

Kansas Hay Market Report

Compared to the last report, the hay market was a bit calmer this past week, meaning we didn't see the huge upward changes that we have seen in recent weeks. Folks are busy in the fields either harvesting, planting wheat, or baling whatever they can find left to bale. Several hay fires were reported last week which stings even more when every bale is needed. According to the U.S. Drought Monitor for September 27th, more than 70% of the topsoil moisture was short or very short in Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, and Wyoming, according to USDA statistics. Abnormally dry conditions in Kansas (D0) decreased to 16%, moderate drought (D1) increased to 15.5%, severe drought (D2) remained at 14%, extreme drought (D3) decreased to near 28%, and exceptional drought (D4) increased to 25%. This leaves only 1.5% of the state's area without abnormally dry or drought conditions.

American Farmland Trust leads group in effort to transition U.S. beef supply to carbon neutral

American Farmland Trust and partner organizations are being awarded a $30-million grant from the USDA Partnerships for Climate-Smart Commodities to spearhead an effort to transition the U.S. beef supply chain to carbon neutral. The eight-state project will amplify production of climate-smart beef by expanding market drivers, grassroots support networks and early adopter mentors, while also providing technical assistance for the adoption of climate-smart grazing practices to substantially reduce agricultural greenhouse gas emissions and increase carbon sequestration.

"This effort is critical in transitioning the country's U.S. beef supply chain to one that is more environmentally friendly," said Beth Sauerhaft, AFT vice president of programs. "Beyond this, we will support farmers in protecting their land through permanent easements to help ensure that the soil health and climate benefits from those practices continue far into the future."

The project will help produce climate-smart beef for all market levels - from direct sales through local farmers' markets to regional distribution channels to national and global consumer-facing food companies. The project team will engage and train more than 50 producer mentors, transition more than 750 beef producers, map and about 600,000 acres and permanently protect at least 3,000-4,500 acres of threatened farmland.

"We are excited about the level of impact we will be able to achieve with this project," said Bianca Moebius-Clune, AFT climate initiative director and principal investigator. "We anticipate being able to sequester at least one to five million tons of CO₂e during the five-year project, but more importantly we project self-sustaining and accelerating expansion of climate smart system adoption and stable, broadly available verified climate smart marketing opportunities beyond the end of USDA funding."

AFT and its partners will provide a range of virtual and in-person outreach and training. It will further help interested landowners and local land trusts explore options for farmland protection that directly reinforce climate-smart systems adoption.

In addition to AFT, project partners include The Integrity Beef Alliance, Indigo Agriculture, Earth Optics, Freedman Heirs Foundation, AgriWebb, Regenified, OpenTEAM, U.S. Biochar Initiative and many regional and community-based partners.

"The Integrity Beef Alliance is thrilled to have received USDA funding enabling the alliance and our partners to aggressively move forward on the industry game-changing Legacy Beef program benefiting producers, consumers and our planet," said Meredith Ellis, Integrity Beef Alliance board member and producer member.

"The USDA grant is an excellent opportunity to demonstrate regenerative approaches to the beef cattle industry that are good for the environment, people, animals and the ranch bottom line. Not only will the Integrity Beef Legacy program facilitate broad market access to higher premiums for climate smart beef for all sizes of operations, but we plan to continue support for underserved producers after the project period by allotting up to 50 percent of Alliance net income as grants to new producers to help offset costs of regenerative transitions," added Robert Wells, executive director, Integrity Beef Alliance.

"Indigo Ag is excited to partner with ranchers across the country, leveraging our experience in soil carbon measurement to better model the benefits of sustainable grazing practices on the environment," said A.J. Kumar, vice president, Sustainability Science at Indigo Ag. "A bold, collaborative effort backed by rigorous measurement, this project will help unlock new opportunities for climate-smart ranchers to benefit from the mounting demand for low-carbon beef and successfully move the needle on climate."

"EarthOptics is thrilled to be working with American Farmland Trust and the other partners," says Lars Dyrud, CEO of EarthOptics. "With AFT's assistance, we will be able to provide their Farmers and Ranchers with unprecedented quality and the highest resolution carbon mapping available today."

"Freedman Heirs Foundation is excited to have received USDA funding along with industry partners to identify minority and underserved farmers, launch pilot programs, and provide training on implementing grazing methods that will increase soil health, and sequester carbon, while promoting climate neutral beef," said Seanicaa Edwards Herron, executive director, Freedman Heirs Foundation.

"Actionable, accessible data is at the core of every U.S. beef producer's ability to operate as profitably, productively and sustainably as possible," said Kevin Baum, AgriWebb Co-Founder and CEO. "The support this grant will provide to climate-smart beef producers, both through mentorship and through accessible tech solutions, fuels our industry's mission to deliver carbon neutral products and empower those doing the real work to make it happen."

"The U.S. Biochar Initiative is looking forward to collaborating to promote the successful integration of sustainably sourced, climate smart biochar amendments into regenerative grazing and manure management. This AFT-led project will create markets and help the biochar industry scale up for permanent carbon removal which enhances nutrient management, soil health, and long-term biological carbon sequestration," said Tom Miles, USBI executive director.

"The Open Technology Ecosystem for Agricultural Management (OpenTEAM) and Wolfe's Neck Center for Agriculture and the Environment is honored to collaborate with AFT and others in such a rich and growing community dedicated to providing the best possible agricultural knowledge to all, regardless of scale, culture or geography," said Dorn Cox, Research Director, OpenTEAM Community. "We celebrate our work together as a first important step in a larger human endeavor that will support urban and rural economies based on regenerating our working landscapes and the critical shared technological infrastructure needed for transformative change."

Flint Hills Discovery Center Foundation announces upcoming fundraising event, Bison, Beef & Bourbon

Bison, Beef & Bourbon, the Flint Hills Discovery Center Foundation's third annual signature fundraiser, takes place on Thursday, October 20, from 6:30-9:30 p.m. at The Wareham Opera House, 410 Poyntz Ave, Manhattan, KS.

The evening will feature a variety of food, fun, and entertainment.

The menu includes tasty bison and beef cuisine, including Bison Tenderloin with green peppercorn sauce, Hickory Smoked King Salmon with lemon dill sauce, Hand Carved K.C. Strip Loin Sliders, and sides. Complimentary drinks including signature cocktails made with Horse Soldier Bourbon will be available.

The event features a silent and live auction and musical entertainment from Heartland Dueling Pianos. All auction proceeds will benefit the Flint Hills Discovery Center Foundation in its support of educational initiatives at the Discovery Center.

"This year's event will bring us together to celebrate the great successes of the second-floor renovation into Prairie Playscape and the provision of a 15-passenger van enabling more outreach programs into the Flint Hills," said Bruce Snead, FHDC Foundation President. "Our focus for 2023 will be technology enhancements including a full building sound system to increase audio quality and enjoyment of programs and presentations, a need identified by our visitors and members."

To learn more about Bison, Beef & Bourbon, please contact Foundation Director, Lesley White at fhdcfoundation1@gmail or 785-748-1275, or go to the Flint Hills Discovery Center Foundation Facebook page for event information and how to purchase tickets.

KFB Legal Foundation awards first rural practice grants, accepting applications for next round

The Kansas Farm Bureau (KFB) Legal Foundation has named three new attorneys as recipients of the organization's first Rural Law Practice Grants.

Kate Langworthy, Mary McMullen and Luke Sunderland are eligible to receive up to $16,500 each to help defray the cost of their education as they begin practicing law in rural areas of Kansas.

"Kansas farmers and ranchers need sound legal advice across a broad range of issues, especially as operations expand and become more complex," Wendee Grady, Kansas Farm Bureau Legal Foundation director, says. "I'm excited KFB's Legal Foundation is helping three new attorneys begin their careers in private and public roles that impact the quality of life for farmers, ranchers and rural Kansans."

Langworthy received her juris doctor from Washburn University and is a staff attorney at the Kansas Department of Agriculture. McMullen, a University of Kansas Law School graduate, is an assistant county attorney in Leavenworth County. Sunderland, also a KU Law graduate, is in private practice in his hometown of Sabetha.

The KFB Legal Foundation board selects up to three recipients each year from law students in the fall semester before their anticipated graduation date. The selection process favors applicants who demonstrate a strong desire to live and work in rural Kansas, understand the legal issues farmers and ranchers commonly face, have high academic achievements and show a financial need. Rural Kansas is defined as anywhere outside Douglas, Johnson, Sedgwick, Shawnee or Wyandotte counties.

Recipients receive the grant money in three installments, with the first $5,500 paid after passing the bar examination and starting practice in rural Kansas. The remaining installments will be paid after a recipient's continued practice in rural Kansas for one and two years, respectively.

KFB's Legal Foundation is accepting applications for the next round of grants through Nov. 1. Applicants must complete the application and submit it with a résumé, transcript and letter of recommendation. For more information about the Rural Law Practice Grant or to view an application, visit www.kfb.org/legalfoundation.

Swine Day scheduled for November 17 in Manhattan

Research updates for take-home implementation are the cornerstone of Kansas State University's annual Swine Day planned for Thursday, November 17.

"K-State Swine Day is focused on bringing relevant information to swine producers and allied industry professionals," says Joel DeRouchey, K-State Department of Animal Sciences and Industry (ASI) swine Extension specialist. "We emphasize application information for the swine industry in a wide variety of areas, and this year's program will highlight numerous topics for our attendees."

The 2022 Swine Day will kick off with a technology trade show featuring more than 30 vendors. The trade show opens at 8 a.m. at the K-State Alumni Center, 1720 Anderson Ave., in Manhattan, and concludes at 4 p.m.

During the morning session, K-State ASI department head Dr. Mike Day will welcome attendees and K-State swine faculty will discuss the latest updates on K-State applied swine research, highlighting nutrition, management, feed processing, feed safety and pig livability.

The afternoon program will feature Dr. Steve Pollmann, DSP Consulting LLC, who will discuss past major innovations and emerging technologies in swine production. Dr. Pollmann has spent a distinguished career in both academia and industry swine positions.

The Swine Day program begins at 9:15 a.m. and includes lunch. The day wraps up with a reception at 3:30 p.m. featuring K-State Call Hall ice cream.

The fee to register is $25 per person if paid by Nov. 10, and $50 after that date or at the door. Students may attend free of charge if they register by Nov. 10. Registration is available online at KSUSwine.org or by sending a check payable to Animal Sciences and Industry, addressed to: KSU Swine Day, 218 Weber Hall, 1424 Claffin Road, Manhattan, KS 66506. For more information, contact Lois Schreiner at 785-532-1267 or Ischrein@ksu.edu.

Ag leaders from across the country visited CDC professionals in Atlanta recently.

National Institute for Animal Agriculture Partners with CDC

NIAA invited animal agriculture leaders from across the country engage with CDC professionals at their home office in Atlanta, Georgia.

In August, The National Institute for Animal Agriculture (NIAA) hosted a group of ten farmers, ranchers, and veterinarians on a tour and engagement visit with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Each year the Cattleman's Beef Board designates Beef Checkoff funding to programming that includes research, foreign marketing, industry information, consumer information and safety. NIAA's project was approved in 2021 with a plan to connect farmers and ranchers and industry professionals to CDC and other public health professionals to learn and engage on the importance of responsible antibiotic use in animal agriculture.

"The responsible use of antibiotics in animal agriculture is one of the most misunderstood topics in today's food system," said J.J. Jones, executive director of NIAA. "Farmers, ranchers and veterinarians face an ever-changing landscape of consumer demands without much needed constructive discussion or feedback."

NIAA believes the future of animal antibiotic use will be shaped by consistent, effective communication and collaboration between the animal agriculture sector and its allies to combat antimicrobial resistance (AMR) through a One Health approach.

Megin Nichols, DVM, MPH, DACVPM, CDC Deputy Division Director, Division of Foodborne, Waterborne, and Environmental Diseases and co-chair of the NIAA antibiotics council, sees the mutual benefits to be gained from collaborative in-person sessions "The opportunity to meet in-person and share ideas through the NIAA engagement with livestock producers regarding the intersection of human health and animal health was invaluable to our team. It opened the door to dialogue and innovation on topics of mutual interest," said Nichols. Dr. Nichols is a veterinarian employed by CDC and understands the lapse in knowledge with her public health colleagues.

Andy Bishop, a rancher from Kentucky, appreciated the opportunity to connect with leaders outside of the industry. "The CDC visit was a great opportunity to bring a multi-faceted group of individuals together in a collaborative effort to protect animal agriculture and the American population," said Bishop. NIAA's animal agriculture guests included:

- Allison Phibbs, Public Policy & Government Relations, Merck Animal Health
- Andy Bishop, Board Member, Cattleman's Beef Board
- Brandon Burks, Education Lead, Kentucky Beef Council
- Joe Lowe, Farmer and Rancher, Member, Kentucky Beef Council
- Josh Barnett, Farmer and Rancher, Member, Kentucky Beef Council
- Heather Fowler, DVM, MPH, PhD., Director for Producer and Public Health, National Pork Board
- Dave Moody, Farmer and Rancher, Iowa Select Farms
- Bruce Stewart-Brown, DVM, Sr VP of Technical Services and Innovation, Perdue Foods
- Taylor Spronk, DVM, Pipestone Veterinary
- J.J. Jones, Executive Director, NIAA

As an addition to the great collaboration in Atlanta, NIAA will be hosting a webinar for members and Qualified State Beef Council staff and members featuring Dr. Heather Fowler, Dr. Megin Nichols, and Andy Bishop on October 20 at 2 p.m. central. The webinar will share experiences from farmers, ranchers, and veterinarians, allow for a question-and-answer session and will discuss how we keep the conversation around antibiotic stewardship alive. Cattle producers represented at White House conference

NCBA Chief Executive Officer Colin Woodall attended the White House Conference on Hunger, Nutrition and Health to represent U.S. cattle producers who raise the most sustainable beef in the world and provide a nutritious protein to Americans. The conference, held for the first time in more than 50 years, provided an opportunity for stakeholders to discuss solutions to end hunger and reduce the risk of diet-related diseases by 2030. Agricultural producers have a central role in this conversation as providers of food for the nation. "The White House has prioritized ending hunger and increasing access to nutritious food, and America's cattle producers are ready to help by providing safe, sustainable and nutritious protein to the world," said Woodall. "We will continue to highlight beef's role as an excellent source of protein for all ages, especially for those Americans lacking iron and other essential beef nutrients." NCBA previously has emphasized the importance of beef in a balanced diet and will continue to showcase the innovative, sustainable production practices employed by cattle producers that ensure safe, wholesome, nutritious beef is accessible to all consumers.
