A marketing commentary by Bret Crotts

The Cattle on Feed estimates came in close to expectations, which is very supportive to the market. The On Feed estimate came in at 96%, Place-ments at 96%, and Market-ings at 104%. It is hard to have numbers that are more ideal than lower on feed numbers and higher marketings Cattle futures posted numerous new contract highs last week in both the live cattle and feeder cattle markets. Live cattle have been supported by firming cash trade and the anticipation of a friendly Cattle On Feed report. The feeders were supported by the strength in the live cattle and by the weakness in the corn. It is concerning that we have not seen much strength in the Feeder Index. The March contract is typically the short leg of spreads, and this year is no exception. The March is definitely being kept in check by the stagnant cash market, at least for the time being. If we ever get the indica-tion that the cash market is going to start trending higher, the feeder futures could get explosive.

The grain markets had a terrible end to the week. The corn had been stagnant for weeks, but broke out of the congestion to the downside. Wheat had been grinding higher for quite a while, but as it often does, gave up three weeks of gains in three days. The driving forces for the corn and wheat markets was a combination of high USDA production estimates for

Grass & Grain, February 28, 2023 coming year, Russia the continuing to undercut evervone in the world market, strength in the dollar, and weakness in the stock market. We also had another slow export sales week, and at this time of year, we really need good demand news if we want markets to move higher.

Probably the biggest concern this week was the new multi-month low in the December corn. The December contract had been trading against the 50-day moving average for weeks, but the big acre-age and yield estimates from the Outlook Conference really put a damper on things even though the estimates weren't all that surprising. Unfortunate-ly, there may not be much support in the December corn until we get closer to $5.50. At this point, if you are bullish new crop corn, you will have to wait until the March 31st Prospective Plantings Report and hope that there is a surprisingly low estimate, otherwise it is going to take some bad weather in the Corn Belt to get things moving. Soybeans fared much better than the corn and wheat, but the bean complex still had selling pressure at times. Weather in Argentina is still an issue for both the soybeans and soybean meal markets. Private production estimates continue to shrink, and as long as that is the case, the bears will be a little nervous.

The other reason for relative strength in the soybeans is that export sales still won't dry up. We have been told for weeks that sales would cease, but they haven't. Sales were not huge by any means at 20 million bushels for the week, but that is about 2.5 times what we need to see to meet USDA expec-

Grass & Grain, February 28, 2023 Kansas Hay Market Report

Compared to the last report demand remained good, prices remained steady, trade activity was slow to moderate. Producers state that the hay business has slowed down and are mostly moving previously purchased hay. Finding hay to purchase remains difficult and many are holding on to the hay they have till we get a little closer to spring. According to the U.S. Drought Monitor for February 14th, Kansas just cannot seem to break the grip of the drought. Although a few counties in the northeast have been cleared of any drought or abnormally dry conditions, moderate to exceptional drought stubbornly remains across the southwest. Abnormally dry conditions(D0) increased to 18%, moderate drought (D1)decreased to 8%, severe drought (D2) remained near 12%, extreme drought (D3) decreased to 17%, and exceptional drought (D4) remained near 37%.

Page 15 Grass & Grain, February 28, 2023 Register today for March Wheat Rx Schools in McPherson and Russell

Two Wheat Rx Schools in early March will share the latest research recommendations for intensive wheat management, the value of wheat as part of crop rotations and cover cropping as well as provide updates on wheat breeding pipelines. The educational events scheduled for March 7 in McPherson and March 8 in Russell — are part of a partnership between the Kansas Wheat Commission and K-State Research and Extension to disseminate the latest research recommendations for high-yielding and high-quality wheat to Kansas wheat farmers.

"While we can't control the weather, there are practices and tools that farmers can use to improve yield and quality of their wheat crop," said Aaron Harries, vice president of research and operations for Kansas Wheat. "The Wheat Rx Schools share the latest research findings for suggested management practices to economically and sustainably produce wheat in Kansas."

Both schools will follow similar agendas, Dr. Brett Carver, regents professor of wheat breeding and genetics at Oklahoma State University, will discuss ongoing collaborations between OSU, K-State and the Wheat Marketing Center to improve yield and quality of hard winter wheat in the Great Plains.

Next, Dr. Romulo Lollato, wheat production specialist with K-State Research and Extension, will summarize long-term studies on wheat management in Kansas and the surrounding region. He will also discuss differing views on the intensive management of wheat from productivity, economic, environmental and human perspectives.

Then, Luana Simão, a K-State doctoral student, will review the benefits of including wheat in a crop rotation, including wheat residue management for weed suppression and soil water conservation.

Finally, Carlos Bonini Pires, a K-State doctoral student, will review CASH — cover crops, agronomy and soil health — including what benefits summer and winter cover crops bring to a cropping system and how to utilize precision cover cropping.

At the March 7 McPherson event, E.G. Herl, vice president-grain and logistics, and Reuben McLean, senior director of quality and regulatory from Grain Craft will provide an industry perspective on wheat quality and discuss how growers can capture value of high-quality grain.

During the March 8 Russell Wheat Rx School, the industry perspective will be provided by Pure-Field Ingredients, the largest domestic supplier of wheat protein in the United States. Attendees will hear how PureField Ingredients is continuing to research how to better secure wheat supplies by combining contracts for farmers, agreements with cooperatives and specific agronomic practices to hopefully produce the highest quality wheat possible.

"Wheat producers put considerable thought into their decisions throughout the growing season that impact that final harvest," Harries said. "Our goal is to share the latest research, funded in part by farmers' investments through their checkoff dollars, to help maximize profitability through management."

Registration for either

BIF Annual Symposium. Drovers sponsors the Seedstock and Commercial Producer of the Year Award.

BIF also offers two student-focused award programs. The annual Frank Baker/Larry Cundiff Beef Improvement Essay Contest for graduate students provides an opportunity to recognize outstanding student research and competitive writing in honor of Frank Baker and Larry Cundiff

Each year, winning essays are selected and published in the annual BIF Research Symposium and Annual Meeting Proceedings. Each winning author will receive a $1,000 scholarship.

The Roy A. Wallace Memorial Scholarship was established to encourage young men and women interested in beef improvement to pursue those interests as Wallace did, with dedication and passion. Two $1,250 scholarships are awarded each year, one to an undergraduate and the other to a graduate student. Criteria for selection include a demonstrated commitment serving the beef cattle industry, a passion for the areas of beef breeding, genetics and reproduction, academic performance and personal character.

The Roy A. Wallace Beef Improvement Federation (BIF) Memorial Fund was established by Select Sires to honor the life and career of Roy Wallace. Wallace, who worked for Select Sires for 40 years, served as vice president of beef programs and devoted his life to the improvement of beef cattle. He became involved with BIF in its infancy and was the only person to attend the first 40 BIF conventions. He loved what BIF stands for — bringing together purebred and commercial cattle breeders, academia and breed associations, all committed to improving beef cattle.

Information about the Frank Baker/Larry Cundiff Essay Contest and Roy A. Wallace Memorial Scholarship are posted to the BIF website "Award Forms" page under the "Resource Center" tab. For more information about either program, contact Megan Rolf, committee chairperson, at megrolf@ksu.edu.

All 2023 award winners will be recognized at the 2023 BIF Research Symposium and Convention July 3-7 in Calgary, Alberta, Canada. For more information about BIF, visit Beefimprovement.org.

Grass & Grain, February 28, 2023 Page 19 Jim Gerrish to present Grazing Management to Extend the Grazing Season Roadshow workshops March 13-18

Grazing specialist Jim Gerrish, well-known rancher, researcher, grazing educator and co-founder of the Missouri grazing school, returns to Kansas to offer six different days of grazing education topics to help producers make better choices of their pasture and grazing opportunities. This workshop is tailored for livestock producers specifically. It will focus on improving soil health and grazing practices to protect the environment and improve water quality and farm/ranch profitability. When asked why pro-ducers should attend this workshop, Gerrish said, "More than ever, producers need to be in control of their operation. Don't leave the critical management decisions up to the animals. They don't care whether you make a dime or not. Your job is to create a ranch environment where the cow, ewe or nanny can be the best performing animal that she can be! The rancher's job is to manage the business side of the ranch and not try to do the animal's job for them. Each farm or ranch has unique resources, the key is to match grazing animals to those forage resources. Better management of forage resources will create increased production.'

The first five workshops, March 13-17, 2023 in various communities, will focus on grazing cover crops and alternative forages to extend the grazing season through the fall and winter months, keeping livestock out of confined feeding areas. Jim will also discuss the economic advantages of grazing cover crops and how to make every drop of water count. These workshops will encourage and assist producers in adopting and implementing soil health practices resulting in improved water quality in Kansas watersheds. Producers will better understand how improved soil health contributes to financial stability and farm resilience by mediating the effects of climate, flooding and drought, while reducing loss of sediment and nutrients through reduced runoff. Producers will better understand grazing systems and soil health in pasture/ cover crop settings. Topics include soil science, how to build soil, plant phys-iology, benefits of cover crops/forage diversity, grazing systems and managing costs. Diverse mixes of cover crops and forages reduce erosion, protect water quality, improve soil health, crop and animal performance and extend the grazing season. Winter feeding practices to improve soil health, animal health and performance. Healthy soil produces healthier plants, animals and humans.

March 18, 2023 will be the Kansas Graziers Winter Conference in Emporia. Theme for the day is "Surviving the Drought and Managing Tough Times." Topics will in-Tough and clude how to make every drop of water count, ways to survive the drought, extending the grazing season with alternative forages, cover crops and crop residue and managing cow costs for economic return. This workshop will offer ways to better manage resources to help address the two leading costs to cow/calf producers which are feed costs and summer pasture.

Ranchers and producers across the state are invited to attend these workshops to learn ways to provide more forage for their livestock and let them work for the ranch. There is no charge for these workshops and lunch will be provided. Jim has a wealth of information to share with the audience at each location. Topics for the first five workshops will be the same. The 2023 Winter Grazing Conference is the last day in Emporia.

Grass & Grain, February 28, 2023 Page 21 Caterpillar sponsors competition to encourage and celebrate future welders

By Donna Sullivan, Editor On March 1 the North Central Kansas Technical College in Beloit will draw budding welders from other tech schools in Kansas and Nebraska for a welding competition. Two days later, high school students from around the state will compete.

For the 17th year, Caterpillar in Wamego is a sponsor of the event, this year donating more than 5500 pounds of steel. "We have donated more than 38,000 pounds of steel since we started the relationship," said Derek Larimore, manufacturing engineering manager. "This year's 5500 pounds is about what a half-ton pickup weighs.

"This is a very natural fit for Caterpillar to support this competition," said Adam Mize, facility manager. "We currently employ some of the best welders in the state of Kansas, so supporting and encouraging the next generation of welders is a natural fit for us."

Larimore says that one of the ideal situations the competition creates for them at Caterpillar is the opportunity to see the upand-coming talent at work.

Mize added that while they do get a positive downstream impact from the competition, that's not the primary reason they get behind it. "We don't support it simply for the recruiting aspect, but because we believe in welding as a career choice and to celebrate those who weld," he said. "A welding competition might not be as flashy as a slam dunk contest, but there are a lot more people with great careers in welding today than there are in dunking basketballs."

Larimore himself started at Caterpillar as a welder a little over sixteen years ago. "So my personal story within Caterpillar is I've been able to grow into what I am now, but it's that welding background that allowed me to get to where I'm at." The Caterpillar facility in Wamego builds more than 50.000 work tools and attachments for Caterpillar machines. "If it attaches to a Caterpillar machine and touches the dirt, we probably built it," Mize stated.

Anyone interested in a welding position at Caterpillar can get more information at caterpillar.com/ Wamego.

"Being a welder at Caterpillar, you get the opportunity to build the products our customers are using to build a better world," Mize concluded. "What we're welding today will be used to build the roads, schools and hospitals that build a better world."

(CRP) signup meetings announced

CRP has been and continues to be a great fit for farmers with less productive or marginal cropland. helping them re-establish valuable land cover to help improve water quality, prevent soil erosion, and support wildlife habitat. In particular, enrolling the least productive small acreages in CRP benefits the remining cropland with a more efficient use of crop inputs and increases in yield APH.

Nationwide, there are 23 million acres enrolled in CRP, with 1.9 million set to expire this year. In Kansas there 1.836.705 acres enrolled in CRP with 131,852 of those acres set to expire this fall. At the national level, USDA is aiming to reach the 27-million-acre cap statutorily set for fiscal year 2023. Producer Meetings

Public meetings will be held so landowners and operators can learn more about the CRP signup. Restaurant options for meals are available in the towns at both locations. Beattie, Kansas

Marysville, Kansas March 23rd @ 7:30 PM City Hall 209 N 8th Street

How to Sign Up Landowners and producers interested in CRP should contact their local USDA Service Center to learn more or to apply for the program before the deadline. The Marysville office can be contacted by calling 785-562-5343.

NCBA announces lawsuit against Biden administration WOTUS rule

The National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) and 16 other stakeholders filed a lawsuit against the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) challenging the Biden administration's final "Waters of the U.S." (WOTUS) rule.

NCBA previously filed technical comments on this rule, highlighting the importance of maintaining agricultural exclusions for small, isolated and temporary water features, like ephemeral streams that flow only during limited periods of rainfall but remain dry most of the year. According to the organization, regulating these features at the federal level under the Clean Water Act disrupts normal agricultural operations and interferes with cattle producers' abilities to make improvements to their land.

Last year. over 1.700 individual cattle producers sent messages to the EPA opposing the administration's overly broad definition of WOTUS. Producers once again shared their views with the EPA at an agency roundtable last June. However, EPA failed to incorporate the cattle industry's recommendations, and NCBA will be suing to stop this rule from harming cattle producers.

"The rule removes longstanding, bipartisan exclusions for small and isolated water features on farms and ranches and adds to the regulatory burden cattle producers are facing under this administration," said NCBA chief counsel Mary-Thomas Hart. "We look forward to challenging this rule in court and ensuring that cattle producers are treated fairly under the law."

In addition to the ag stakeholders' lawsuit, Texas Attorney General Paxton also filed a lawsuit to defend Texans from the unlawful rule, which would assert federal control over Texas land.

"Legal action is necessary to curtail this administration's continued intrusion into the rights of Texans and our ability to control our own natural resources," Paxton said. "I'm proud to file this lawsuit challenging Biden's WOTUS rule and remain committed to pushing back against the Biden

New research finding: transmissibility of African swine fever virus

Pork Checkoff investments partially funded a study looking at transmission of the African swine fever virus (ASFv) through artificial insemination (AI). The study included four boars, 14 gilts and one ASFv strain and demonstrated clear evidence the virus can be transferred from boar studs to recipient gilts through AI.

Here's what happened in the study:

The virus was found in semen samples as early as two days after inoculation

Seven of 14 gilts tested ASFv positive by seven days post-insemination; all 14 gilts were ASFv positive by 35 days post-insemination

12 out of 13 preg-٠ nant gilts aborted or resorbed at the onset of fever

Early detection of infected boars is critical. Infection of a boar stud presents the risk of rapidly and widely distributing ASFv within or between countries.

Industry partners worldwide continue investigating transmission of this virus to help us prevent and prepare. This research fills an important gap in understanding about ASF that will help us manage the disease should it ever get to the U.S.

Still time to respond to the 2022 Census of Agriculture

Farmers and ranchers still have time to be counted in the 2022 Census of Agriculture, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS). Although the deadline for submitting the ag census has just passed, NASS will continue to accept completed census questionnaires through the spring to ensure all farmers and ranchers take advantage of the opportunity to be represented in the widely used data.

"We thank everyone who has completed their census to date. Since data collection began last fall, over a million ag census recipients across the country have returned their questionnaires, ensuring their operations and communities are represented," said NASS administrator Hubert Hamer. "We want all producers to use their voices to help shape the future of American agriculture. Census data inform decisions about policy, farm and conservation programs, infrastructure and rural development, research, education, and more. The stronger the response, the stronger the data. It's not too late for farmers to be heard through the ag census, which occurs only once every five years."

NASS will continue to follow up with producers through the spring with mailings, phone calls, and personal visits. Farmers and ranchers are encouraged to complete their ag census either online at agcounts.usda.gov or by mail as soon as possible. The online questionnaire is accessible on desktop, laptop, and other mobile devices.

Federal law under Title 7 USC 2204(g) Public Law 105-113 mandates that everyone who received the 2022 Census of Agriculture questionnaire complete and return it. even if they are not currently farming. The same law requires
