss for so many of our fellow Kansans. Was glad to see on the front page of the January 4th edition of Grass & Grain that ranchers, and others in Pottawatomie County had loaded a number of trucks with feed and other items, and were on their way to deliver it all to Paradise. Having grown up in St. Marys, which is in Pottawatomie County, I felt a special pride and respect for all of those who wanted to help. This is what Americans do. We help each other.

Kansas Senator Jerry Moran and his team have stood ready to assist in any way they can. Senator Moran was out in the devastated area in a matter of days and met with many Kansans affected by the storms and fires. He also boarded a plane with officials in Ellis County for an aerial tour to see the vast extent of land burned throughout the region. I recently spoke with Mike Zamrzla, Deputy State Director. He said that anyone in need of assistance from Senator Moran can call Mike at his office. Telephone number: 316-269-9257. Please don't hesitate to call Mike if you need anything. He's friendly, has worked for Senator Moran for many years, and wants to help you in any he can.

Morel of the story: Online classes will help enthusiasts ID rare mushrooms

K-State Research and Extension, in partnership with the Kansas Department of Agriculture, is offering online classes on March 16 and 17 to help people earn the necessary approval to sell wild morel mushrooms.

The class will be offered online through Zoom from noon to 1 p.m. on March 16, and 6-7 p.m. on March 17.

As their name suggests, wild morel mushrooms grow in the wild, but can be hard to find. For that reason, they are highly favored among chefs and mushroom enthusiasts.

False morels include a number of species that look similar but are actually poisonous.

The classes are intended to help ensure that wild harvested mushrooms sold as morels in the state of Kansas are safe to consume. Current regulations under KDA's food safety and lodging program require that mushrooms picked in the wild for sale must be individually inspected for safety by an approved mushroom identifier.

Upon completing the class – which includes passing an online exam – participants will be recognized as approved morel identifiers in Kansas to meet this regulation.

Registration for the classes is now open and costs $5. Participants will receive the Zoom link for the training after registering.

For questions or to register, call the Reno County Extension Office, 620-662-2371 or send email to Pam Paulsen, ppaulsen@ksu.edu, or Londa Nwadike, lnwadike@ksu.edu.

Record numbers enroll in Hereford feedout programs

Seedstock and commercial cattle producers enrolled a record 756 head of Hereford and Hereford-influenced steers in the American Hereford Association's (AHA) 2022 feedout programs. The significant increase in cattle numbers from 104 participants in 17 states underscores the value producers are gaining from the opportunity.

"I enrolled cattle because I wanted to get the carcass data back and attribute how those cattle perform going back to their dam and sire," says Lee Elzemeyer, a Hereford breeder from Richmond, Ind., who is participating in the Hereford

Feedout Program (HFP) for the second year. "As a producer it is important for us to know which animals produce the highest quality meat, while also looking at other traits that can add premiums to the final product." He encourages others to participate.

Participants in the HFP, which began in 2020, enroll a minimum of five head of steers that comply with a specified 45-day weaning and preconditioning protocol. They receive feedlot performance data for their cattle throughout the feeding period, as well as carcass data at the end.

Similarly, the National Junior Hereford Association (NJHA) Fed Steer Shootout (FSS) program, begun in 2017, enables NJHA members to enroll a minimum of one steer, meeting the same weaning and preconditioning requirements of the HFP. Juniors also receive feedlot and carcass data for their entries and have the opportunity to compete for lucrative prizes by participating in an associated feedlot education program. This year's FSS includes 200 steers from 74 NJHA members in 17 states.

"The growth in the feedout programs provided by the AHA is exciting to see and is a great testament to the progressiveness of Hereford breeders across the country," says Trey Befort, AHA director of commercial programs. "These programs provide a great avenue for participants to gain a better understanding of the cattle feeding industry, while collecting valuable data to benchmark genetic merit and make improvements."

Cattle for both programs are fed at HRC Feed Yards at Scott City, which provides the platform for participants to maximize their profit potential and to expand their marketing avenues by gaining access to an industry-leading marketing grid offered by U.S.

Premium Beef®. This allows participating cattle to be candidates for the Certified Hereford Beef® brand through National Beef Packing Company. HRC offers participants convenient, cost-effective financing options. HRC also hosts an annual field day where participants have a chance to see their entries during the feeding period.

Kora Hawkins, Jane Lew, W.V., competed in the 2020 and 2021 FSS and attended the field day.

"Meeting new people, learning about the feedlot and understanding how cattle perform was a great experience," she says. Hawkins is participating in the 2022 program and encourages others to participate to learn more about their genetics to make better breeding decisions.

For more information about the Hereford Feedout Programs, visit hereford.org/genetics/breed-improvement/feedout-program/.

K-State beef cattle experts talk about the importance of water to herd health

By Lisa Moser

Water is an essential nutrient for people and animals alike. And while water consumption often increases on hot days, it is also an important nutrient in the winter, said the experts at the Kansas State University Beef Cattle Institute on a recent Cattle Chat podcast.

"A cow typically drinks a gallon and a half of water per 100 pounds in the summer, but in the winter that will drop to a half gallon to three-quarters of a gallon per 100 pounds," veterinarian Brad White said. "Still, she is drinking water and producers need to manage the water supply in the winter."

Veterinarian Bob Larson added that easy access to water is crucial.

"The ground around water sources can get muddy with the changing weather, making it difficult for the cattle to come up and get access to the water," he said.

Veterinarian Brian Lubbers added: "In the winter, producers need to make sure the water sources aren't frozen."

Larson agreed and said cattle cannot be without water very long without having health challenges. "Water is the most important nutrient so in a winter event such as a snow and ice storm producers need to have a plan on how they are going to get water to the cattle," he said. "Producers who use electricity to keep the cattle waterers open need to have a backup generator for the water pumps in a power outage."

Nutritionist Phillip Lancaster said producers need to routinely check for electrical shorts in the tanks.

"Sometimes there will be a short that will give the cattle a bit of a shock when they drink and they will stop drinking," he said. "If the cattle aren't drinking, they will often stop eating or reduce the amount of feed they consume, so that is something to watch for."

For producers who routinely take water to the cattle out on pasture, the experts stressed the importance of making sure the transport tanks – as well as the pumps and hoses – were not used for ag chemicals.

"Avoid hauling water in a tank that had herbicides or insecticides in it as well as making sure the pumps and hoses weren't used for the delivery of any chemicals," Larson said.

White added: "Depending on what chemicals were used, a small amount can cause severe side effects."

"When cows have toxicology problems," Larson said, "they aren't just sick; a lot of times they are dead."

SCOTUS denies year-round E15

The U.S. Supreme Court announced it will not take up Growth Energy's appeal of the D.C. Circuit Court decision that struck down the Trump-era Environmental Protection Agency's year-round E15 rule.

Now that SCOTUS declined to reconsider E15 use at the federal level, a state-level approach, such as one being pursued by eight Midwestern states, is "one promising way around the E15 barrier," Renewable Fuels Association President Geoff Cooper says.

Another approach is the bipartisan Consumer and Fuel Retailer Choice Act, Feedstuffs reports. Introduced in July, the bill would ensure EPA has the authority to grant waivers to retailers and allow E15 and higher blends to be sold year-round.

Statewide Women in Agriculture “The Heart of the Farm” event to be held February 26 in Corning

The Nemaha, Jackson, Pottawatomie and Shawnee County Conservation Districts along with a large group of sponsors would like to invite you to the attend the popular Statewide Women in Agriculture event on February 26, 2022, in Corning.

Farming can feel so isolating at times. Your friends don't necessarily understand the hours, busy seasons or constant chore list. The agriculture lifestyle is stressful financially, emotionally, and mentally. There are endless pressures and tasks to be completed and dealt with.

Come join a network of people (men and women are invited!) that understand this life. Come learn with us, eat delicious food (a light breakfast will be available, along with a hearty lunch served), laugh with us and yes, even cry with us as speakers from all over the country and state share their personal stories.

Speakers for the event include Candy Thomas who will cover soil health, Angela Dake who operates an agritourism business on their working farm, Debbie Lyons-Blythe a cattle rancher in the Flint Hills, Mary Jo Irmen who will discuss making the bank Plan B for financing the farm rather than Plan A. Christine McNary will be speaking about Shop Kansas Farms. Finally, keynote speakers, Mark and Nanette Potter, that candidly discuss all things mental health and depression.

The day will be filled with networking, learning and generally taking a step away from the farm so you can return recharged and rejuvenated. To get registered for the event go to www.kswomeninag.com so you can save your seat. Registration is free but limited due to the physical space of the building so sign up soon! You may also call 785-336-2186 x133. If you have special requirements due to a physical, vision or hearing disability, or a dietary restriction, please contact us at 785-336-2186 x133.

U.S. CattleTrace gives update

As of December 2021, the U.S. CattleTrace Database now holds over 2,000,000 individual reads of cattle in the United States for animal disease traceability. The four points collected for the database include the animal I.D. number along with the date, time and location of the read.

The organization also launched an online tag store last year in response to the difficulties of finding and purchasing RFID tags online. Now, interested parties can buy RFID tags on the U.S. CattleTrace website and have them shipped directly to their operations.
