

Schwieterman Market Outlook

A marketing commentary by Bret Crofts

The August supply and demand report held a little bit of something for everyone. There was some bullish stuff, some bearish stuff, and some boring stuff. The most bullish figure of the day was the U.S. cotton ending stocks, which at 1.8 million bales, is the lowest this century. The weather has been horrible in Texas, which has crushed production. The next most bullish number was the U.S. wheat ending stocks that came in much lower than expected at 610 million bushels, which would be the lowest since 2014. Unfortunately we are still dealing with historically low exports and never got the hoped-for boost from the war in Ukraine, otherwise stocks would be uncomfortably tight.

The next most bullish figure was the larger than expected cut in corn yield, which came in at 175.4 bu/ac. Current crop condition ratings suggest that we can't match last year's record, but we aren't looking for a disaster, since 175.4 would still be the fourth highest ever. The corn yield was the last of the major numbers that was bullish, and the soybean yield estimate was much higher than expected at 51.9 bu/ac. Most analysts were looking for a cut in the yield estimate, so the increase caused the initial post report reaction to be quite bearish.

At the end of the day, the corn, wheat, and soybeans had all recovered from the early negative reaction that we saw, and closed mostly higher on the day. December corn closed above the 50-day moving average for the first time since June 17th, the December KW made a two-week-high close, and the November soybeans closed at the highest level in two weeks as well.

On the charts, the next key resistance point in the December corn will come in at $6.55, followed by $6.78. There are still weather concerns moving forward, and crop condition ratings will likely decline further, which can keep the corn moving higher. A surge in demand would provide the market with a big boost, so it was nice to see the large purchase by the Chinese.

The December KW is trying to carve out a rounded, or saucer, bottom. The market still needs to clear $9.21 1/2 to confirm a bottom, but we are definitely seeing progress on that objective. The cut to the ending stocks estimate should provide some underlying support.

September soybeans have the potential to test the contract highs before expiration. The Chinese have been active buyers of new crop soybeans, which is what the bulls need in order to offset the higher yield estimate. Since the September contract has been able to close at the top end of the trading range, with bull spreading, after a bearish report, is a very good indication that we have further upside potential. The November contract is getting left behind a bit since there is less concern about the weather, but if we see another drop in condition ratings on Monday, it will call into question USDA's increase in the yield estimate.

Cattle futures had a good week. Many live cattle contracts are at or near the contract highs. The cash market firmed a bit with southern trade coming in as high as $140. Feeder futures have been trending higher for about three months, so many of those contracts are either at or near contract highs as well. We are still contending with large cow slaughter figures, but that will run out eventually, which is one of the reasons for so much optimism in the deferred live cattle futures. Be patient with cattle hedges.

CHS Foundation to award grants to teachers

For 75 years, the CHS Foundation has helped develop the next generation of ag leaders for life-long success. In honor of this milestone, the foundation is awarding $75,000 in grants for K-12 teachers to implement a project at their school that will engage students in experiential agricultural edu-

"Throughout the years, it's the people who have transformed our contributions into life-changing impact for young leaders in agriculture, and teachers have played a major role," says Nanci Lilja, president of the CHS Foundation. "We are proud of the teachers who put many of these contributions to work, and we're thrilled that these grants will continue to support their efforts."

Funds will be awarded for projects that have a strong tie to agriculture and clearly demonstrate how they will engage students in agricultural topics. Teachers are encouraged to dream big, but ideas include implementing a new ag class or pathway or purchasing agriculture equipment for hands-on learning.

Written and video submissions will be accepted until Oct. 1, 2022. First place will be awarded $20,000, second place will receive $15,000 and third place will receive $10,000. An additional 12 finalists will be selected and each receive $2,500. The top three teacher finalists will travel all expenses paid to the CHS Annual Meeting, held in Minneapolis from Dec. 1-2, 2022, to present their idea to a live audience. First, second and third place winners will be decided during live voting by the annual meeting's attendees.

Additional details:
• The initiative is open to any K-12 educators in a CHS trade territory (Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Washington, Wisconsin, and Wyoming).

• Applications must be submitted by a teacher, and applicants must have school administration approval for the project.

"Over the span of 75 years, the CHS Foundation has contributed nearly $84 million to help build a strong agriculture talent pipeline for the future," says Lilja. "The last 75 years of giving would be nothing without strong educators and students involved in agriculture, and together the next 75 years will be just as bright."

Kansas Hay Market Report

Compared to the last report, prices for alfalfa and grass hay continue to be bullish in all regions, most notably dairy quality hay was up another .05/pt RFV. Demand remains high for all types of hay and everything that can be baled is being baled due to the ongoing drought. There seems to be some hay out there, and operators want to lock in a deal, but some producers aren't quite ready to let it go yet, as the long-term forecast looks bleak. According to the U.S. Drought Monitor for August 2nd, localized pockets of moderate to heavy rain fell across portions of western Kansas. Abnormally dry conditions (D0) decreased to 12%, moderate drought (D1) remained near 23%, severe drought (D2) increased to 20.5%, extreme drought (D3) remained near 17%, and exceptional drought (D4) remained near 8%. Join agriculture leaders from across the state for the Kansas Governor's Summit on Agricultural Growth August 17th and 18th. More information about the Summit and registration, including the Feed and Forage breakout session on August 11th, go to www.agriculture.ks.gov/Summit.

Tough culling decisions come with drought, forage shortages

With dry weather and short pastures, cow-herd owners face tough culling decisions. One way to match cows' needs to available grass is to sell cows.

Give careful thought to which grass eaters go first, says Eric Bailey, University of Missouri Extension beef nutritionist. Under drought stress, identifying those cows becomes urgent.

The first cut is simple,

Bailey says. Even the best herds have poor performers that need to be culled. Sell cows not pregnant or nursing. There is no feed for freeloaders when forage is short.

"Next, cull lactating cows with bad disposition, bad eyes, bad feet or bad udders," Bailey says. "Now's time to remove cows with blemishes or poor-doing calves."

Everyone has a cull list, he adds. "But they hesitate to act if a cow has a calf." Some culling helps even in good years. Culling poor cows improves herd averages.

The goal: Keep best genetics in the herd as long as feasible. Finally, lack of feed or water forces a move.

Downsizing goes beyond simply getting rid of bad cows, Bailey says.

Early weaning and selling calves can cut feed demand. That provides needed cash but can hurt annual income.

Another strategy calls for splitting a herd into young and old females. Sell one of the groups. Two- to four-year-olds may have superior genetics, but older cows show success in the farm's management.

Overall, culling depends on forage outlook for summer, fall and winter feeding.

Level of destocking can differ from farm to farm in the same neighborhood. Rainfall patterns vary greatly.

Bailey points out that in typical years, two-thirds of forage yield comes in spring growth. One-third comes in fall growth. That's when winter stockpiling should happen.

Producers with cool-season grass always deal with summer slumps.

Even if rains return, Bailey cautions, expect below-average fall forage yields. Fortunately, fertilizer prices have come down recently. Put down 40 pounds of nitrogen in August to help boost fall growth.

Most producers are already feeding hay and may face shortages this winter. Also, hay growth this year may have been affected by spring fertilizer prices.

A big long-term problem will be winter feed, Bailey says.

Many farms face severe destocking. "Initially, consider a 25% cut," he says. "If normal rains don't return, consider another 25% later."

Selling calves early in spite of revenue loss may take care of downsizing needs.

A 50% cut ahead of fall forage growth may allow stockpiling pastures for winter grazing. That cuts feed buying but depends on a return of rainfall.

The main advice is to plan downsizing, Bailey says. Management improvements, such as shorter breeding seasons, not year-round calving, can benefit.

For optimists, drought-induced culls can be beneficial. It forces decisions and management.

To clarify thinking, Bailey offers a final thought: "Producers who last longest in cow-calf businesses are not those who make the most money in good years. They are those who lose the least in bad years."

Old Abilene

It was a great day for Abilene. People came from all over the country, and Abilene was their destination. That may sound like Old West times – and there were indeed longhorn cattle in the streets – but this took place in 2022.

The occasion was a media event put on by Kansas Tourism and hosted by the City of Abilene. More than 40 travel writers and bloggers from across the country came to Abilene as part of a promotion of the Kansas travel industry. The first night welcome party was in Old Abilene Town. The following day's schedule called for visits to the newly opened exhibits at the Eisenhower Center and Museum and the Wild Bill Hickok Rodeo that night. During the day, representatives of the other Kansas travel regions came and shared their attractions with the travel writers.

Abilene pulled out the stops, and it was great. Old Abilene Town was hoppin' as local citizens and the travel writers showed up for the fun. CVB director Julie Roller Weeks and Old Abilene Town's Michael Hook pulled together a tremendous event.

Old Abilene Town is one of my favorite places. It is a recreation of an 1860s pioneer village, built to represent Abilene's history as the first of the famous cattle towns. I remember visiting Old Abilene Town as a kid and having a ton of fun. Through the following decades, I also saw it become run-down. I'm so thrilled that a group of volunteers have rallied together to rebuild and reinvigorate this historic landmark.

Old Abilene Town looked great on this night in 2022. Just as the scene might have appeared more than 150 years ago, cowboys on horseback drove a herd of longhorn cattle down the main street of Old Abilene Town and loaded them onto a train car pulled by a steam engine. It was a sight to see – although in 1867, there probably wasn't a throng of people holding up cell phones to record the moment.

Can-can dancers performed at the saloon. Gunfighters had a shootout in the streets. Dave Zerfas of Manhattan crooned his cowboy ballads. A stagecoach gave rides to happy passengers. High schoolers played great music and sang onstage. The steam locomotive whistled as the excursion train took visitors down the tracks. What a fantastic night!

I performed cowboy poetry in the Bull's Head Pavilion. I pointed out that Wild Bill Hickok, for example, wasn't just a character in a comic book or a Hollywood movie. There really was a Wild Bill Hickok who roamed the streets of this very town.

Fellow Grass & Grain columnist Jim Gray was also there. He has written eloquently on these pages about the genuine western history of Kansas towns, including Abilene. There's no better Old West historian than Jim.

Speaking of the Bull's Head, that is another victory for Abilene. It is historically documented that Abilene's Bull's Head Saloon, owned by Shotgun Ben Thompson, was a popular spot for the drovers at the end of the trail.

In 2021, Julie Roller Weeks received an online notice that the actual wooden Bull's Head from the saloon, complete with a certificate of authenticity, would be put up for auction. It had gotten into the hands of an out-of-state collector who was offering it for sale. Once again the citizens of Abilene rallied together. They donated funds and outbid everyone else for the beautiful Bull's Head, which is now proudly on display at the Trails Center in Old Abilene Town.

It was another great day for Abilene.

Coming up in a future column: The true story of another bull who made a comeback.

The Bull's Head is Back

By Ron Wilson, Poet Lariat

In the days of the cattle drives, more than a century ago, Abilene's Bull's Head Saloon is where the drovers would go.

Blowing off steam was what the Bull's Head saloon was for.

A wooden longhorn bull head was part of the décor.

Who knows where it was taken as the many decades passed?

An out-of-state collector had it in his hands at last. He chose to put that gorgeous bull's head on the auction block,

Which caused the Abilene folks to do much more than talk.

They gathered up donations and put in a winning bid,

And reclaiming the bull's head is what they finally did.

Now Old Abilene Town's Trail Center is where it can be seen,

And I'm so glad that famous Bull Head is back in Abilene.

Happy Trails!

K-State Extension to host workshop about feeding livestock with limited hay resources

Due to the drought, forage production and hay supplies have been negatively affected, to the point that hay prices keep moving up and producers are resorting to baling corn stalks just to be able to feed their livestock. In many parts of the country, cattle producers have made the difficult decision to sell livestock because there is no forage for the animals to eat.

On August 25, the Cherokee County Extension Office will be the host site for "Feeding with Limited Hay" workshop. This meeting will begin at 7:00 p.m. and can be attended either in-person or virtually. Kansas Forage and Grassland Council is co-sponsoring the event with K-State Research and Extension.

Dr. Bruno Pedreira, KSU SE Area agronomist, will discuss filling the forage gap. Meaning, are there any forages producers can plant to extend the grazing season throughout the winter, what time should they be planted, and when can a producer expect to graze or harvest those forages. Jim Hollenback, nutritionist with Farmers Co-op, will discuss using grain and a limited amount of hay to meet the animal's nutritional requirements.

A large portion of the meeting will be devoted to a round table discussion where livestock owners can ask specific questions about their particular situation. The meeting is free to attend. Doors will open at 6:30 at the Cherokee County Extension Office located at 124 W. Country Rd in Columbus. To receive the Zoom link to attend virtually, call the Cherokee County Extension Office at 620-429-3849.

Kansas State University is committed to making its services, activities and programs accessible to all participants. If you have special requirements due to a physical, vision, or hearing disability, contact Dale Helwig, Cherokee County Extension, 124 W. Country Rd, Columbus, KS 66725, phone 620-429-3849 or email dhelwig@ksu.edu.

Monitoring for summer pneumonia in calves

By Lisa Moser, K-State Research and Extension news service

In the winter, it is common for people to have a cold or respiratory illness, but sickness in the summer often catches people unprepared.

In much the same way, cattle producers may be surprised when their calves show signs of respiratory distress during the summer before they are weaned, said the veterinarians at the Kansas State University Beef Cattle Institute on a recent Cattle Chat podcast.

"Signs of pneumonia in calves include rapid breathing, laying down and being reluctant to rise, and having a high temperature," said veterinarian Bob Larson. "These calves may also stray behind the rest of the herd due to difficulty breathing."

He added that the most likely age for calves to be diagnosed with pneumonia is between 70-150 days of age, often in late summer for spring calving herds.

One of the reasons that they are susceptible to sickness is their waning immunity.

"Newborn calves get immunity from the proteins in their mother's colostrum, but those proteins degrade over time, which is why some of the biggest calves can get sick," said veterinarian Brad White.

Veterinarian Brian Lubbers added: "These calves have passive immunity that is dropping, and their host immunity hasn't quite risen to the level of being protective."

The calves are not necessarily in a high exposure environment since they are still with their mothers, but because their immunity is declining, they are not as well-protected against sickness, Larson said.

However, if newly weaned stocker calves are introduced on the ranch, they can raise the risk of sickness in the pre-weaned calves. So White encouraged keeping these two populations separated for biosecurity.

"When people talk about a summertime pre-weaning pneumonia, the respiratory sickness is primarily associated with viral infections," Lubbers said.

White said summer pneumonia is not common and is oftentimes survivable with the right treatment.

"About one in five herds will experience pre-weaning pneumonia, and within those herds up to 15% of the calves will be infected," he said. One prevention strategy is to vaccinate the calves against bovine respiratory disease around three months of age, but that isn't a guarantee that they won't get sick, Larson said.

"Young animals don't typically respond as well to vaccines as ones that are seven months of age or older," Larson said.

As with any animal health challenge Larson urged producers to "consult your veterinarian to determine the best treatment and prevention plans for your herd."

To hear the full discussion, listen to the Beef Cattle Institute Cattle Chat podcast online.

Farmers National Company partners with Climate FieldView to digitize farm management

Farmers National Company, the nation's leading agricultural land and mineral owner services company, has partnered with Climate FieldView™ Bayer's flagship digital farming product, to offer increased digital management for landowners and tenants working with Farmers National Company. Farm managers at Farmers National Company now have access to digital agriculture tools provided by FieldView to complement collaboration between landowners, tenants, and management services provided by the company.

This partnership leverages agriculture technology to drive decision-making and uncover management opportunities between farmers and landowners, while offering another option for tenants to share required data for leases more easily. Tenant farmers can choose to initiate a sharing connection to a Farmers National Company farm manager through the Climate FieldView platform, if desired. Farm managers within the company will be able to gain field-level insights on a variety of management areas including real-time field-level weather, satellite imagery, and data entry for field operations. Tenants interested in the collaboration should contact their Farmers National Company farm manager for more details.

"We are committed to Farmers National Company to the highest level of support and professional service to our landowners and tenants, and this collaboration enhances our ability to connect to all stakeholders digitally and enhance collaboration to ensure farm managers have the tools available to them to help our landowners and tenants make the best decisions on each farm," says Clayton Becker, president at Farmers National Company.

"Climate FieldView has proven value to farmers across the world, and now is being used for farm managers to provide efficient decision-making and transparency for landowners and tenants. Farmers National Company has a history of progressive expansion in agriculture and this new opportunity to connect to clients digitally shows a commitment to further growth," said Ron Dunker, who supports Farm Manager Accounts at Bayer Crop Science.

Beef Stocker Field Day scheduled for Sept. 29

Beef cattle economic outlook, ongoing issues surrounding the transportation and cattle industry, and improving efficiency through feeding strategies and cattle comfort are among topics planned for 2022 Kansas State University Beef Stocker Field Day on Thursday, Sept. 29. The conference will be hosted at the KSU Beef Stocker Unit. "This year's program reflects the challenging landscape our industry is experiencing," says Dale Blasi, K-State Animal Sciences and Industry professor and beef cattle Extension specialist. "The experiences and thoughts of our assembled speakers and panelists will provide insights as we progress into an unknown future." The day will start with a welcome at 9:30 a.m. and will conclude around 5 p.m. Sponsoring this year's event is Boehringer Ingelheim Animal Health.

- Topics for this year's agenda include:
- Beef Cattle Economic Outlook
 - Ongoing Issues Surrounding the Transportation and Cattle Industry
 - Evidence-Based Approach to Improving Stocker Health & Performance
 - Triumphs and Tribulations of Respiratory Disease in Stocker Calves
 - Harnessing Nature: How to Use Dung Beetles to Improve Herd and Pasture Health
 - Improving Efficiency Through Feeding Strategies and Cattle Comfort
 - Native Pasture Burning Strategies: Impacts on Cattle Performance and Pasture Vigor

Registration is $25 and due Sept. 15. Walk-in registration is available for $35. To register go to asi.ksu.edu/stockerfieldday. For more information, contact Lois Schreiner at 785-532-1267 or lschrein@ksu.edu.

Fall armyworm scouting

By David G. Hallauer, Meadowlark District Extension agent, crops and soils/horticulture
As hopeful as I am we'll avoid last fall's armyworm feeding onslaught, it's time to again be scouting for fall armyworm feeding. Known to feed on over 80 host plants, forage crops seem to be their hosts of choice for us in northeast Kansas this time of year.

Because they don't overwinter in Kansas, we sometimes have the luxury of early warnings from states to our south. While numbers stayed fairly low for most of the summer in Texas, pheromone trap numbers have recently increased, with offspring of flights detected there likely moving north. In fact, trapping in southwest Kansas in late July suggested increasing numbers as well, with adult moths likely active at least through southern Kansas.

Alfalfa, forage sorghum, and broomegrass are the mostly likely crops requiring scouting. Damage may include ragged leaf edges and window-paning, a result of larval feeding. For more information, check out our broomegrass fact sheet at: www.meadowlark.kstate.edu/docs/crops-soils/Armyworms%20in%20Broomegrass%202021.pdf.

Nuts and bolts of forage sampling and analysis

By Ross Mosteller, Meadowlark District Extension agent, livestock and natural resources

Once a month I sit in on a Zoom meeting with Extension agents across the state and we discuss the current issues surrounding livestock production. Expanding drought across Kansas and the reduced inventory of forage resources is still a hot topic (no pun intended)! Meadowlark District continues to generally sit much better than the rest of the state, but the topic discussed today doesn't become less important. It may be even more important, if you plan to market harvested forages to those in need of feed.

The old saying, "You can't manage what you don't measure" is especially true when it comes to forage sampling. There are generalities and average forage quality numbers from sources such as NRC; but the best way to formulate rations and/or sell forage is based on a representative forage analysis of the forage you have. Quality can vary widely, based upon fertility, timing of harvest, weather conditions, storage, to name a few. Collecting samples from similar "lots" of forage type, managed in the same way, is an important first step. Timing of sampling can create variability, but generally the closer sampling and testing is done to feeding or marketing, the more reflective it will be to the "lot."

Representative samples, taken from across the forage lot, will be important to increase accuracy of results. A minimum of ten to 20 samples, mixed and then sub-sampled, is a baseline. Baled hay is best sampled with a forage probe, coring directly perpendicular to the surface of the bale. Many different types of probes are available, with our Extension offices offering probes for checkout. Loose or hand samples can be taken for silage and standing forages, with the same sample/sub-sample process used. These higher moisture samples need to be processed quickly to get accurate results, without spoiling. Results can take several days to weeks to get back; depending on the testing service, delivery options and time of year.

So, what should a producer be looking at testing for? The major items are protein and energy content, but a wide array of testing options exist. Relative Feed Value

(RFV) is a good test to run that gives a snapshot view of forage quality and is often a standard value used to market forage. Testing for toxic issues such as nitrates and/or prussic acid are also popular test options. If checking for these issues, nutrient analysis should be conducted as well, since the fixed cost of postage is already involved. Again, our offices can help you with determining what test to run, laboratories to use, help with interrupting results and balancing rations.

A couple of good resources to learn more about forage sampling and analysis are: K-State Forage Facts Notebook, Oklahoma State Publication and National Forage Testing Association which can be found on the Meadowlark Extension District website, under Livestock and Natural Resources. Another resource or two that might be helpful on the marketing side are: the Kansas Direct Hay Report and the Kansas Hay Exchange.

K-State faculty member honored for wildlife work; Ahlers named Fellow by The Wildlife Society

By Pat Melgares, K-State Research and Extension news service

A Kansas State University faculty member whose career focuses on wildlife education and conservation science has been named to The Wildlife Society's Fellows program.

Adam Ahlers, an associate professor of wildlife and outdoor enterprise management in the Department of Horticulture and Natural Resources, said he was "honored and surprised" to be recognized by The Wildlife Society, an international organization with more than 11,000 members.

According to The Wildlife Society, "the fellows program recognizes members who have distinguished themselves through exceptional service to their profession."

"There are many wildlife professionals across North America who may be much more deserving of this recognition than I, but I'm genuinely honored that TWS has recognized my work in the profession and within the Society," Ahlers said.

As a wildlife and landscape ecologist, Ahlers said he helps answer many questions for state and federal natural resource agencies - including the National Park Service, Kansas Department of Wildlife and Parks, and others - regarding applied wildlife conservation and management practices.

"A lot of my work centers on how wildlife populations respond to landscape change, such as invasive species, habitat loss and urbanization," Ahlers said. "My colleagues and I work in many different ecosystems, including wetlands in Voyageurs National Park and in the Flint Hills and prairies of Kansas."

Currently, he is working on projects evaluating the impact of wetland quality and drought on muskrat populations in the Great Lakes region and also finding strategic ways to manage swift fox populations in Kansas.

Ahlers began teaching at K-State in 2015 after completing a doctoral degree at the University of Illinois, where he also earned a master's degree.

He has been a member of The Wildlife Society for 16 years, serving in numerous roles, including president of the Central Mountains and Plains Section (representing seven states and nearly 1200 members). He is currently president-elect of the Kansas chapter of The Wildlife Society.

Midwestern senators file bill to increase ethanol use

Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa) and a bipartisan group of midwestern senators introduced the Next Generation of Fuels Act recently. The bill is identical to H.R. 5089 which was filed in the House of Representatives last year by Rep. Cheri Bustos (D-Ill.)

According to the National Corn Growers Association, the bill would establish a clean, high-octane standard for gasoline and require that sources of additional octane result in at least 40 percent fewer greenhouse gas emissions, allowing automakers to significantly improve vehicle fuel efficiency through advanced engines.

Proponents also claim that the proposal would increase ethanol demand by over 5 billion gallons per year, which would utilize 1.7 billion bushels of additional corn.

2022 scholarship winners announced at AGJA Crossroads Classic

The future of the Gelbvieh breed looks brighter each and every year. This year, eight scholarships were awarded totaling $5,500 at the 2022 AGJA Crossroads Classic Awards Banquet held in Salina July 8, 2022. Gabrielle Hammer, daughter of Lyle and Christy Hammer of Wallace was awarded the $1000 Earl Buss Memorial Scholarship as well as the $500 Mary Zillinger Cates Scholarship. Gabrielle currently attends Fort Hays State University majoring in Biology with the hopes of furthering her education applying for a doctorate in Physical. A 3.95 GPA student, Hammer has excelled over the years in the areas of leadership and citizenship through 4-H and the AGJA. Hammer has received a top ten exhibitor title eight times in the AGJA. Preston Dunn, son of Brian and Carolyn Dunn of Saint John, was awarded the $1000 Leness Hall Memorial Scholarship. Dunn will be attending Kansas State University, majoring in Animal Science as well as Agricultural Economics. Dunn has gone above and beyond over the years, volunteering and leading

Junior National level. Jaylea Pope, daughter of Jeff and Jeanne Pope of Ravenna, Nebraska, was awarded a $750 AGJA scholarship. Majoring in Agricultural Education with a minor in Animal Science, Pope will attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in the Fall. A current AGJA Board member, Pope, continues to excel within the association as a former Ambassador, two-time All-Around Exhibitor, and 2020 Premier Breeder as well as exhibiting multiple bred & owned champion entries.

Jaycie Forbes, daughter of Troy, and Pam Forbes of De Smet, South Dakota was awarded a $750 AGJA scholarship. Majoring in Agricultural Communications at South Dakota State University with a 3.5 GPA, Forbes continues to dedicate her time to the AGJA as the newly elected AGJA President. Actively involved in 4-H, FFA and her community, Forbes has a promising future in the beef industry.

Lily Judd, daughter of Nick and Ginger Judd of Pomona, received a $500 AGJA scholarship. A hopeful sales manager for her home operation of Judd Ranch will attend Butler Community College majoring in Livestock Management and Merchandising. As a long-time member of 4-H and FFA, Judd also actively participated in multiple sports, National Honor Society and Phi Theta Kappa in High School.

activities with his local, regional, and state 4-H organizations, including teaching classes at state 4-H conferences. A member of National Honor Society, Kay Club, Student Council, and FCCLA (among others), Dunn exemplifies leadership and devotion to the development of himself through assisting others.

Jayden Carrier, daughter of LeAnn Maude and the late Aaron Carrier of Hermosa, South Dakota, was awarded the $500 Rea Memorial Scholarship. Carrier will attend Casper Community College in Casper, Wyoming majoring in Forensic Science and work toward a Paralegal Certificate. Carrier was recently named a top four finalist for the first-ever AGJA Junior Breeder of The Year award. A 3.8 GPA student, Carrier was actively involved in Shooting Sports, Youth Group, Band, Theatre, and the Hill City Student Council. Baxter Lowe, son of Raymond and Melissa Lowe of Adrian, Missouri, was awarded the $500 Patti Kendrick Memorial Scholarship. An Animal Science major at Fort Scott Community College, Lowe maintains a 3.7 GPA earning him a membership with Phi Theta Kappa International Honor Society. A ten-year member of the AGJA, Lowe accomplished multiple titles, including AGJA Ambassador, as well as earning the Champion Steer at the
